Rebels Bomb, Fire Bilbao, Claim Hills Above City

Machine Gun Central Streets From Air in Hour's Raid.

Expect to Reach Outskirts Today

British Ship Ready to Evacuate Officials if Defense Falls.

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, June 12.—Insurgent fliers heavily bombed and machine gunned the center of Bilbao tonight for an hour.

Details of casualties were not available immediately but it was believed a number of persons were killed. Many houses were destroyed by fire.

Pedestrians raced through the streets as the raiders, sweeping low, poured streams of lead from their machine guns and dropped scores of bombs.

Observers said they identified the airplanes as Junkers and Heinkels (German). The raid took place in the early evening.

While the city itself was bombed, Basque soldiers struggled desperately to save their beseiged capital from the insurgent troops.

Claim Clear Way to City.

The insurgents asserted Gen. Fidel Davila's advancing armies had opened a clear way to Bilbao after crushing Basque resistance with terrific artillery and aerial bombardments.

They declared Davila's troops gained control of heights surrounding the Basque capital and began machine gunning streets.

(Diplomatic quarters at St. Jean de Luz, France, declared tonight a British destroyer was ready to speed under forced draft to Bilbao to evacuate officials of the Basque republic if the city falls within the next few days. Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco is reported to have notified the Basque president, Jose Antonio de Aguirre, and his ministers that they would be shot on sight when insurgent troops enter the besieged city.)

The insurgent high command reported crisply, "The army is advancing methodically."

It said the Basques retreated from their famous "iron ring" system of fortifications, leaving the trenches full of dead and wounded.

Insurgent infantry under Davila's lieutenants, it reported, crept up upon the defenders' positions under the curtain of a heavy barrage and forced them to retire.

"The insurgents have before them now no organized line capable of halting the march into Bilbao," an insurgent statement said.

10,000 Shells Fall in Hills.

The fighting was so violent that a high Spanish government officer who recently arrived here from the south said:

"I never saw anything like this on the Madrid front."

(Insurgent Gen. Quiepo de Llano, broadcasting from Seville, said the insurgents probably would reach the outskirts of Bilbao tomorrow when, he asserted, the city either would surrender or be besieged closely.

(He declared the insurgents would not fight in the streets of the Basque capital, but would remain on surrounding heights until the city surrendered. He said it would remain in Basque hands three days longer at the most.)

It was estimated here that as high as 10,000 shells must have fallen along a 3-mile ridge of mountains during the day.

They fell at a rate of ten a minute for five hours during the morning, swelling to an average of 30 a minute in the afternoon and at one time reached a peak of one a second.

Heavy fighting was reported continuing at 10 p. m. tonight (5 p. m., Eastern standard time).

Advices from outside the city proper indicated that hardly a vil-

Invincible Throughout History, Basque Capital Shouts Defiance

Defenders Recall Sieges That Failed, and Take Heart Amid Drone of Rebel Planes; Food Available From British Ships.

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, June 12.—Flags flapping along Bilbao's flaming waterfront today tossed up with every puff of the beseiged Basque capital's single word of defiance—"invincible!"

The word is shouted everywhere. It shines on the brass buttons of Bilbao's soldiers. It embroiders her banners. Street cars bear it with the city seal. It appears on every stamp used in the Province of Vizcaya.

And it's backed by the truth of history.

Bilbao has often been besieged but never captured. Red-bereted Carlists tried to take it in 1836 and failed. They tried again in 1874 and failed again. And now their grandsons, equipped with ingenious modern arms, are at the city line again.

A squad of insurgent planes bombed Bilbao's suburbs this morn-

Soviet Executes 8 Army Chiefs For 'Nazi Plot'

Scheme Hinted to Turn Rich Ukraine Over to Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 12.—The government announced today that Marshal Michail Nitukhacevsky and seven generals, condemned to death for treason, had been executed.

They died before a firing squad by judgment of the military tribunal of the supreme court, which declared them guilty of serving the military intelligence service of an "unfriendly" foreign power.

That power was unnamed, but unmistakable indications were the leaders of the Soviet Union believed it was Germany.

Most of Moscow was convinced the army leaders were condemned for a huge plot to strip the Soviet Union of its western provinces and give them to Germany.

The Kremlin's first moves after the supreme court had sentenced the officers were aimed to bolster the defense of its frontiers nearest Germany.

Chief attention was devoted to the huge garrisons in White Russia and

7 A.F.G.E. Units Ouster Is Asked By Committee

Permanent Suspension Is Urged After All-Day Closed Session.

The seven lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes that defied the national office by waging an independent campaign against pending economy measures in Congress were recommended for permanent suspension yesterday by the special investigating committee called here by the A. F. G. E. Executive Council.

After an all-day session behind locked doors, the investigating committee—which early in the day was walked out on by the lodges up for trial—announced formally:

"On the basis of evidence adduced, the committee is of the unanimous opinion that lodges 8, 12, 31, 58, 125, 139 and 206 are individually and collectively guilty of the charges preferred against them. . . . The committee recommends to the National Executive Council that, in the best interests of the A. F. G. E. the said National Executive Council embody in its annual report to the sixth annual convention the recommendation for the permanent suspension of the lodges."

But, in a concluding paragraph of the statement, the committee left open the way for a return to the fold of such members of the seven lodges as wish to remain true to the national organization. "Individual members of the seven suspended lodges who signify a desire to continue their membership in the A. F. G. E., in conformity with their obligations as members of the Federation, who heretofore have not been in accord with the actions of the above named lodges * * * will be afforded an opportunity to continue their membership in the A. F. G. E." the statement said.

There was not much fluster on the second floor of the Hamilton Hotel yesterday morning when the seven lodges walked out on the committee.

Senate Group Votes 40-60 WPA Split

Full Committee Approves Plan for Localities to Contribute.

Hopkins Plea Overridden; Bill May Go to Floor Tomorrow.

By Robert C. Albright.

Disregarding a two-hour appeal by Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday voted to unload on States, cities and counties two-fifths of the cost of local relief projects.

It was the first step by Congress toward taking the Government out of the relief business. By a vote of 13 to 10, the full committee approved the proposal of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, that communities put up 40 per cent on local, non-Federal projects, where able.

Meanwhile Hopkins, in an address prepared for the graduating class of Babson Institute for Business Executives at Wellesley, Mass., warned against dismantling of WPA before the unemployed are absorbed.

Due to Hopkins' call to the Capitol, the address was delivered by his WPA deputy, Aubrey Williams. Hopkins wrote that abandonment of the WPA program "will save business a few pennies in taxes, but for every penny saved from Uncle Sam it will have to give dollars to future depressions."

The Byrnes 40 per cent plan previously had been approved by a sub-committee, but headed into stiff opposition and attempts to cut it down in the full group. Yesterday morning Hopkins was called in to voice a last-minute protest.

Vote on Bill Delayed.

He was overridden, but the controversy consumed so much time that a final vote on the $1,500,000,000 relief bill went over until tomorrow. The measure will go to the Senate floor tomorrow or Tuesday, when an Administration effort will be made to strike out or modify the Byrnes proviso.

Associated Press dispatches from Boston quoted Williams, Hopkins' relief assistant, as saying between 425,000 and 450,000 workers will be dropped from relief rolls "within two or three months."

Hopkins already had informed Congressional officials that more than 500,000 will have to go off relief even if the full $1,500,000,000 fund is approved. He plans to keep rolls at between 1,600,000 and 1,700,000.

Byrnes, wiry little South Carolinian, usually aligned on the Administration side in policy fights, set out to cut down on expenditures several weeks ago, and made relief his first target, despite Hopkins' opposition and no encouragement from the White House.

Foresees Larger "Net."

His interest in the problem led Vice President Garner on Friday to name him head of a special Senate committee to investigate unemployment and relief and recommend corrective steps to the next Congress.

Vainly, Byrnes sought in the subcommittee to trim $500,000,000 of 1938 relief costs, but his 40 per cent "sharing" amendment stuck. He said yesterday he will abandon his fight to reduce the relief appropriation if communities are required to bear 40 per cent of the burden.

One result, he said yesterday, may be that a larger "net" will be available for relief—possibly more than $2,000,000,000—and further cuts may not be needed in relief rolls. He thinks also that local communities may not make as many de-

2 D. C. Fliers Hurt In Airport Mishap

Two Washington fliers were injured early last night while making a landing at Congressional Airport on the Rockville pike.

They were Elmer J. De Vore, 2715 Fourteenth street northwest, and Donald Smith, of Calvert street. Both are employed on a Washington newspaper.

At Georgetown Hospital, physicians said Smith had a broken leg and De Vore was cut and bruised.

Observers reported the men were attempting to land their plane when they were forced to change their course suddenly because another plane also was landing.

The crash occurred shortly after 7 o'clock. Damage to the plane, a single-engine cabin ship, was not determined.

Mrs. Parsons Feared Slain By Kidnapers

Contact Rumors Denied; Search of Woods Is Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 12.—Alarmed by the absence of any overtures for ransom, Long Island police tonight expressed fear that the missing Mrs. Alice McDonell Parsons had been slain by her abductors.

Inspector Francis X. McGarvey, of the State troopers ordered a thorough search of the wooded areas surrounding the farm from which Mrs. Parsons disappeared Wednesday noon.

Suffolk County authorities, chafing under the passage of 72 hours without any further word from the writer of a $25,000 ransom note found at the scene, asked Scoutmaster Allen Land to muster his troop of 35 Boy Scouts tomorrow to aid in the search.

An effort was made to cover the ground Thursday with bloodhounds, but a heavy rainfall ruined any chances of picking up a scent.

Rumors were current that a $50,000 ransom demand had been made by telephone late today, that Richardson Pratt, wealthy relative of Mrs. Parsons, had received threat notes, and that the authors of the ransom note had been contacted, but all the reports were officially denied or remained unconfirmed.

Lacking any tangible clews, investigators turned their attention on a 36-year-old naturalized Russian woman who had lived on the Parsons' squab farm with her 11-year-old son since 1931.

Reciprocal Wills.

She was Mrs. Anna Kupryanova, who adopted the name Parsons when she became a citizen, but whose status in the household has been variously described as companion and servant.

The New York World Telegram today quoted Assistant District Attorney Harry C. Brenner as saying that Mrs. Parsons and Mrs. Kupryanova had drawn up reciprocal wills last year naming each other beneficiary.

Brenner said the wills, executed in April, 1936, were in the possession of a Brooklyn law firm.

He declined to speculate on what significance, if any, this development might have on the search for Mrs. Parsons.

The World Telegram also said a report that blackmailers had been preying unsuccessfully on Mrs. Parsons was under investigation.

Federal agents questioned Mrs. Kupryanova and her third husband, Alex Kupryanoff, for several hours last night in the Bay Shore barracks of the State police.

Neither Detained.

Kupryanoff, who was found living in a Brooklyn rooming house, was quoted by Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Arata as saying he married Mrs. Kupryanova in Europe prior to 1920 and divorced her in 1928. She had not mentioned him in previous accounts of her history, but last night she said he was the father of her son, a statement which he termed impossible. Previously she had said the boy's father was a British economist named Sanler whom she had married in England and who was killed in an automobile accident in 1930.

Neither was detained after the questioning, which ended at 4 a. m., although as a matter of convenience the former husband decided to sleep in the police barracks. Mrs. Kupryanova was taken back to the Parsons' farm. Investigators said she might be questioned further at some other time.

Kupryanoff and his wife spell their names differently because in Russia, from which the names are derived, a difference is made in name endings according to the sex of the bearer.

Alice Whitney, Girl Companion Hurt in Crash

Miss Alice Whitney, daughter of Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, and Mrs. Whitney, of Far Hills, N. J., and Miss Constance Shepard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Shepard, of New York, both students at the fashionable Foxcroft School, at Middleburg, Va., were injured late yesterday in an automobile collision near Chantilly, Va.

Both girls were brought to Washington by Miss Betty Couzens, daughter of the late Senator James Couzens, of Michigan.

At Emergency Hospital physicians said Miss Shepard had a possible skull fracture, while Miss Whitney was cut and bruised. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, in Washington on a visit, went immediately to the hospital to see their daughter.

Occupants of the other car were Mr. and Mrs. E. Arnold, of McLean, Va. At Emergency Hospital it was found Mrs. Arnold had suffered a fractured thigh, while her husband, who is in the Ordnance Department here, has a broken forearm.

Detective Cites 10 Reasons for Keene Suicide

Official Report Filed With Prosecutor Gives Only One for Murder.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Crisfield, Md., June 12.—Ten reasons were cited here tonight in an official report by Detective Sergt. Marlin Brubaker as to why Charles F. Keene, 63-year-old Washington real estate man, may have committed suicide on the Norfolk and Washington night boat, and only one as to why he may have been murdered—robbery.

The official report by Sergt. Brubaker, made to F. Kirk Madrix, State's attorney for Somerset County, did not express any opinion, but it did scout the theory that robbery was the motive which may have impelled murder. Keene died just one month ago today. On the morning of May 13 his cabin on the boat was found empty when a stewardess visited it. His room seemed to have been the scene of a struggle.

Brief Case Keene's.

Sergt. Brubaker revealed for the first time that Charles Osborne, jewel dealer, who had offices with Keene in the Union Trust Building, had identified the brief case in the mystery as Keene's own. This brief case was found tied around Keene's neck when the body was found floating in Chesapeake Bay on May 31. In the brief case were an automobile jack, a mechanic's hammer, a tire iron and a number of less weighty articles.

Heretofore the brief case has been the subject of considerable mystery, and those who have subscribed to the murder theory have insisted that unless it was tied up with Keene, no case could be made for the suicide theory.

Here are the reasons which Sergt. Brubaker listed as pointing to suicide in the case:

1. He was in bad financial straits.
2. He was unhappy.
3. In the presence of those close to him, he had threatened to commit suicide.

Appeared Depressed.

4. The day that he took the Norfolk boat, he appeared to be much depressed.
5. His associate, Osborne, identified the brief case as his, and also the mesh bag and the tea strainer, which were found within the brief case. This mesh bag and the tea strainer were bequeathed to Keene by his sister, Florence Robins Keene, who died in 1934.
6. Keene purchased a one-way ticket on his trip to Norfolk. Sergt. Brubaker thought this was very significant.
7. Keene said he was going to Norfolk to adjust a real estate deal. Brubaker said nobody had come forward and admitted having any appointment with Keene or any connection with such a deal.
8. Keene told his wife on the night he was leaving that it would be the last time he would wear his hat. His wife had asked him to wear a better one.
9. James H. Starkey, a friend of Keene's for 26 years, ran into him on the boat. He told Brubaker that Keene seemed to resent his presence and he lacked his usual

Tax Bill Forces Arm for Triple Fight in House

Passage Tomorrow May Be Blocked by Exemption Realty Levy Groups.

By James D. Secrest.

Deserted even by some of their colleagues on the House District Committee, members of the Kennedy sub-committee yesterday were preparing to defend the omnibus District tax bill from a three-flank attack on the House floor Monday.

The assaults, it appeared, will come from the following quarters:

Members who wish to avoid the income tax and to protect their secretaries and constituents in the Federal service in Washington.

Proponents of a higher real estate tax as a substitute for the income and business privilege levies.

Members, prompted by local lobbyist, who wish to sabotage the entire bill by recommitting it and thus force real estate to bear the entire $7,500,000 revenue burden.

The first two groups will try to amend the bill, it is expected, but, failing in this, they may join the third group in an attempt to scuttle it.

Because of refusal by House leaders to give the District Committee a special rule, it is not unlikely that filibusters will prevent the subcommittee from pushing through the bill during the afternoon. Such a delay would hold up the legislation for another two weeks, or until June 28, just two days before the end of the fiscal year.

Informed of threats of members to have the bill recommitted for further hearings, Chairman Kennedy said:

"We have given everyone ample opportunity to be heard. Everyone

Robber Who Beat Paymaster Halted By Flying Tackle

A flying tackle by George Snead, 21, of 2231 I street northwest, last night stopped the getaway of one of two colored men after Benjamin H. Greenstreet, 50, of 905 Twenty-second street northwest, had been beaten and robbed.

According to police, Greenstreet, a paymaster for a chain of grocery stores, was accosted in front of his home by two colored men. One grabbed an empty satchel under his arm, mistaken for a pay roll; Greenstreet was hit over the head, and later ten stitches were taken at Emergency Hospital.

Snead, standing at Twenty-second and I streets, chased one of two colored men and caught up with him after a block. Police arrested the man, who said he was James Cabenits, 23, of 76 Q street northwest. He gave the name of his companion to police. Police were still searching for him late last night.

C. I. O. Asks Governors to Request Conference With President.

Bloodshed Feared At Monroe Rally

Gov. Davey to Make Final Plea for Steel Peace on Tuesday.

On the Labor Front.

Michigan mobilized 300 National Guardsmen and 100 State police to prevent renewed violence in the Monroe sector of the steel strike during a "gigantic mass meeting" called today by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio may ask President Roosevelt to intervene in the strike if the conference with company officials and C. I. O. leaders Tuesday fails to produce an agreement.

C. I. O. leaders asked Governors of six other States affected by the strike to make similar requests to the President.

The Senate investigation into alleged "irregularities" in the steel strike will be closely watched for evidence on which Federal prosecution could be based, it was learned.

Troops Mobilize.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 12.—Michigan mobilized 300 National Guardsmen and 100 State police tonight to prevent renewed violence in the Monroe sector of the spreading steel strike that already affects more than 75,000 workers.

The walk out, by which the Steel Workers Organizing Committee seeks signed bargaining contracts, extended for the first time to a unit of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation at Johnstown, Pa.

An official of the S. W. O. C. said there was "every possibility" it would spread to all plants of the corporation, second largest producer of steel, which employes 80,000 men.

Michigan's Gov. Frank Murphy, who mediated in automobile strikes last winter, ordered armed forces to Monroe after the Committee for Industrial Organization announced a "gigantic mass meeting" there tomorrow to protest a gas attack that broke a steel workers' picket line. The Monroe City Commission reported "danger of bloodshed is imminent."

Emphasizing that "nobody has asked for" martial law, Murphy said the troop concentration was "to insure a peaceable assembly and to protect the citizens of Monroe."

Murphy said Homer Martin, president of the C. I. O.-affiliated United Automobile Workers, who issued a call to union members in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana to attend the Monroe meeting, had agreed to "discourage" out-of-State members from doing so.

Martin, who left a conference with the Governor here before Murphy ordered the troops mobilized, said in Indiana, where he went to address a meeting at Muncie, that it never occurred to him to "discourage" Indiana and Ohio members from attending, and that he had not

Ferry to Transport Children Across Channel To Potomac Park Pool, Saving Carfare, Time

Free ferry service will be furnished all summer across Washington Channel to thousands of youngsters in southwest and southeast Washington who want to go swimming in the East Potomac Park pool.

Announcement of this service, which will eliminate much tiresome travel and carfare expense, was made yesterday by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Arrangements were made through the co-operation of the police, the parks service and a concessionaire.

A police boat has been made available by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, as well as the department's wharf at M and Water streets southwest.

D. G. Leoffler, who operates the East Potomac pool and golf course, under contract with the parks office and the Welfare and Recreational Association, will equip the boat with a motor and furnish the crew.

The "Channelville Ferry" will begin service some time next week, upon the closing of public schools for the summer, and frequent trips will be made each week day beginning at 8:30 a. m. Swimming is free at the new pool from 9 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., except Saturdays and Sundays.

Finnan, who made the arrangements, pointed out that the pool, a PWA project which was opened June 5, is much closer to residential areas than the one formerly located in the monument grounds which it replaced.

"Only the Washington Channel separates East Potomac Park from the heavily populated districts in southwest and southeast Washington and the establishment of a ferry service across the channel removes

Army Demands Right to Drink As Much Strong Beer as Navy

Question: If a Navy man, or Marine, can have his beer, why can't an Army man?

So asks Secretary of War Woodring in a letter sent to the chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, recommending repeal of a 1901 statute forbidding the "sale or distribution of beer, wine or intoxicating beverages" on Army premises.

There is no reference to the Navy in the 36-year-old law, whose repeal is embodied in a bill sponsored by Representative John H. Costello (Democrat), of California.

The Army, the Secretary stated in his letter to Representative Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, feels the whole situation is unfair. In fact—although the Secretary did not admit it—the Army is getting ready to foam at the mouth at the lack of "drinking parity" with the other branches of the service.

The Army is quite able to foam at the mouth, too, as 3.2 beer has been sold on post exchanges and in officers' clubs where State laws permitted ever since Congress legalized the milder beverage.

Elks' Program Opens Tribute For Flag Today

G. A. R., Other Patriotic Groups to Mark 160th Birthday Tomorrow.

The 160th birthday of Old Glory will be observed throughout Washington today and tomorrow. It was June 14, 1777, that the Continental Congress officially adopted the flag made by Betsy Ross from George Washington's sketch. The first Flag Day was held in 1897.

Today's tribute to the national emblem will be paid by Washington Elks at the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds at 3 p. m., with Representative Matthew J. Merritt, of New York, as principal speaker.

The Elks' Boys Band will give an hour's concert preceding the exercises. A feature of the program will be a tableau, "The History of the Flag," for which Past Exalted Ruler John D. Fitzgerald will be the narrator.

In case of rain, the ceremony will be held in the Elks' Club auditorium at 8 p. m.

G. A. R. to Celebrate.

The chief program tomorrow will be presented at 7:30 p. m. at the east front of the Capitol, under auspices of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, and the woman's relief corps. Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, director general of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, will speak.

Following a half-hour concert by the United States Navy Band, led by Alexander Morris 2d, a number of patriotic organizations will participate in a march of the colors. Among them will be the Women's Relief Corps, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Ladies of the G. A. R., Auxiliary to Sons of Union Veterans, Gold Star Mothers, Spanish War Veteran Auxiliaries, American War Mothers, American Legion Auxiliaries and Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliaries.

The address of welcome will be given by John M. Kline, department commander of the G. A. R. The Rev. John C. Palmer will deliver the invocation. The benediction will be given by the Rev. Abram Simon.

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War will act as ushers.

To Display Huge Flag.

A flag whose stars measure 6 by 6 feet, believed to be the largest United States flag in existence, will be displayed on the bleachers of Griffith Stadium, from 1 p. m. to 7 p. m. tomorrow.

The property of the John L. Burnett Council, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, the flag is 102 feet by 185 feet and weighs 422 pounds.

An appeal for proper display of the flag tomorrow has been issued by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Common errors which the organization points out include the use of the flag for bunting or drapery, the display of the Stars and Stripes beneath some other emblem and the display of some other flag to the right of the American flag in a parade.

'Prospective Cop' Directs Traffic—For Five Minutes

Because he said he had been promised a job on the police force, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, colored, 34, began to direct traffic at Seventeenth and U streets northwest Thursday.

His directing, however, lasted only about five minutes before he was booked at the Third Precinct on an intoxication charge. He said he lives at 2332 Champlain street northwest.

Yesterday he was arraigned before Police Court Judge John P. McMahon, who imposed a $10 fine.

Nazis Threaten To Jail Owners Of Sweat Shops

Must Value Men Above Machines; Sea Cruises Offered Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Hamburg, Germany, June 12.—Spokesmen for the Nazi regime's labor policies today promised Far Eastern tours to the 1940 Olympic games for thousands of deserving workers and concentration camps for employers that "rate machines higher than men."

Thunderous applause greeted these announcements, made to a convention of the "power through joy" labor-recreation organization, by Dr. Robert Ley, Nazi chief who executes Adolf Hitler's labor policies, and Ley's assistant, Horst Dresseler Andres.

Andres indicated thousands of labor's representatives would be sent on a fleet of holiday passenger liners through the Suez Canal to Japan in the summer of 1940, when the Olympic games are to be held in Tokyo. Moreover, Mediterranean cruises for workers will begin next winter, he said.

It was Ley himself who threatened employers with concentration camps. He said:

"We can't promise the German workers paradise on earth because there is no such thing, but we want to make everybody happy and give him strength and ability to master the manifold tasks of the peaceful work which national socialism has set for itself."

Ley warned all employers:

"The men in our factories are our most valuable goods. Those employers who dare to rate machines higher than men will be given plenty of opportunity to study a contrary opinion in concentration camps."

He urged more adequate State park organizations and said, "* * * it is now apparent the co-operation of the National Park Service with the State park authorities must * * * be contingent upon the extent of responsibility assumed by the States."

Rent Shooting Case Is Closed As Tenant Dies

Moore Death Pronounced Suicide; Landlord Is Recovering.

The shooting case in Boulevard Heights, Md., was marked "closed" by Prince Georges County police yesterday when John W. Moore, 37-year-old World War veteran accused of attempting to kill his landlord, died in Casualty Hospital of self-inflicted shot-gun wounds.

A certificate of suicide was issued in Moore's death by Acting Coroner J. R. Creecy, of Suitland.

The shooting occurred Friday afternoon. According to police, Moore shot Charles E. Cornwell, 58-year-old landlord because his rent was to be raised from $20 to $25 a month.

Suffering from minor scalp wounds Cornwell was recovering yesterday.

When police attempted to arrest Moore, he barricaded his home and shot himself in the heart. At Casualty Hospital, he lived until yesterday morning despite the seriousness of his wound.

Moore was a carpenter, but had been unemployed for several months, his wife told police. Funeral services were being arranged yesterday.

J. F. Butts Offers Vacationists' Hints

A few hints to vacationists in anticipation of the summer holiday period were issued yesterday by J. Frank Butts, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Inspection. "The health factor of a carefully planned vacation should not be subordinated to the high tension of excitement and debilitating pleasures," Butts warns.

Travelers should not overexert themselves to maintain a schedule, he said. Before drinking water in an unfamiliar region, make sure of its source, he suggests.

The tourist should not be beguiled by the attractive appearance of a roadside eating place but should investigate the food, said Mr. Butts. At the same time the tourist should be careful in his disposition of waste and refuse.

...ective Cites 10 Reasons for Keene Suicide

Official Report Filed With Prosecutor Gives Only One for Murder.

cordiality and appeared to be preoccupied.

10. Keene sold his automobile last February for $100, but told his wife that it had been wrecked on a nearby Maryland road. To Sergt. Brubacher this meant (1) that Keene was desperately in need of money and (2) that his family didn't know as much about him as it thought.

Several Puzzling Points.

In making his report, Sergt. Brubaker admitted he could not account for the automobile jack, the mechanic's hammer and the tire iron which were found in the brief case tied to Keene's neck. He also revealed that the .32-caliber pistol which had been willed to Keene by his sister was not the gun which took Keene's life. Brubaker said he had traced the pistol left to Keene by his sister, and found that he had sold it to an Alexandria, Va., pawnbroker and that this pawnbroker had in turn sold it to another.

Sergt. Brubaker also was forced to guess as to how the blood appeared in Keene's stateroom and on the handrail outside the stateroom. In an informal talk with State's Attorney Maddrix, Brubaker suggested Keene might have stood on the cat walk outside the stateroom, showering the wash bowl and the bed, which were not far from the window, and that he might have started aft and smeared the handrail with blood before he plunged into Chesapeake Bay.

Case to Remain Open.

Maddrix said that, while the report pointed to suicide, he would allow the case to remain open for a while. Meanwhile, the report of the coroner's jury on Smiths Island remains on the record. This report says Keene was murdered.

It was just a month ago today that Keene, who lived at the Fairfax Apartments, 2100 Massachusetts avenue northwest, boarded the boat, saying he was going to the Virginia city on a real estate deal.

On Memorial Day Keene's body was found in Chesapeake Bay, 16 miles from here.

Judge With Gun Guards Employes Against Strikers

Kansas City, June 12 (AP).—Circuit Judge Allen C. Southern borrowed a shotgun and stood guard today over a crew remodeling a home he owns in suburban Independence—his own protection against sympathizers with a building strike in progress here.

He said 15 outsiders "came here and took the tools from these men and told them they'd have to leave in an hour or be blown up. I got here in a half hour and there hasn't been any trouble since."

St. John's Classes Guests at Picnic

The Sunday school classes of St. John's Church, in Georgetown, held their annual picnic at Glen Echo Park yesterday with more than 250 attending.

The Rev. F. B. Tucker, St. John's pastor, was present to see that all children received tickets for rides and gave each guest an ice cream cone.

Battleship Tennessee Floated Off Mudbank

San Francisco, June 12 (AP).—Fourteen tugs, aided by flood tide, pulled the battleship Tennessee from a San Francisco Bay mudbank late today, and the mighty war machine anchored in her proper position 31 hours behind schedule.

A day and night of tinkering and removal of hundreds of tons of ammunition and stores was required to free the warship. Nearly 200 tons of large caliber shells were taken from the ship, and lighters pumped an undisclosed amount of oil from her tanks.

2 Hurt in Auto Crash.

Hagerstown, June 12.—Joseph Butler, 23, St. Marys County, was seriously injured and Teddy Wilmer Thorpe, 21, Anacostia, D. C., driver, was slightly injured late yesterday when their car skidded and turned over on the National highway 4 miles east of here.

Wreckage of Plane Where 2 Youths Were Hurt

Congress' Rival Hog-Callers Charged With Dodging Issue

Rumor Holds Mouton, of Louisiana, Wearin, of Iowa, Are Avoiding Showdown on Bayou Bawl, Prairie Shout.

By Sidney Olson.

A sinister rumor is rife in the halls of Congress that the two hog-calling artists of the House are dodging a showdown.

Representative Robert Mouton, of Louisiana, exponent of the Bayou Bawl, and Representative Otha D. Wearin, of Iowa, producer of the Prairie Shout, have been avoiding the direct issue of a face-to-face contest, the cynics say. While each is willing to strut his stuff separately, neither has emitted a time-and-place challenge.

Already the whisper is heard in the cloakrooms: "Wearin and Mouton are phonies! Neither one could call a hog across the street, even with corn-cobs hidden in their pockets."

Papers Demand Truth.

Sneers are observed on the faces of some members when the subject is mentioned. Others, holding the honor of the House is at stake, have begged that the matter be dropped. Newspapers, however, probing for the truth, continue to insist on the showdown.

Wearin and Mouton, at the invitation of the National Broadcasting Co. displayed their wares on the Capitol Plaza yesterday for the delectation of a crowd of tourists and the radio audience.

Mouton, whose opened mouth resembles a gaping satchel, has a warm, alluring bellow which must be highly attractive to any sensitive hog. His old Cajan cry, "Eh, la bas!" (Hey, you down there!) rings forth in a rich vibrato that flutters the ear-drums of everyone in a two-block radius.

Mouton Makes Bet.

Wearin, of slight, almost fragile build, bespectacled and studious in appearance, has unexpected physical reserves, with a window-rattling roar that makes his whole frame shimmy while he produces it.

He begins with a low, seductive repetition of "piggy, piggy," shifts rapidly into second for a tremendous hoot and then swings into his final smashing blast, a call which his backers claim can start up a medium-sized dust storm on the spot. He closes with a soft "Cooee," which is supposed to keep the pigs who have responded to his thrilling barytone from climbing up his leg.

Mouton has bet two pigs that he can out-clamor Wearin. Wearin says his only present worry is where to put the two pigs when he wins. But still no time has been set for the colossal conflict. People are beginning to talk.

120 Passengers Saved as Ships Crash in Thames

London, June 12 (AP).—With water pouring through a gaping hole in the side of the British steamer Royal Archer, 120 passengers groped their way to safety tonight aboard lifeboats and motor launches after a collision in a fog in the Thames estuary.

The other vessel involved in the mishap, the 9,429-ton Newcastle steamer Gleniffer, apparently was little damaged. The Royal Archer, 2,666-ton ship owned by the London & Edinburgh Shipping Co., was en route from London to Aberdeen when the collision occurred.

With water entering the engine room, the captain of the Royal Archer drove full speed for Maplin Sands. As the ship was beached, wireless calls for aid were sent out.

2 Face Jury Tomorrow On Attack Death Charge

The pair is charged with having criminally assaulted the woman. Several technical motions are pending in the case.

Jean Harlow's Body Placed in Mausoleum

7 A.F.G.E. Units Ouster Is Asked By Committee

About 25 of them appeared, with an attorney, walked into the hearing room and insisted that the meeting be open to the press and as many of their own representatives as they wished. This was denied by James A. Campbell, of Cincinnati, a vice president of the A. F. G. E. and chairman of the investigating committee. The representatives of the seven lodges walked out.

Then the committee closed the door and the lock went tight. At 1 p. m. a spokesman appeared—Cecil E. Custer, the A. F. G. E. treasurer—and announced through a formal statement:

"The committee * * * is of the opinion that its duty is first to the obligation which they have taken as members and officers of the (A. F. G. E.)," and so they had decided that the lodges could have one representative, each, in the room during the entire hearing and could offer a reasonable number of witnesses. Committeemen later said they regarded this as a "very fair proposal."

Lodges Withdraw.

The walk-out was dismissed in this paragraph: "Representatives of the lodges involved were invited to and did appear before the committee with their attorney. Upon being advised as to the procedure under which the investigation would be conducted, the representatives of the lodges withdrew and refused to participate further in the investigation."

But the investigation went on with only a slight pause for lunch. Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. president, spearhead in the opposition to the independent activities of the seven lodges and chief complainant against them, testified first. He said that he told of their defiance of his cease and desist order; of their holding a mass meeting in protest of current economy measures over his objection and order, and of their "disloyalty to the American Federation of Labor (with which the A. F. G. E. is affiliated), both at meetings of the Washington Central Labor Union and at the State convention of the Maryland and District of Columbia State Federations of Labor" during May.

1,385 Workers Involved.

Also, his formal charges alleged that the lodges sought to "disrupt and destroy the good name and value of the A. F. G. E. and its District department."

The action of the investigating committee means that the A. F. G. E. executive council will receive soon the recommendation for the suspension of the lodges until the national convention, which opens in Philadelphia September 13.

In all, 1,385 Government employes are concerned by the suspension. During the last week, the A. F. G. E. national office has polled—by questionnaire—the individual members of the seven lodges to learn their sentiments. It was announced last night that some 200, maybe more, have "definitely signified" their loyalty to the national organization. Some form of organization will be set up for these members to align with the A. F. G. E.

While the session was in progress, William Green, president of the A. F. of L., appeared in the hotel lobby, but said that his presence had nothing to do with the investigation. The representatives of the suspended lodges did not remain in or near the hotel. They dispersed immediately after the walkout.

The lodges are Resettlement, 206; Labor, 12; Agriculture, 31; General Accounting Office, 8; Interstate Commerce Commission, 58; WPA, 130, and Beltsville, 125. The groundwork for the disruption was laid several weeks ago when the seven lodges—generally regarded as the liberal wing of the local A. F. G. E.—made insistent demands upon the national office for outspoken opposition to the Byrnes and Cannon economy amendments.

Urged Quieter Course.

The national office counseled a quieter course than one in the form of a mass meeting, which the seven lodges advocated. The District department supported—by wide margin of votes—the stand of the national leaders. But the mass meeting was held Thursday night, and by resolution urged a turning away to the Committee for Industrial Organization. The mass meeting crowd was estimated at 1,500.

Yesterday Col. Stengle said:

"They wanted to hold a mass meeting here. But we're going on with the investigation."

Basques, Free Through Years, Shout Defiance

Often Besieged Before, Bilbao Takes Heart; Food Available.

ing. Artillery fire from beyond the Basque trenches whistled into the city, setting houses along the waterfront on fire.

But still the banners waved and the restless word danced: "Invincible!"

Take Heart From History.

Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco spoke of the end of the civil war today, but the Basques take courage from their history.

One Carlist siege of Bilbao lasted nearly three years. This one has lasted only nine weeks so far. Another siege lasted a year. Compared to these ancient days, today's hardships in Bilbao don't deserve the name.

Basques ate all the animals in their zoo in those other fights. They feasted on seagulls and rats. They munched grass and tree roots, but they stuck it out.

They have more to eat now, but not much more. There are plenty of beans and a little cabbage, run through the insurgent blockade by British ships.

But there's no butter, no meat, and no wine.

Soap Better Than Money.

What there is to be bought can best be bought . . . with soap . . . Bank of Spain notes will do in a pinch, but United States dollars can be bought with a bar of soap.

Reason for this is that fats are the first thing to disappear in besieged cities.

Result is that men steal soap for their wives and sweethearts, and wise housewives keep their cats indoors.

In 1936 and 1874, Basques and Carlists fought with rifles and ponderous field guns. There were no machine guns, no hand grenades, no warships, and above all no airplanes.

More than anything else Bilbao fears these insurgent planes. Surrounded by high hills, lost in a gleaming valley like a solitary tea leaf at the bottom of a cup, Bilboa knows from her experience today that insurgent planes can be out of sight and sound behind the hills until they are nearly over the city.

Then there is another companion fear. Most of Bilboa's houses are built of wood. Basque officials will admit the fire caused by insurgent bombs today could spread with frightful speed.

But yet the city cries: "Invincible!"

Rabbi to Broadcast.

Dr. Henry M. Segal, rabbi of B'nai Israel Congregation, will speak on "The Jewish Program—What It Offers," in a radio address over WOL at 12:30 p. m. today.

lage between Bilbao and the front lines had escaped being bombed or shelled during the day.

Bilbao's defenses were pierced in two places, the insurgents said, with the first Navarre brigade commanded by Col. Garcia Valino leading the way.

This brigade was composed of 15 battalions. Border sources said ten of these were made up of Italian troops, while four were Carlist battalions.

Insurgent aviation, a communique announced, machine gunned the retreating Basques along the roads leading to the capital from a height of only 150 feet, "causing great casualties."

It is said Mount Cantoibagas and Mount Gaztelumendi, heights commanding Bilbao, were captured in a bayonet attack, the Basques abandoning "great numbers" of dead.

An insurgent broadcast at 10 p. m. reported mountain artillery had been placed in position and bombarded military objectives in Bilbao.

Loyalists Win in South.

Madrid, June 12 (AP).—Government troops on the Cordoba front reported tonight they had driven forward 4½ miles in a surprise attack north of Cordoba, cut the Cordoba-Belmez highway and seized strategic positions of Vacar. Belmez is about 35 miles northwest of Cordoba; Vacar about halfway between.

Patrol Agreement Reported.

London, June 12 (AP).—Germany and Italy today tentatively agreed to return to the non-intervention patrol of warring Spain. They abandoned the patrol and the international non-intervention committee May 31 after their ships had been bombed by Spanish government planes.

Under today's agreement, drafted by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop, Italian Ambassador Count Dino Grandi and French Ambassador Charles Corbin, the nations decided all warships in the patrol should have the right to defend themselves but none should take retaliatory action for an attack without first consulting the other three powers.

Yale U. Picketed By 200 Teachers

New Haven, Conn., June 12 (AP).—Members of the teaching profession in many States staged a colorful picketing demonstration at Yale University today in an effort to have Prof. Jerome Davis renamed to the divinity school faculty.

An estimated 200 teachers in colleges, high and grammar schools in New York State, New England and Pennsylvania came here by train and automobile under the auspices of the American Federation of Teachers, of which Prof. Davis is president.

President James Rowland Angell told the demonstrators that the Yale organization would take the situation under advisement. Prof. Davis was notified several months ago by the Yale corporation that his contract would not be renewed upon its expiration this fall.

Soviet Executes 8 Army Chiefs For 'Nazi Plot'

Scheme Hinted to Turn Rich Ukraine Over to Germany.

the Ukraine, the union's western and southwestern provinces, whose former commanders, Gens. I. P. Uborevitch and I. E. Yakir, respectively, were among the doomed eight.

Scores of officers who served with these two were understood to have been arrested. All their former subordinates were considered suspect.

In the White Russian and Ukraine garrisons officers and men hastily held meetings to pass resolutions assuring the Kremlin they would embark on a great spy hunt within their own ranks to wipe out all traces of the alleged treason of their former leaders.

Linked With Germany.

Foreign diplomats in Moscow, anxious to explain the Red army purge to bewildered home governments, conned recent developments which appeared to link the doomed eight with German ambitions in eastern Europe.

Diplomats pointed to the communique announcing the death sentence to support this theory. It said the accused confessed "to being in the employ of the military intelligence service of one of the foreign states, which carries on an unfriendly campaign toward the U. S. S. R * * * and has systematically pursued the aim of assisting in the dismemberment of the Soviet Union."

They recalled Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's reference in a speech at Neurnberg last year to what the Reich could do with the rich Ukraine, Russia's granary.

In the January treason trial Karl Radek, one of the defendants, testified that Leon Trotsky, arch-enemy of the present Soviet regime, had agreed to "yield the Ukraine to Germany" in return for military support for the overthrow of the Stalinist government. Radek was sent to prison.

More Trials Imminent.

Today the official press indicated further trials were imminent. It was known many more army officers as well as civilians were in Soviet jails.

The tightening-up process, although most vigorous on the western frontiers, was not neglected elsewhere. Promises to improve army discipline came in messages from every garrison, especially from the Far East, where the Red army confronts Japan in Manchuria.

The clean-up extended to the Frunze Military Academy, the Soviet's "West Point," and the Osoaviakhim, powerful organ for civilian training in aviation and gas defense. Former chiefs of these two institutions, Gen. A. I. Kork and Gen. Robert P. Eideman, were among the condemned eight.

Even the commissarit for defense was not immune from the spy hunt, in view of the fact it has lost its two vice commissars, Marshal Tukhachevsky and Gen. Jan Gamarnik, within a few weeks, both branded as traitors. Gamarnik died June 1. The government said he killed himself when he was exposed as a foreign spy and traitor.

U. S. Board Favors Road 'Chain Gangs'

By the Associated Press.

The Prison Industries Reorganization Board approved road labor for prisoners yesterday despite "the unsavory reputation" of chain gangs.

Reviewing the board's work since it was established by Executive order in 1935, Dr. Louis N. Robinson, chairman, said that "in spite of widespread opposition to the use of prisoners on road work, due in part to the unsavory reputation of the old chain gang, the board is convinced that there is an extensive opportunity for the wise and constructive use of prisoners of the better types on highway work."

Dr. Robinson also recommended conservation projects "such as forestry, drainage and soil erosion." Use of abandoned Civilian Conservation Corps Camps had been discussed, he said.

The board told President Roosevelt that educational work in prisons is "one of the urgent needs."

Navy Requests Bids For Four Destroyers

Bids from private shipbuilders for construction of four destroyers were invited yesterday by the Navy Department. The sealed proposals will be opened at the department on August 4.

The four ships represent half of the 1937 building program for destroyers. The remaining four will be constructed in navy yards in accordance with law.

Experts Take Refuge in Latin In Row Over What's a Lobster

Maine Fishermen Deny Southern Crustacean (With Small Claws) Deserves Name, So U. S. Bureau Offers 'Panulirus.'

The Bureau of Fisheries took quick refuge behind a screen of piscatorial Latin yesterday from the question, What is a lobster?

Maine lobstermen have asked Congress to declare that a lobster is not a lobster, unless he has formidable claws.

A spokesman for Representative James C. Oliver (Republican), of Maine, who introduced a bill to define lobster by amendment to the pure food and drug act, contended yesterday that certain Florida, California and South African sea denizens are being sold as lobster when they aren't even close kin.

He said the creature has either no claws at all or very inferior ones and ought to be called "lobster tail" at best.

The Federal Trade Commission, he added, is investigating charges of misrepresentation and unfair competition by the under-clawed varieties.

Frank T. Bell, Commissioner of Fisheries, said:

"In the bureau we commonly call the alleged interloper the spiny lobster, but from now on I'm going to play safe in unimpeachable Latin. The name is panulirus.

"It's in a different family from the Maine lobster, which can be called genus homarus, if you like. Panulirus really isn't a crawfish, either, because that is a fresh-water beast."

The bureau said 500,000 pounds of frozen panulirus had been imported from Africa in 1936, 400 per cent more than in 1935, and sold at 50 cents a pound, about a third of the Maine lobster price.

It is caught in large quantities off California, too.

Public Order Board To Honor O. S. Smith

Odell S. Smith, chairman of the public order committee of the Washington Board of Trade, will be honored at a testimonial dinner tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

Smith, a prominent Washington citizen for many years, was recently reappointed chairman of the public order committee for the twenty-fifth consecutive year. The banquet, to be attended by many District officials, and officers and directors of the Board of Trade, will serve as a silver anniversary celebration.

In recent years the committee, under Smith's chairmanship, has devoted much time to the study of crime prevention and correction, co-operating with the Police Boys Club, advocating increased Police and Fire Department personnel and voluntary finger printing of all District citizens. The Washington Criminal Justice Association has elected Smith one of its directors.

Belgian Leaves For Trade Talks With President

Van Zeeland Confers With Blum, Aides Before Starting Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 12.—France today turned out a full array of its chiefs of state to wish Premier Paul Van Zeeland, of Belgium, success in his visit to the United States and his talks with President Roosevelt.

The Belgian premier, after conferring with French leaders on his survey of the prospects for tearing down economic barriers—which he hopes to continue in Washington—took a train for Cherbourg to board the Berengaria.

Supporters and foes of Premier Leon Blum shouted "Long live Blum!" and "Hang Blum!" at Saint Lazare Station, when the French premier accompanied Van Zeeland to his train. Police had to push back the crowds to permit Blum to leave the station. One demonstrator was arrested.

Van Zeeland is scheduled to reach New York June 18, attend commencement at Princeton University, his alma mater, and then go to Washington.

Premier Van Zeeland left prepared to give President Roosevelt a comprehensive picture of Europe's economic situation. President Albert Lebrun and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos today gave him the latest French point of view. Further, it was announced that Van Zeeland's chief aide, Maurice Frere, has just completed a circuit of London, Paris, Berlin and Rome in the interests of his chief's survey, undertaken at behest of the French and British governments.

Results of Frere's tour were not officially disclosed, but diplomatic authorities understood Britain and France showed a disposition to lower trade barriers, Rome's reception of the idea was "not hostile," but Berlin posed certain conditions for German co-operation that made an international economic conference unlikely at this juncture.

Texas Welcomes 19 Latin Nations At Fair in Dallas

Dallas, June 12 (AP).—Texas greeted 19 Latin American nations today with a gay Pan-American exposition to cement the good neighbor policy.

In new splendor since last year's centennial celebration, the exposition grounds were a vast pattern of historical commemoration—dedicated to the "amigos" south of the Rio Grande.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, from the imposing Hall of State steps, said: "We want Pan-America to have a large and valuable share in the rich rewards that an alluring future offers. We strike hands with the nations and people of Pan-America and pledge them peace and friendship, trade and commerce and interchange of educational and cultural influences and impulses."

Gov. James V. Allred greeted Texas' neighbors at the end of a colorful procession that proceeded along downtown streets packed with holiday crowds.

President Confers With Aides on Boat

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt found opportunity last night for a quiet chat with two of his Cabinet members while his yacht lay at anchor off a Chesapeake Bay island.

The Executive, accompanied by a party which included Secretary Wallace and Attorney General Cummings, sailed leisurely southward on the bay during the day toward an overnight anchorage near Solomons Island, 20 miles north of the juncture of the Potomac River and the bay.

Cruising alongside was the schooner Sewanna, skippered by the President's son and secretary, James, who intended to take Mr. Roosevelt aboard should he desire to travel under sail for a time.

The Presidential party, which put out from Annapolis, Md., Friday afternoon, arranged to dock at the Navy Yard here early this evening.

Six Bodies Found In Closed Hospital

Philadelphia, June 12 (AP).—An investigation was ordered today of the disposal of six bodies found in the basement of the closed Naturopathic Hospital.

"The Pennsylvania State Anatomical Board's records show only five bodies purchased by the hospital, and those five years ago," Mayor S. Davis Wilson told the coroner's office.

"The five bodies were those of men," said the mayor. "One of those found was apparently that of a woman."

The bodies were found through the complaint of two children who reported they noticed an odor in the hospital while playing last night.

Abattoir Hearings To Begin June 21

Hearings before the House District Committee on the abattoir bill were scheduled yesterday by Chairman Mary T. Norton for June 21 and 22.

The first day will be devoted to witnesses favoring the anti-nuisance legislation, while the second will be given over to opponents. Mrs. Norton hopes that the committee will be able to report to the House before the District day that falls on June 28.

Although hearings were held several weeks ago by a sub-committee of the Senate District Committee, the sub-committee has made no move to report the bill to the full committee. The measure was reported previously by the House District Committee but was withdrawn under fire for hearings.

Sulfanilimide Use Called Dangerous

Sulfanilimide should not be used for self-medication purposes, but administered only under supervision of a competent physician, Health Officer George C. Ruhland cautioned Washingtonians yesterday.

Recent research which has shown the chemical compound to have therapeutic properties in treatment of a variety of diseases, ranging from meningitis to gonorrhea, has resulted in a wide demand for it at local drug stores, Dr. Ruhland said.

Consequences of the drug's increasing use without medical guidance may be extremely serious, the health officer warned, since the compound is not yet out of the experimental stage and its uncontrolled use is fraught with danger.

Adverse Report On Court Plan Due Tomorrow

Long-Awaited Showdown at Hand; Foes Wary of Compromise.

The stage was set last night for the long-awaited Senate showdown on the President's court plan, as the ten court-increase opponents on the Senate Judiciary Committee prepared to file that group's adverse report with the Senate tomorrow.

Although the controversial measure may be called up in the Senate any time thereafter, another long delay appeared likely before the floor fight actually gets under way.

For the first time yesterday, it was suggested the committee's Administration minority might file a dissenting report in answer to the adverse majority statement. Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee was out of town yesterday, but it was said that such action is being considered.

Wary of Compromise.

Court plan opponents said they were ready for a vote at any time on a straight six-judge increase, but continued wary of any ballot on a compromise. Rather than permit a compromise to come to a test before they are certain of enough votes to defeat it, they were prepared to "talk" indefinitely.

It was reliably indicated the Administration early in the fight may advance the substitute proposal of Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, limiting additions to the court to one-judge a year.

Whether this wins or loses, it was indicated the alternative compromise plan of Senator Charles O. Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, may be put forward. Andrews proposes a court of 11, with each of the ten circuit court districts represented.

Postponement Is Aim.

Thus, the Senate would be given a chance to vote on at least two types of compromise, with the Administration standing to benefit by the strongest adopted.

Opposition strategy is designed either to force "indefinite postponement" of a vote on the Hatch or Andrews plans, or prevent a vote by a filibuster.

Andrews proposes to bulwark his amendment to the court bill with a constitutional amendment carrying similar provisions and compelling Supreme Court retirements at 75. He will seek a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on his proposed constitutional amendment before the court bill is called up in the Senate.

Blind Child Prodigy Undergoes Operation

Des Moines, Iowa, June 12 (AP).—Surgeons at Mercy Hospital announced Carol Lynn Rowe, 3-year-old "potential genius," underwent an operation to restore her sight today.

Carol Lynn, blind since birth, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Rowe, of Creston, Iowa. She attracted wide attention when she mastered a vocabulary of 750 words at the age of 21 months. The operation was for the removal of a blood clot from the optic nerve at the base of the brain. It may be months, doctors said, before she definitely can be assured whether the operation is a success.

700 Northeast Residents Attend Dedication Of Bunker Hill Park, Washington's Newest

Bunker Hill Park, Washington's newest recreation area, was dedicated yesterday with speech and song. Approximately 700 Northeast residents attended the ceremonies, which were under auspices of the Brookland Citizens Association.

Participants in the program, staged in the park's sylvan theater, included Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, American Legion; the Franciscan Monastery Choir, Boy Scouts and school children. The principal addresses were given by Theodore A. Walters, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Among the honor guests was Mrs. Della D'Argo, who donated thousands of laurel, dogwood, holly and oaks for the nine-acre reservation bounded by Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Otis and Perry streets.

Marvin M. McLean, president of the Brookland Citizens Association, was general chairman of the exercises. Grover W. Tribble, commander of the Legion post, was vice chairman. Music was by the Knights of Columbus Band.

The following were guests of honor: Capt. Sidney J. Marks, commander of the Twelfth Police Precinct; A. F. E. Scheer, chairman Northeast Conference Citizens Associations; John J. Hurley, president Michigan Park Citizens Association; H. M. Dixson, president Chillum Citizens Association; Robert Furniss, president Burroughs Citizens Association; F. J. McDonald, president Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association; Dr. Freeman Weiss, president Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

Also Mrs. Cleo Mardfeldt, president Brookland-Woodridge Business Association; William J. Weber, division commander Boy Scouts of America, and the Revs. Herbert Gallegher, P. E. Conroy, A. L. Wills, S. H. Kornmann and J. M. Gillum.

the only barrier to easy access to the pool," he said.

A boat landing will be built on the park side of the channel near the clubhouse, parks officials said. They explained arrangements for use of the police boat are temporary, pending procurement of a boat by the parks office.

Leoffler said free ferry service for adults desiring to use the recreational facilities in East Potomac Park also is being studied. Afternoon ferry service for both children and adults may be added later.

Seattle Strike Ties Up Western Union Service

Seattle, June 12 (AP).—William J. Smith, local Western Union superintendent, announced its discontinuance of commercial business in Seattle today because of a messenger boy strike and picketing.

He said the company would refuse any more incoming or outgoing business and that suspension would make 400 persons jobless. Messenger boys struck this week demanding wage increases.

Reich Students Told To Help in Harvest

Berlin, June 12 (AP).—Every German university student was told today to volunteer to help farmers bring in the harvest or show some good reason why he should not.

A circular letter to students of Berlin University, typical of those sent to other seats of learning, stressed that "no pressure" was being exerted but added: "You are expected to help in the harvest."

Volunteer blanks were furnished the students.

Mechanical Mule Expected to Bring 'No-Horse Farm'

Rome, Ga., June 12 (AP).—William House is experimenting with a mechanical mule which he hopes will make the no-horse farm and the one-horse town better places in which to live.

His preliminary model of the mule is a wheel about 2 feet wide with flanges on its outer surface like a tractor. A gasoline motor within the wheel furnishes the power.

With a couple of nuts and bolts, one harnesses a plow on behind and gets going without so much as a "giddap." The device can be worked until it runs out of gasoline.

Tax Bill Forces Arm for Triple Fight in House

who made a request for time was given an audience, even on the last day that the sub-committee met.

"If the House won't pass this bill now, it's the responsibility of Congress. I haven't any more time to devote to further inquiries."

Kennedy pointed out that because of the fiscal emergency facing the District the committee had been forced to work hurriedly during the last few weeks. Consequently, the measure is far from perfect, he said.

"However, it seems to me that the Commissioners can test it out during the next fiscal year and then come back next year with recommendations for amendments if they prove advisable," he added.

Kennedy ridiculed the idea of members of Congress and others who believe that by passing the tax burden to realty property owners they will escape it themselves.

"Any increase in realty taxes will be reflected immediately in higher rents," he predicted. "Then the small home owner will be the goat."

Hopes to Delay Fight.

Kennedy will be in charge of the bill in the absence of Chairman Mary T. Norton. As the income tax bill is the last title of the bill, he hopes to conclude consideration of the less controversial features of the measure before the major assault begins.

When the move starts to exempt members of Congress from the income levy, Kennedy or one of the other sub-committee members will ask for a roll call vote so that the members will be on record as to their attitude toward a tax upon themselves.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, chief sponsor of the income tax, predicted that the fight over the local bill will be only the opening skirmish in a national battle.

With constitutional amendments already proposed to permit the Federal taxing of State salaries and State taxing of Federal incomes, Dirksen expressed the belief that the question of taxing legislators will become a national issue in the next general elections.

Solicitation Chairman Named by Chest Head

John L. Vandegrift, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. executive, has been appointed chairman of the group solicitation unit for the Community Chest tenth anniversary campaign for funds, it was announced yesterday by Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Chest.

Vice chairman of the unit will be Harold A. Brooks, Potomac Electric Power Co. official. Both Brooks and Vandegrift are veteran campaigners for the Chest, Brooks having served as section chief and area chairman of the group solicitation unit, while Vandegrift has been vice chairman of the unit for the past two years.

Full Committee Of Senate Asks 40% WPA Split

Move for Local Share in Burden Wins Over Hopkins' Plea.

mands, if they have to share the costs.

"If local communities really are interested in the problem, and there is a problem, they will put up their share of the funds," he said.

As approved yesterday, the plan will apply only to new projects undertaken after September 30 of this year. If communities say they are unable to bear 40 per cent of the cost (and this would be virtually equivalent to taking a "pauper's oath") the President is given authority to examine their credit and taxpaying capacity, and then fix the maximum amount they can pay.

Two attempts to modify the Byrnes amendment failed in the full committee, each by a vote of 13 to 9. One, by Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, would have required localities to put up only 18 per cent. Another, by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, would have set 20 per cent as the local requirement.

Hopkins Planned Boost.

Hopkins in the last year has required local sponsors to bear between 13 and 17 per cent of the cost, and was said to be planning to boost this requirement to 20 or 22 per cent in the coming year.

He has been forced to battle his next year's budget every step of the way through Congress. He was able to avoid an earmarking drive in the House, and several attempts at slashing. At one point the House, in resentment, voted him a $2,000 salary cut, but rescinded this action at a later session.

Hopkins is said to have agreed at yesterday's committee hearing that local communities should bear some part of relief costs, and to have volunteered to require larger contributions. But he wanted discretionary power, under supervision of the President, to fix the amount in each case.

Hopkins wrote in his speech read at Wellesley that the depression "has stopped" and that recovery "has advanced to the point where production, measured in absolute terms, is about equal to 1929." He said it would take "a pretty severely prejudiced individual to deny that the Federal works program has played an important part in this recovery."

He said the spending by millions of workers on Federal works projects has kept the economic machine moving upward instead of downward. He said many business elements, through chambers of commerce and trade associations, have opposed labor and farm buying power movements designed to aid "millions whom they could not themselves employ."

Similar arguments were used by Hopkins before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Following is the breakdown of how Senators voted:

For the Byrnes plan—Glass, Virginia; Copeland, New York; Byrnes; Tydings, Maryland; Russell, Georgia; Adams, Colorado; McCarran, Nevada; Bankhead, Alabama; Burke, Nebraska (Democrats), and Hale, Maine; Steiwer, Oregon; Townsend, Delaware, and Bridges, New Hampshire (Republicans).

Sandy Spring Hospital Asks $50,000 Fund

More Beds and Equipment Montgomery County Officials' Goal.

A campaign to raise $50,000 for the building fund of the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, Md., will be outlined to a group of civic and philanthropic leaders at a dinner at 7 p. m. tomorrow at Manor Club, near Norbeck.

Clarence B. Hurrey, campaign director, and Dr. J. W. Bird, chairman of the executive committee, will review the history of the hospital and explain the need for additional funds to increase the bed capacity and general equipment of the hospital. The campaign, beginning with the dinner, will continue through June 28.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare of the District of Columbia, will be the principal speaker at the dinner.

Start Reviewed.

The hospital, situated on a 13-acre tract near Olney, Md., began as a rural community enterprise, but now cares for patients in adjoining counties and from the District. It has a capacity of 40 beds and 6 bassinettes for babies.

Directed largely by members of old Sandy Spring families the hospital managing board has maintained its principle that no annual operating deficit be incurred. It is supported by revenue from private patients and by money paid by the State and county for care of indigent patients. The State pays $1.76 a day per patient while the actual cost per capita is $3.71. No provision is made by the State for paying for such extra services as X-ray and laboratory work.

The deficit incurred last year amounted to approximately $13,000.

Facilities Modern.

Its operating room, delivery and accident rooms, X-ray service, and laboratory and dental facilities are modern and complete.

The board of directors, headed by Charles F. Brooke, president, is Allen Farquhar, vice president; Mrs. Milton Bancroft, secretary; Francis Miller, treasurer, and Mrs. F. L. Thomas, Mrs. James W. Barnsley, Mortimer O. Stabler, Dr. J. W. Bird, Dr. C. C. Tumbleson, Mrs. F. M. Hallowell, A. Douglass Farquhar, Mrs. James W. Brown, Dr. S. A. Nichols, Clarence B. Hurrey, Mrs. R. Bentley Thomas, Mrs. R. H. Miller, J. W. Jones, Tarlton Brooke and Mrs. C. C. Tumbleson. Dr. J. W. Bird is chairman of the executive committee and is assisted by Mrs. Milton Bancroft, Mrs. A. Douglass Farquhar, Mrs. R. Bentley Thomas, Mrs. Charles F. Brooke, Francis Miller and Mrs. C. C. Tumbleson.

Postal Inquiry May Terminate In Court Action

Evidence for Prosecution to Be Sought in Strike Mail Study.

The Senate Post Office Committee investigation into alleged "irregularities" on both sides of the Ohio steel strike will be closely watched for evidence on which Federal prosecution could be based, it was learned last night.

Senate critics of the failure of United States mail to move into strike-bound steel plants are considering a request for Federal action if there is evidence of illegal interference with the mails, it was said on reliable authority.

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, author of a resolution which led to the inquiry, declined to comment last night on reports that the Justice Department may be asked to send a man to sit in on the hearings.

Legislation May Follow.

Meanwhile, a Democratic ally of Bridges in the move for a Senate inquiry—Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina—disclosed that legislation might be expected to follow the inquiry.

Bailey thinks present postoffice discretion in making deliveries dangerous to postal employes should be redefined in the law so as not to include "such man-made supposed dangers as are involved in this strike situation."

If such legislation is proposed, Bridges said last night he would support it.

Arrangements for the Senate's "preliminary" investigation into activities on both sides of the strike, unexpectedly ordered at a Post Office Committee meeting Friday, were still incomplete last night.

Relief Bill Delays Inquiry.

Hearings had been scheduled to start early this week, but both Bridges and Chairman Kenneth McKellar of the Post Office Committee are members of the Appropriations Committee now at work on the $1,500,000,000 relief bill.

McKellar plans to get the inquiry under way as soon as the relief bill fight is out of the way. Witnesses to be called may include postmasters of Niles, Warren, and Youngstown, Ohio, where some steel plant mail has been held up; C. I. O. officials, representatives of the Republic Steel Corporation, and housewives who have unsuccessfully sent mail to their steel-working husbands.

An understanding on expenses to bring witnesses here may be sought this week by Bridges. The New Hampshire Senator wants to know if funds are available to call the witnesses he seeks. He indicated the Republic Steel Corporation may pay the costs of its own witnesses, but funds would be needed to bring housewives and others whose testimony he seeks. At Friday's meeting, Senators were given a free hand to call witnesses, but the question of expenses was left open.

The committee was organized two years ago under the auspices of the Air Commerce Bureau. Composed of representatives from Government agencies concerned with aeronautic radio and manufacturers and users of aeronautic radio, it investigates development of antistatic antennae, direction-finding equipment, instrument-landing apparatus and ultrahigh frequencies.

Scientist to Describe Galapagos Islands' Life

Game hunting in the Galapagos Islands is the subject of a campfire talk to be given by John Garth Friday night in the Pierce Mill picnic grove, Rock Creek Park. A faculty member of the University of California at Los Angeles, Garth recently returned from the Galapagos, where he investigated the islands' animals and fish. He will illustrate his talk with motion pictures.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, who was to have spoken Friday night, will speak later in the summer.

Troops Mobilize at Monroe for C.I.O. Rally; Union Makes Plea for Roosevelt Mediation

revoked his message to locals in those States.

Transfer of the meeting to a State park 3 miles from Monroe helped to ease the apprehensions of Monroe residents.

Immediate effect of the Johnstown strike which started in Bethlehem's Cambria plant at midnight was not apparent. David Watkins, sub-regional S. W. O. C. director, expressed "hope it spreads fast" and said he was "sure there are at least 10,000 men out." Corporation officials said the mills employing about 15,000 "will continue to operate."

Further extension of the union drive for sole collective bargaining rights in the Chicago-Calumet area was under consideration. Nicholas Fontecchio, Calumet S. W. O. C. director, said the union contemplated asking the National Labor Relations Board to enforce such recognition even in plants such as the Carnegie-Illinois mills, U. S. Steel subsidiary, now operating under agreements recognizing the union as bargaining agent for its members only.

These developments came a few hours after the breakup, without sign that a peaceful strike agreement was any nearer, of a conference called at Columbus, Ohio, by Gov. Davey and attended by representatives of the union, the Republic Steel Corporation, and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Corporation.

An estimated 73,000 were idle because of strikes at mills of these two producers and of the Inland Steel Corporation. Inland has no Ohio plants. All three have refused to sign union contracts.

The conferees were expected to return for another meeting Tuesday.

One possible proposal considered as holding settlement hopes for future conferences was the compromise "captive mine" agreement used to settle mine strikes in 1933 and the Canadian General Motors strike this year. This formula would call for written agreements between officers of company and union, but not between the company and the union as groups.

Bethlehem's plants are located in Pennsylvania, California, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Washington, Illinois and Delaware. As operations at the Cambria plant continued, Watkins said the real test of the strike there would come next week.

Mine Strike Urged.

The S. W. O. C. director said he had suggested that officials of the United Mine Workers of America, another C. I. O. union, call strikes in five of Bethlehem's captive mines in the Johnstown area, employing between 2,200 and 2,500 miners.

Although the walkout was called in sympathy with a strike of 376 employes of the Conemaugh and Black Lick Railroad, Bethlehem subsidiary, Watkins asserted that "we have demands of our own to make."

"We want signed contracts covering wages, hours, recognition and working conditions," he said.

Police were placed on 12-hour duty. Small groups of pickets lolled at seven plant entrances, jeering employes reporting for work.

Mayor Daniel J. Shields, of Johnstown, saying "I do not intend to assign special deputies to Bethlehem," added he had assurance "of both sides that there will be no imported pickets or workers."

Strategy of the Michigan guardsmen and State police will be virtually to isolate Monroe during tomorrow afternoon's mass meeting. The city's 20,000 residents have been jittery since the 15-minute battle Thursday when 150 pickets were dispersed by special civilian police, regular officers and sheriff's deputies who cleared the way for reopening of the strike-closed Newton Steel Co. plant. The Newton mill is controlled by Republic Steel Corporation whose units have been unaffected by strikes.

Sightseers Banned.

As C. I. O. members assemble in a State park three miles north of Monroe on shores of Lake Erie to hear Bittner and Martin, troops will divert through traffic from Monroe and from the park. Sightseers will be asked to avoid both places.

Guesses as to probable attendance at the mass meeting ranged from 10,000 to 300,000. The U. A. W. A. claims a membership of more than 300,000, located principally in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana.

The National Guardsmen to be mobilized for action at Monroe are members of the First Battalion of the 125th Infantry, of Detroit, who saw six weeks' service at Flint, Mich., last winter during the General Motors strike called by the U. A. W. A.

At Detroit, Guy M. Cox, State commander of the American Legion, today commended legion posts he said aided "in maintaining law and order" during Thursday's picket clash at Monroe, and said the legion "stands ready to be the vanguard of an aroused American public in profecting our lives and liberty."

Monroe members of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars patrolled city streets armed with baseball bats Friday night, but no disturbance was reported.

Martin in his call to union locals for the "gigantic" meeting said it was designed to protest activities of "vigilantes, paid thugs and the black legion portion of the American Legion."

Columbus, Ohio, June 12 (AP).—Gov. Martin L. Davey may ask President Roosevelt to intervene in the steel strike if the Ohio executive's conference with company officials and C. I. O. leaders Tuesday fails to produce an agreement, it was learned reliably tonight.

Gov. Davey is seriously considering whether to request the President to call a conference of company and labor officials.

Meanwhile, it was reported, C. I. O. leaders are asking governors of six other States affected by the strike to make similar requests to the President.

The conference Tuesday will be a continuation of one in which the Governor sought to have Phillip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; John Owens, Ohio representative of the C. I. O., and officials of the Republic Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., agree on a peace plan Friday night.

The conference recessed early today after nearly ten hours of discussion as company officials remained adamant in their opposition to signing a contract with the C. I. O. They were J. C. Argetsinger, vice president and general counsel of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and J. A. Voss, director of industrial relations for Republic.

Roosevelt Mediation.

Springfield, Ill., June 12 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner said tonight he had been advised that an effort would be made to hold a conference with President Roosevelt at Washington Wednesday in an effort to settle the steel strike.

The Governor said a telegram from aVn Bittner, regional director at Chicago for the Steel Workers Organization Committee, said Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio would call President Roosevelt Monday and ask that a strike conference be called.

Senate Is Ready To Open Study Of Tax Evasion

6 Finance Committeemen Chosen for Joint Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

Six Senators assumed last night the Senate's share of a joint Congressional investigation of tax dodging.

To the joint committee, Vice President Garner automatically appointed the six senior members of the Senate Finance Committe, which has charge of tax legislation. They are: Senators Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi; La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin; King (Democrat), Utah; George (Democrat), Georgia; Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts), and Capper (Republican), Kansas.

Six House members have still to be named, but leaders said they would be members of the Ways and Means Committee, in which all revenue leigslation originates. In fact there was a general expectation that Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, would head the joint committee.

Tax on Bonds Sought.

Meanwhile, Senator Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, made public an exchange of correspondence with the Treasury in which the latter, over the signature of Roswell Magill, as Acting Secretary, reiterated its long standing position in favor of a constitutional amendment making the income from Federal, State and municipal securities subject to taxation.

The forthcoming inquiry into tax avoidance is in response to a request by President Roosevelt, who said evasion by the wealthy costs the Government large sums.

Of the six Senators appointed, King, George, Walsh and Capper have been in disagreement with President Roosevelt on some questions, notably the court reorganization bill. La Follette has been a stanch Administration supporter on most subjects.

Harrison, closely identified with the Administration leadership of the Senate, also has been a strong backer of the President.

Heavy Responsibility.

It was expected that he, with his gift for bitingly sarcastic questioning, would take a leading part in the committee's job when persons alleged to have evaded taxes take the witness stand.

Doughton, a North Carolinian with a slow drawl and a head for figures, also is expected to share the brunt of the investigative work.

What bearing the make-up of the Senate half of the committee would have on the publicity features of the investigation was a subject of considerable speculation in Washington.

If data contained in income tax returns is to be made public, it can only be by a majority vote of the joint committee.

Harrison, however, told the Senate, when the investigation resolution was up this week, that "the searching light of publicity" would be turned upon any who may be found to have evaded tax payments, as one means of stopping such practices.

Taxi Extension Granted.

Applicants for taxicab licenses were granted a month's extension of time to July 15 for inspection and approval of their cabs, the Board of Commissioners announced yesterday. Drivers were urged to bring their cabs in for inspection at the District Building before 10:30 a. m. daily.

Dies Asks Halt On Gold Buying With U.S. Bonds

Texan Preparing Bill to Stop Financing; Cites Possible Results.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday he was drafting legislation that would compel the Treasury to stop financing gold purchases by issuing tax exempt bonds and to pay for the metal with gold certificates exclusively.

Back of the proposal, he said, is a growing concern in Congress over the amassing of about half the world's monetary gold in the United States. With increasing frequency, references to the gold stock have been bobbing up in House debate.

Dies said the measure, to be introduced tomorrow, would provide these advantages:

1. It would lift from the taxpayers the burden of having to pay interest on the bonds issued to buy gold. On the idle gold the Government now owns the charge is about $70,000 daily, he said.

2. Gold acquired would be put into circulation through its paper representative—the gold certificate.

May Become Worthless.

3. Cash money gradually would be substituted for credit money, and thus alternate periods of booms and depressions might be avoided.

"If we keep on buying gold at the present rate," the Texan asserted, "it is not at all impossible that within 12 months foreign nations will abandon the use of gold and resort to silver or international exchange agreements such as Germany now has.

"When these nations devise a substitute for gold as a medium of international exchange, our vast holdings of gold will be practically worthless."

Dies said his bill would put gold purchases on about the same basis as silver purchases, that it was not inflationary and that it did not mean a return to the gold standard.

Would Be Backed by Gold.

Under the gold reserve act of 1934, he said, the Treasury has authority to finance gold buying by issuing tax exempt, interest bearing bonds or by paying in coin or currency. But, using only the first method, he said, it is buying gold at a rate of $1,500,000,000 a year and storing it like corn in a crib so that it will not increase bank reserves and stimulate credit inflation.

Under the silver purchase act, of which he is co-author, Dies said the white metal must be bought with silver certificates.

The gold certificates would not be redeemable in gold, but would be backed 100 per cent by it, he asserted.

Lt. Col. John Keeler A Hospital Suicide

Lieut. Col. John P. Keeler, United States Army, retired, 55, killed himself at St. Elizabeths Hospital early yesterday. Hospital attaches said Keeler, who had been confined there for about five years, stabbed himself twice with a weapon fashioned from a coat hanger. He died almost immediately.

A native of Clyde, Mo., he was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1907, joining the Coast Artillery Corps. He was graduated from the Coast Artillery School, Fort Monroe, Va., in 1916. He served through the various grades, transferring to the Quartermaster Corps in 1920. His service included duty throughout the United States and in the Philippines. During the World War, he served as major and lieutenant colonel, and was with the American Expeditionary Force in France during 1918 and 1918. He was retired at his own request in 1922, and was promoted to lieutenant colonel, retired, in 1930.

Lieut. Col. Keeler is survived by two sisters, Josephine and A. C. Keeler, of Kansas City, Mo. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Successor to the Public Archives Commission of the American Historical Association, which functioned from 1899 to 1936, its objects are to promote sound principles of archival economy and to facilitate co-operation among archivists and their agencies.

Through organized action the society hopes to make the public and officials of National, State and local governments more aware of the value of historical records and of the necessity of preserving them properly.

In order to carry out its aim, the society has named committees to investigate the fields of classification and cataloging of archives, terminology, training of archivists, reduction of archival material, publication of material, and other branches of the science.

Jewish Pickets March Before Polish Embassy

More than 100 members of the Jewish People's Committee, including about 40 children, paraded yesterday afternoon in front of the Polish Embassy, Sixteenth and Fuller streets northwest, bearing placards protesting against treatment of Jewish minorities in Poland.

The picketing, which was supervised by five policemen from the Tenth Precinct, lasted only half an hour and was without incident. A committee, composed of Thomas Davis, Dr. G. Borisow and G. Shinberg, presented a resolution to a member of the embassy staff, but did not confer with any of the attaches. Following the picketing, the group listened to speeches by their leaders and a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union.

D. C. Officials Approve N. Y.'s Traffic Speed

Visiting Officials Consider Raising Limit During Rush Time Here.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 12.—Leaving here tonight after a three-day inspection of Manhattan traffic conditions, a group of Washington highway officials, headed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, were strongly impressed with local methods of relieving downtown congestion.

Speed is New York's keynote. With a large volume of traffic constantly using main thoroughfares, signal lights permit autos to travel at high speeds for nearly a dozen blocks at a time. Pedestrians, under penalty of law, are required to cross intersections promptly and only on signals.

It was suggested that Washington's rush hour congestion problem could be aided by an increased speed limit on principal streets to and from the Mall triangle. Van Duzer pointed out that this would necessitate a change in the timing of the District's present system of signal lights.

Since June, 1933, when New York first started its intensive and continuous drive to promote traffic safety, pedestrian and motor vehicle accidents in the congested area have shown a marked decrease.

Convictions Increased.

According to Col. Harold G. Fowler, deputy police commissioner in charge of traffic, convictions for traffic violations have increased more than 70 per cent. In 1933, only 27 per cent of all highway arrests ended in court convictons. Now, said Col. Fowler, the figure has jumped to 98½ per cent.

Antinoise campaigns, Col. Fowler declared, have greatly helped to control traffic and prevent accidents. An example of this was brought strongly home to members of the visiting Washington delegation last night when the taxi in which they were riding was stopped by a policeman.

The driver had been constantly honking his horn during a brief tieup. The policeman, courteous, but firm, warned the driver to be patient. An argument ensued and the driver was ordered to appear in court in answer to a charge of "unnecessary noise."

"Honkers" Here Assailed.

"That is the kind of enforcement we could use in Washington," remarked Van Duzer. "Horn honkers—and we have far too many of them—are serious problems. Knowingly or otherwise, they constitute a menace to safe driving."

Throughout the Times Square and midtown section of Manhattan, prominent signs warning of traffic dangers are displayed. Pedestrians are told to exercise caution in crossing streets and drivers are admonished that "safety is the best policy."

Principal purpose of the Washington delegation's visit was a survey of New York's elevated highway system. It has been proposed to construct high-speed, elevated roadways across Rock Creek Park and from Key Bridge into the Mall area via K street northwest.

En route back to Washington, Van Duzer and Whitehurst, accompanied by Lloyd Smoot, District highway planner, and J. N. Robertson, designer, plan to visit Philadelphia's traffic department.

Van Duzer and Whitehurst will later confer on recommendations for a solution to Washington's problem.

H. L. Kerwin Rites Slated Tomorrow

Requiem mass for Hugh L. Kerwin, 64, for 24 years director of United States Conciliation Service, Department of Labor, will be said at 10 a. m. tomorrow in St. Joseph's Church, Second and C streets northeast. The veteran labor official died of heart attack Thursday night at his home, 632 A street southeast.

Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Kerwin was a nationally known figure, having taken part in labor problems throughout the country. He was talking by long distance phone to one of his field directors about a Midwest strike only 10 minutes before his death. The attack which took his life came on his forty-first wedding anniversary.

Vast Scout Camp Site Ready For International Jamboree

30,000 Youngsters Arriving in Capital June 30 Will Consume 250 Tons of Food Daily, Officials Estimate.

With camping plans completed and all "administration buildings" erected, Boy Scout officials yesterday turned their attention to food supplies for the 30,000 Scouts who will come to Washington on June 30 for a ten-day national Jamboree on the banks of the Potomac.

"It will take 250 tons of food each day. The regular Boy Scout menu will be provided, and there will be three full meals a day," said Harvey A. Gordon, director of engineering, who supervised the layout of the 350-acre camp.

"The camp now covers all the ground assigned to it, and everything will be 'ready to roll' pretty soon," Gordon declared.

Crack troops of Scouts will be camped at Constitution avenue and Seventeenth street, where 800 American delegates to the International Jamboree in Holland in August and Scouts from 24 different countries will have their tents.

First among the foreign Scouts expected to arrive will be the Lithuanian delegation, due on June 23.

Canada is sending 164 Scouts; England, 54; Newfoundland, 22; Poland, 24; Honolulu, 45; Nassau, 25; Puerto Rico, 26; Holland, 20. Among other countries represented will be Cuba, Mexico, Sweden and Chile.

This is the first national Jamboree to be held in Washington, the 1935 encampment scheduled for the city having been postponed due to an outbreak of infantile paralysis.

To prevent loss from postponement or any other mishap that might be suffered this year, the Jamboree has been heavily insured.

Already, approximately $1,000,000 has been spent to equip the camp.

Highlights among the entertainment to be offered by the Scouts will be six large shows given in the camp arena, with from 500 to 3,000 boys as actors each time.

Probably the show best depicting Scout activities will be that staged by Scouts from Texas, Oklahoma and other Western States and called "The Oklahoma Rush." A frontier town will be erected and blown away by an artificial tornado. Then 250 first-aid teams rush onto the scene and demonstrate their level-headed ability in the face of disaster.

New England has named its show "From Plymouth Rock to Jamboree." "The Pioneers" is the name used by Scouts from the first States opened up west of the Alleghanies. The Southern group will have a cotton field set out near their camps, with thousands of blooming plants growing in buried cans.

President Roosevelt, who is president ex-officio of the Boy Scouts of America, will make a special drive through the encampment on the south bank of the Potomac on July 7 and has indicated that he will visit the tents of Scouts from Dutchess County, N. Y., his home county.

Pat Harrison Installed as Leader at Frolic on Himes' Estate.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 12.—Many members of the Alfalfa Club of Washington saw alfalfa for the first time today at an outing on estate of Joseph H. Hines, Prospect Hall, near here.

After installing Senator Pat Harrison as president, members donned colored bandanas, overalls and huge straw hats and assisted in harvesting the alfalfa crop. Senator Harrison graced the seat of the horse-drawn mower while members otherwise assisted.

Several hundred prominent persons were on hand for the affair. In addition to members of the club, Senators, Representatives and other Federal officials, Gov. Harry W. Nice, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor joined in the fun.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, another Maryland governmental prospect, and David C. Winebrenner, 3d, former Secretary of State under the late Albert C. Ritchie, were among the guests, as was Mayor Lloyd C. Culler, of Frederick.

With the Alfalfa Club flag flying from the flagpole of the estate, Senator Harrison rode to his inauguration in an ancient coach, drawn by a fine team of horses. A colored coachman drove the team. The coach halted in front of the mansion house for the formal inauguration ceremonies.

Many of the guests arrived in time for lunch and remained for dinner and dancing in the evening. The Maryland National Guard band provided music during the afternoon. One of the highlights of the afternoon entertainment was an act provided by three of the elephants from the Jack Hoxie circus, which was showing here today.

Man Admitting Robbery Placed On Probation

Smallwood Given 'Another Chance' in Fairfax Dairy Case.

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court Friday placed Walter Smallwood, colored, on probation for three to six years, following a plea of guilty to a charge of robbing the Fairfax Farm Dairy of about $3,000, a charge that involved also J. William Tomlinson, erstwhile attorney for Gaston B. Means, and Philip John Pratt.

Tomlinson was recently convicted of robbery in connection with the theft of $785 from Sam Siratonis, Fourteenth street tailor, who was savagely beaten about the head and robbed by two colored men. The men named in that instance, in addition to Tomlinson who was described by witnesses as the master mind, were Pratt and Charles Henry Bass, colored. Bass pleaded guilty to the robbery and testified for the Government.

Pointing out that Smallwood had aided in the prosecution of the Siratonis case, Justice Gordon said that he had no prior criminal record and was deserving of another chance. He remarked that Tomlinson, who still has to face the Fairfax Farms Dairy charge, had been given a sentence of from three to ten years and the others, Pratt and Bass, slightly lesser terms.

Policemen J. J. Boyd and Rudyard Hesse attempted to extinguish the flames but failed. Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze, which was confined to one room, but many arrest books and teletype messages were destroyed. The damage was estimated at $200.

Barry Bill Study Set for Tomorrow

The legislative committee of the Federal Bar Association will concentrate upon a study of legislation creating a United States Civil Service board of appeals, it was announced last night by William R. Vallance, assistant legal adviser of the State Department and committee chairman.

The Barry bill, the most recently proposed legislation along these lines, will be discussed at the committee's meeting tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the University Club. The committee will also consider pending legislation regarding retirement of Civil Service employes and the administrative court bill at future meetings.

Federal Tangle Delays Opening Of New Fidelity

Treasury, FHLB Disagree on Handling of Assets of Closed Bank.

Efforts to organize the First Federal Savings & Loan Association as successor to the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association have been held up indefinitely, it was learned last night, because of the failure of Treasury officials to sign a contract for the transfer of assets.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, anticipating reorganization of the defunct association to set it on an operating basis, recently proposed a contract under which the board would take over all assets of the Fidelity and assign them to the First Federal Savings & Loan Association.

With the approval of the Treasury Department, which has control of the assets, the petition for reorganization would have gone to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia for authorization.

It was pointed out last night the Treasury Department wanted provisions in the contract by which it would be privileged "to clean up certain details", in connection with the receivership. It also was said Treasury officials want $50,000 withheld from the building association's assets to enable them to finish the work they have started.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board does not favor holding out that sum.

Approximately 3,000 shareholders in the Fidelity Building & Loan Association have so far failed to file claims with the receiver, it was reported, and the Treasury Department is anxious to gather up these "loose ends" before proceeding with further plans for reorganization.

The new organization, if completed, would purchase assets of the closed association and make available 85 cents on the dollar to shareholders of the defunct association.

Diesel-Powered B.&O. Train Sets Non-Stop Record

By the Associated Press.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, ended here last night the longest non-stop railroad run ever made east of the Mississippi River.

President Willard stepped from his special train at 8:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time) to announce the 569-mile trip from Cincinnati to Washington was made in exactly 12 hours, with no attempt at a speed record.

He added the chief purpose of the run was to test one of the B. & O.'s new 3,600-horsepower Diesel-electric locomotives, without exceeding present speed restrictions on any part of the line. The Diesel engine, he said, negotiated two ridges of the Allegheny Mountain with no difficulty.

Accompanying Willard as his guests were Sir Josiah Stamp, chairman of the board of the London, Midland & Scottish Railway, and Lady Stamp.

Randolph-Macon Alumni Seek $200,000 Drive to Aid School

Graduates to Present Plan to Trustees Tuesday; College Opens 105th Commencement Program; Frank Bane Speaks.

By the Associated Press.

Ashland, Va., June 12.—The Society of Alumni of Randolph-Macon College voted today to recommend to the board of trustees that steps be taken to launch within a year a campaign to raise $200,000 for the advancement of the college.

James Mullen, of Richmond, chairman of the executive committee of the board of trustees, presented the project and said it had been approved by his committee.

Among those speaking in favor of the plan was Emory P. Barrow, Lawrenceville attorney and member of the House of Delegates, the new president of the society.

The recommendations will be presented to the board Tuesday.

Randolph-Macon's 105th commencement program opened today with the celebration of alumni day that included a talk by Frank Bane, executive director of the National Social Security Board.

Speaking on changing concepts of government, Bane warned that "if we cannot solve our pressing and acute economic and social problems—well, the experience of some of our European nations may mark the road that we shall be forced to travel."

The Rev. J. Manning Potts, presiding elder of the Richmond district of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and retiring president of the alumni society, spoke briefly at the conclusion of Bane's address, stressing the importance of the small denominational college in America today.

Old Building F Will Be Razed To Clear Mall

Temporary Structure Is Near Site of Mellon Art Gallery.

Work on tearing down Temporary Building F, at Seventh to Ninth streets near Constitution avenue, will begin about July 1, Clay J. Guthridge, chief of the division of Government space control of the National Parks Service, announced yesterday. Officials expect to open bids on the demolition about June 25, the actual razing to begin immediately afterwards.

Secretary Ickes had decreed that the building must be torn down immediately, to open up the Mall vista. The new Mellon Art Gallery will be constructed to the east, so that demolition of Temporary Building F will clear the setting for the new gallery.

When Building F is demolished, the only war-time structure remaining in the Mall, officials pointed out, will be Building E, located on the west side of Sixth street. This building will remain standing for some time, they continued, since it is more solidly constructed, and is of the same status as the Navy and Munitions buildings.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, principal occupant of the F Building, has moved to the North Interior Building at Eighteenth and F streets. Agricultural activities, also housed in F Building, are moving to the Agriculture Building, while Procurement Division units are going to the Federal warehouse with the main procurement group.

The Civil Service Commission examining rooms will be located at Seventh and I streets; Treasury units there at present are moving to the Printcraft Building. General Accounting Office groups, formerly in the Civil Service Building, will move to the Firestone Garage at Third street and Independence avenue southwest.

Physician Cites Many Benefits Of Boys' Clubs

Dr. Lind Likens Movement to Preventive Medicine; $75,000 Sought.

Likening the police boys' clubs to the doctors of preventive medicine, Dr. John E. Lind, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, yesterday addressed police officials, who are controlling the $75,000 drive to raise funds for delinquent boys.

Before Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police and organizer of the local clubs, Dr. Lind described the difficult road which the poor boys in a large city must walk.

"Nowadays civilization is closing in on youth," Dr. Lind stated. "He goes through school and into a job. His success usually depends on how well he can conform to system. If he works hard, keeps good hours and saves his money, perhaps he can retire at 60 and rest the balance of his life. With such prospects it is small wonder that sometimes, even in the most respectable families, some youth will run away or break into a store or attempt a holdup."

Dr. Lind reminded the policemen who are soliciting funds through the city that the work they are doing is striking at the roots of crime by healthy education and training of idle boys.

"The city boy who has been loafing in front of drugstores and poolrooms will learn with some surprise that there is just as much fun to be gained by playing games and taking part in athletics as by smoking cigarets and telling shady stories. He will learn to use 12-ounce gloves, instead of brass knuckles, and find that there is just as much excitement in a relay race as dodging a cop around a corner."

Mrs. M. J. Richards' Funeral Held Here

Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Minnie J. Richards, widow of Robert Morris Richards, at St. Alban's Episcopal Church. Burial was private.

Mrs. Richards died Thursday night at the age of 75 at her home, 3307 Macomb street, after a four months' illness. Her husband, who died in 1923, was once head of the local office of the Barber Asphalt Paving Co. business here.

The daughter of the late George J. Johnson, a prominent merchant of this city and Baltimore, Mrs. Richards was a native and lifelong resident of Washington. She was a member of Our Flag Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and active in the work of St. Alban's Church.

Three sons, Irving R., Janvier and Lawrence M. Richards, of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Lawrence A. Adams, of Searsdale, N. Y., and Mrs. Frances Hodges, of Washington, survive.

Jordon, Spared, Ponders Move For New Trial

Convicted Slayer Also Wonders Where He Will Serve Sentence.

Two matters of vital interest to Thomas Jordon, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by President Roosevelt, still awaited action yesterday. Meanwhile, the slayer of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes began getting used to the comparatively lively routine in the felony tier after spending 25 months in District Jail's death row.

One question concerned his transfer to begin serving his life sentence. The other was the possibility of a bill being introduced in Congress enabling Jordon to ask for a new trial on the murder charge.

As to the former, no indication was given yesterday where the former Capital busboy will be permanently imprisoned. Ordinarily, District long-termers are sent to Lorton Reformatory, though occasionally there are exceptions.

Whether Harry T. Whelan, attorney for Jordon, would seek special legislation to pave the way to a new trial was still in doubt. Attorney General Cummings already is considering Whelan's recommendations that existing statutes be liberalized to permit the introduction of new evidence in capital offense cases at any time following passing of sentence.

Officials expressed the opinion, however, that such revision of the laws would not benefit Jordon, who would require special action by Congress to obtain a retrial.

2 Boy Explorers' Day-Long Safari Ends in Alexandria

Two 9-year-old admirers of the late Martin Johnson and Frank Buck yesterday conducted a safari that started out from their homes in the 2300 block of Cathedral avenue, continued by Boy Scout Jamboree headquarters, past Washington Airport, into the wilds of the jungles around Alexandria, and ended ignominiously in a watch tower on the Southern Railroad, 4 miles from Alexandria station.

The two explorers were Tommy Mayfield, son of Mrs. Lucille B. Mayfield, and Bobby Kelly, son of Mrs. Leo Kelly. The two boys are boon companios; in the past they have gone on frequent expeditions through Rock Creek Park and the National Zoological Park.

Yesterday at 2:30 p. m. they started on another expedition, armed with axes, Boy Scout knives, food, other camping equipment and a $1 bill. Gradually they extended their hike, looking for new fields to conquer, till they finally wandered into the railroad tower near Alexandria late in the evening, dead tired and ready to go home.

The tower watchman, J. Marshall Fitzhugh, called their parents, let them sleep for a few hours and drove them back to Washington late in the evening.

Filling Station's Erection Attacked

Vigorous opposition to the establishment of an oil and gasoline filling station at the southwest corner of Connecticut avenue and N street has been voiced by the Connecticut Avenue Association.

A resolution voicing the protest of the group held that the erection of such a station would be detrimental to the business of the members of the organization and "highly injurious to public safety."

Action of the association was precipitated by a notice received by property owners within 200 feet of the proposed station, under the recently promulgated regulation doing away with the securing of consents.

Woman's Leg Broken When Struck by Auto

Anne Richardson, of 2126 Connecticut avenue, was treated for a fractured left leg at Casualty Hospital last night after being struck by an auto while crossing the intersection at Twenty-first street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Police said the car was operated by Irving Archer, colored, 29, of 2506 I street northwest. He was taken to No. 3 Precinct Station and charged [illegible] passing a red light.

Bumper Crops Spur Farm Plea For '1937 AAA'

Price Decreases Predicted Unless Congress Passes Bill Before Recess.

By Russell Smith.

The same quickening rains that in recent weeks have produced the prospect of bumper crops throughout the country also put new life this week into the drive of the Administration and organized farmers for general agricultural legislation at this session of Congress.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace reiterated their recommendations for passage of the pending agricultural adjustment act of 1937, the work principally of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Representatives of 17 State farm bureau federations and co-operative associations drafted and sent to the White House, to Wallace and to members of appropriate Congressional committees a plea for enactment of the bill by Congress "before its summer recess."

Big Wheat Crop Predicted.

These events transpired within 24 hours after the Agriculture Department's quarterly crop report had announced prospects of the biggest wheat crop in six years. In their statement Friday, the farmer representatives said a similar outlook exists for the five major crops included in the bill's provisions.

The statement said, in part:

"The large acreages already planted to the basic agricultural commodities covered in the bill are such that if followed with normal growing conditions, will result in burdensome surpluses and resultant serious declines in the price levels for such commodities.

"We, therefore, respectfully urge your favorable consideration of the proposed bill and its enactment by Congress before its summer recess, that the Government may be prepared to establish a permanent program in co-operation with farmers."

Wallace Issues Warning.

The President's reaffirmation of his desire for such legislation was made at his press conference in response to a question.

Wallace appeared before the Senate Agriculture Committee. His testimony differed little from the statement he made on behalf of the bill before the corresponding House committee last month, except that he clashed briefly with Senators Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, committee chairman.

"A worse situation than that of 1932-1933 is quite conceivable," the Secretary said, if bumper crops continue, and he added:

Wilson Fought Draft Armies, Old Files Show

Records of Peace Parley Reveal Plan for League to Ban Conscripts.

By the Associated Press.

Long, secret minutes of conversations between the "Big Four" at the Paris Peace Conference disclosed yesterday that Woodrow Wilson, founder of the League of Nations, regretted the League had not abolished conscription in the world's armies.

The records of the meeting between President Wilson, David Lloyd George, of England; Georges Clemenceau, of France, and Premier Orlando, of Italy—held at Wilson's house in Paris May 23, 1919—are published for the first time in a State Department volume of foreign relations in that year.

Wilson's opposition to conscription was expressed during his unsuccessful effort to have Russian factions, then fighting the new Bolshevik government, promise that they would not force peasants to serve in their armies.

Considered Aiding Kolchak.

The "Big Four" were at the moment considering extending assistance to Admiral Kolchak and his "White" Russians, then fighting the "Reds," who had overthrown the czarist and Kerensky governments.

As conditions for that help, the "Big Four" drew up a dispatch to Kolchak demanding that he pledge the establishment of a constituent assembly in free elections; make no effort to restore the old land system or revive special classes in Russia; recognize the independence of Poland and Finland, previously part of the Russian Empire; consult the League of Nations on a solution of independence claims by Estonia, Lativia and Lithuania; abolish conscription and recognize Russia's national debts.

Concerning conscription, the minutes disclose the following exchange of opinion:

"M. Clemenceau objected to the proposed abolition of conscription as one of the conditions.

Regretted Abolition.

M. Orlando agreed.

"President Wilson said that although he had been in favor of it, he regretted that the Covenant of the League of Nations had not abolished conscription.

"Mr. Lloyd George said * * * he was convinced that somehow or other, conscription must be got rid of in Russia. Otherwise, he was apprehensive lest Russia might raise 6,000,000 of soldiers and, sooner or later, Russia might come into the German orbit."

The League of Nations armaments yearbook shows that many of the world's nations, including members of the League, now have military conscription. Latest figures also indicate that Soviet Russia has a regular army of 1,545,000 and trained reserves of 19,490,000, the world's largest military force.

Agrees to Substitute.

Under Clemenceau's insistence that conscription be not made one of the conditions, President Wilson finally agreed to substitute a phrase calling for limitation of armament:

"That as soon as a government for Russia has been constituted on a democratic basis, Russia should join the League of Nations and cooperate with the other members in the limitation of armaments and of military organization throughout the world."

Clemenceau, Orlando and Lloyd George agreed to that change and it was incorporated in the draft note to Admiral Kolchak. Kolchak's eventual defeat, however, and the Soviet's grasp of power over all Russia nullified the entire document.

Rep. Celler Wants U. S. To Be Refugee Haven

New York, June 12 (AP).—A Congressman made a street-corner speech today in Union Square, New York's open-air forum for soap-box orators. Representative Emanuel Celler, of Brooklyn, addressed a mass meeting sponsored by several liberal groups in support of his bill, which, he said, "would assure aliens of asylum in the United States of America if they are refugees because of racial, religious or political reasons."

Making clear that he is a New Deal Democrat and not a radical, Congressman Celler emphasized his point by including Russia's Stalin in an attack on dictators, a rare sentiment in Union Square.

New Yorker Advertises 6 Years Wedded Bliss

New York, June 12 (AP).—After six years, Norman Dine is still happily married and he wants the world to know it.

"My wife, Tesse, not having left my bed and board after six years, I am cheerfully responsible for all debts incurred by her," read the advertisement he published in the personal column of a local newspaper today, his wedding anniversary.

House Divided by District Line Pays Dividend in Tax Savings

Dewey Radcliffs' Garage Is in D. C. and Dog Is Trained to Stay on Maryland Side, All of Which Means Lower License Fees.

A house divided is not always a liability, the experience of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey M. Radcliff, 5910 Dalecarlia place, has shown. The Radcliff house is divided, not against itself, but by the intangible District line, which runs diagonally across the back yard.

Their built-in garage is in the District but the house proper is in Maryland. For ten years, ever since the house was built, they have been finding new advantages in the odd situation.

In their back yard is the original Federal boundary stone marking the District line, which was placed in 1791. The weather-scarred and ivy-encrusted stone has been under the protective care of the Daughters of the American Revolution since 1915.

The Radcliffs vote in Maryland, at Brookmont, "but we always buy District tags for our car. The garage and side road are in the District entirely," Mrs. Radcliff explained. "This amounted to a saving of $14 the first year. Even since the personal property tax law started reaching automobile owners with District tags we have found it cheaper to own a car in the District."

The side door of the home is in the District, so they receive their mail by carrier twice a day at the house. If they had to depend upon Maryland delivery, they would have to drive 5 miles to the nearest Maryland postoffice.

Just this year, Mrs. Radcliff discovered that Maryland dog tags are cheaper by one-half than those purveyed by the District, so their little white Spitz now is being warned against sleeping in the garage and becoming a District resident.

New Auto Union Set Up in Detroit

Detroit, June 12 (AP).—Formation of a new labor union, the Workers' Council for Social Justice, Inc., was announced here tonight by officers who said it solicits Ford Motor Co. employes and other automobile workers.

Organization of the new union was disclosed in a full-page advertisement in a Detroit newspaper, the announcement saying the union was "based upon Christian principles of social justice."

George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers of America, at once issued a statement asserting: "The name of the Workers' Council for Social Justice, Inc., smacks of Coughlinism, its program of company unionism, and its officers of company stoogism."

The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, founder and president of the National Union for Social Justice, could not be reached for comment.

Industry Buys Democrat Book At High Prices

Up to $12,500 Paid for Convention Volume; Inquiry Sought.

More than 175 corporations have sent checks for from $250 to several thousand dollars each to the Democratic national committee for de luxe copies of the 1936 Democratic convention book bearing the autograph of President Roosevelt, records on file with the Clerk of the House revealed yesterday. Up to May 30, sales of the book had netted the committee $175,905 in its effort to wipe out the 1936 campaign deficit.

Sales of the edition have been attacked by Representative Bertrand Snell (Republican), of New York, floor leader in the house, who plans to ask this week an investigation to determine whether the operation was a means of evading the law prohibiting corporations from contributing to political parties.

John L. Lewis' Mine Workers' Union was shown to have loaned the committee $50,000 in addition to its previously reported donations, and the committee received subscriptions from 10 labor unions for copies of the convention volume. Corporations which have had difficulty with unions in Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization also bought copies of the book.

Among the larger subscriptions reported were:

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $7,500; Inland Steel Corporation, $1,000; Brotherhood of Transportation Workers, Highway Drivers and Helpers, Local 107, $1,000; International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, $1,000; International Association of Machinists, $1,000; American Federation of Hosiery Workers, $1,000; Amalgamated Meatcutters, $1,000; Walter P. Chrysler, $12,500; Mrs. A. McCormick Blaine, Chicago, $5,000; Robert E. Wood, president of Sears Roebuck Co., $1,000; Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, $10,900; Anheuser-Busch, Inc., St. Louis, $10,000.

The United Mine Workers also were shown to have paid $5,000 for advertising space in the book, and $1,250 for 500 paper-bound copies.

American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation paid $5,000 for copies of the de luxe edition, General American Oil Co. of Texas, paid $2,500, as did also the Lay Improvement Corporation, New York; the Hammermill Paper Co., Erie, Pa., and the Medusa Portland Cement Co., Cleveland, Ohio. Subscriptions of $2,000 each were recorded from California Portland Cement Co., San Francisco; Premier Pabst Corporation, Milwaukee; Brown & Bigelow, St. Paul, and S. A. Healy Co., St. Paul. Subscriptions totaling $3,000 came from both the Automatic Voting Machine Co., Jamestown, N. Y., and Deere & Co., Moline, Ill.

4 Fleeing Slayers Of 2 Anti-Fascists Seen by Peasants

Bagnoles, France, June 12.—The slayers of Carlo and Nello Roselli, anti-Fascist Italians who lived in France, had 36 hours to escape before the bodies were found near here, French Surete Nationale agents said tonight.

The Roselli brothers were found slain Thursday, a few miles from their overturned automobile.

Surete agents said the two died Wednesday night when peasants saw four men leave the death car and speed away in another car just before 9 o'clock. All trace of the second car was lost.

Marx Dormoy, minister of the interior, announced that all Italians living in France would be placed under surveillance.

Louis A. Potter directs his choir in a performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury" in the assembly room of Calvary M. E. Church Friday night. The cast: Judge, Sam Cotton; Plaintiff, Gladys Taylor; Defendant, Merle Gates; Usher, Joseph Wells; Counsel, Finley Choston; Foreman of the Jury, Herbert Vanderbeck.

Because of its unpretentious presentation and its general air of improvisation, Friday night's performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury" by the choir of Calvary M. E. Church was one of the most amusing and enjoyable this reviewer has ever witnessed. The informality exactly suited the operetta, which is too satirically gay and inconsequential to be worth elaborate staging, and since the spontaneity was combined with a training obviously thorough, the result was a lively disclosure of Gilbert's wit and Sullivan's melody.

"Trial by Jury" is the second stage work in which Arthur Sullivan and William Gilbert combined their talents. They had written "Thespis" in 1872 for a public that showed no awareness of the fact that a unique partnership of composer and librettist had made its appearance. Three years later, R. D'Oyly Carte, who may or may not have had a premonition of their coming success, asked them to collaborate again. Gilbert, an indefatigable playwright on his own account, promptly produced the libretto, and Sullivan composed the music in three weeks.

Beneath its merriment and nonsense, this operetta drives home some telling shafts at the quality of legal justice. With the license of a court jester, Gilbert darts his jibes at the procedure in a breach of promise case, and Sullivan abets with musical quirks. Satire is of the essence of all of the operas in which this incomparable pair pooled their resources.

Gilbert's clever hits were all directed at the foibles of humanity, and Sullivan's inventiveness took the ironical turn of parodying, whenever he had the opportunity, the more vulnerable parts of grand opera. A striking example of this burlesque in "Trial by Jury" is the delightfully ludicrous sextet, "A nice dilemma we have here that calls for all our wit," which demolishes with its fun the dramatic solemnity of the sextet in "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Lipstick Bloc's War on Cosmetic Taxes Is Futile

By the Associated Press.

A powder-and-lipstick bloc rebelled Friday against taxing the things that women put on their faces, but masculine members of Congress quickly quashed the revolt.

While the House was debating an extension of "nuisance taxes," Representative Nan Wood Honeyman (Democrat), Oregon, stepped to the fore. On behalf of Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, who could not be present, she asked repeal of a $15,900,000 tax on cosmetics and toilet preparations.

She read Mrs. Norton's notes, which said repeal would be a "matter of simple justice" to the average American women, to whom cosmetics are a necessity.

Sen. Bone Seeks End to Japanese Alaskan Fishing

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, appealed to the State Department Friday to stop "incursions" by Japanese fishermen into American waters off Alaska.

Bone wrote the department that unless it could put a stop to the invasion, Congress would have to take steps to "effect trade reprisals."

He called to the attention of the department a letter from the Association of Pacific Fishermen, in Seattle, saying 101 Japanese fishing boats were off the Alaskan coast.

Bone told newspapermen the issue also involved national defense. He said he had evidence Japanese vessels, under the guise of fishing, had made surveys and soundings of Alaskan waters which would be invaluable in event of naval operations in the area.

U. S. Medical Aid Not on Program, President Says

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt asserted Friday he is giving not thought to legislation embracing any form of federalized medicine.

The question was asked at his press conference in view of a speech before the American Medical Association yesterday at Atlantic City by Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, inviting the association to co-operate with the Administration to provide medical care for the poor.

The President refused to comment on Lewis' remarks, saying he had not read them. Later, White House officials said Mr. Roosevelt had sent a message of greeting for the convention to Dr. Charles Gordon Heyd, president of the association.

Chiang Kidnaper Is Given $300,000, Told to Travel

Nanking, China, June 11 (AP).—China's treasury gave a million dollars Mex (about $300,000 in United States currency) Friday to Gen. Yang Hu-chen, erstwhile coleader of the Sianfu mutiny in which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was kidnaped, and told him to take a trip around the world.

He will sail June 29 aboard the liner President Hoover toward Los Angeles with a commission from Chiang to "investigate military and economic conditions in the United States and Europe," well-informed persons said.

Chiang, however, neither expects nor desires to receive reports from the man who helped keep him captor for 13 days last December. Nor does China expect to get any of the money back.

Stone Hits Homer; Wes Gets Double

Rick Catches Brother Whose Debut With Griffs Is Sensation.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 12.—Out of the skilled fingers of Wesley (Cheek) Ferrell spun a magnificent assortment of slow-winding curves this afternoon and into the keeping of the Nats passed a 6-2 ball game.

He was out there on the pitching mound for the first time in a Washington uniform, to give duel to a White Sox rookie named J. Dungan Rigney, and his was a masterful performance.

With his brother, Rick, behind the bat flashing the signs that would direct the pitch to the individual weaknesses of the White Sox sluggers, Brother Wes served up those deceitful slow balls that literally slithered off the Chicago bats, popping harmlessly into the air or resulting in anemic grounders to the infield.

Becomes "Ferrell Day."

They had advertised it as "J. Dungan Rigney Day," in homage to the home-town boy who was apparently making good with the White Sox, and they brought out a floral offering for Rigney at the start of the game, but the day really belonged to Wes Ferrell. Because, 1 hour and 57 minutes later, when the last White Sox hitter had taken his last swing, the White Sox had only four hits to show for their efforts against the old right-hander who turned to slow-ball pitching as a livelihood when his speed deserted him in the wake of a sore arm five years ago.

Thus did the Washintgon-Boston five player swap of two days ago pay immediate dividends. The pitching member of the Ferrell family who couldn't win for the Red Sox made good for today, at least, the boast that he was a better pitcher "than that Buck Newsom" who went to the Red Sox in the deal.

And Brother Rick, behind the bat, was no drawback to the Nats, either, because it was in the seventh inning, with the score tightly tied at 2-2, and the Chicagos having a runner on base with none out, that Rick eased the tension for the Washingtons by making a superb throw to second base to catch the fleet Tony Piet stealing.

But that 2-2 tie vanished in Washington's favor in the eighth when the Nats came up with four luscious runs against young Rigney, who had been staving 'em off in those early innings despite the fact that by the end of the seventh, the Nats had eight hits to the Sox's four.

That tie vanished, as I was saying, because Johnny Stone put the wood to one of Rigney's pitches with such vigor that, when it was combined with Mike Krevich's futile dive for the ball, it became a home run.

Young Buddy Lewis, as has been his habit, started the Nats' eighth inning uprising with one of those copyrighted bunts of his down the third-base line and beat it out for a hit. Joe Kuhel breathed some life into the rally with a crisp single into rightfield that put Lewis on third, and then along came Stone.

He really swatted the ball. It was a vicious line drive to dead center that Kreevich thought he might catch with a nose-dive, but he was off in his reckoning. He came up with a mouthfull of sod, but no ball. The pellet bounded over his prostrate form, rolled to the deepest part of the centerfield fence, and Stone followed Lewis and Kuhel across the plate.

Wes Scores Travis.

The Nats got another entirely superfluous run in that inning when Wes Ferrell himself greeted Pitcher Clint Brown with his second hit of

Porter Is Marathon Victor, Dengis Second

Wins Gruelling 26-Mile Test in 2 Hours 44 Minutes 42 Seconds After Taking Lead at 8-Mile Mark; Veteran Clarence DeMar Fourth.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mel Porter, a trim, muscular chap with sprainless steel underpinning, outhoofed a field of 59 long-distance stars yesterday to win the fifth annual national marathon championship run sponsored by the Evening Star.

The Milrose A. A. ace, who competed in the four previous races without ever finishing out of the first three, negotiated the rolling curling course under fairly good weather conditions in 2 hours 44 minutes 42 seconds.

Second to Porter in one of the closest finishes ever witnessed here in a similar run was Pat Dengis, of the Stonewall Democratic Club, Baltimore, who finished in 2 hours 46 minutes and 36 seconds. He beat Jimmy Bartlett, of Canada, to the wire by a scant 27 seconds.

Fourth was the aging but still potent Clarence DeMar, a great favorite in Washington, who was only 9 seconds behind the Canadian, and to whom belongs much of the credit for Porter's popular victory. After DeMar crossed the finish line amid a tremendous ovation from the 5,000 spectators assembled there, the field straggled in irregularly, many on the verge of collapse.

The first ten was rounded out by the following men in order: Percy Wyer, Toronto; Lloyd Longman, Toronto; John Semple, Beverly, Mass.; William Wiklund, Pasaic, N. J.; Edward Wesolowski, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charles Welch, Roxbury, Mass.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, presented the puffing and proud Porter with the championship trophy immediately after the race with cameramen furiously recording the historic event for posterity. The victor wore a smile as big as the seat of his pants when called upon for a brief radio address.

"I'm glad I won," he said, "and, believe me, I was mighty scared of Dengis and the others who kept right on my trail for 20 miles. I finally shook them off and won, but I want to give them credit for a great race."

Porter particularly feared the Peruvian representative, Jose Rios, who flew here for the race, and finished twelfth in his bare feet.

"Foreigners always jinxed me in this race," he said, lying on a first-aid cot while enjoying a rubdown. In two previous races it was Dave Komonen, the Canadian, and today I was afraid that fellow would do it."

When the "foreign fright" subsided it was a cramp in his right leg that threatened to snatch victory from the eventual winner. He was seized with it while plodding up Capitol Hill, but escaped with only a mild attack. It was not until Porter was safely over the finish

Indiana Relay Team Cracks World Record

Medley Quartet Lowers Mark; Ohio State Defeated, 73-58.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 12.—Indiana University's medley distance relay teams clipped more than four seconds off the world's record for the two and a half mile event in a dual meet against Ohio State University today, but the Buckeyes won, 73 to 58.

Don Lash, Hoosier distance star, ran the mile anchor in the record-breaking medley in which Indiana hung up a mark of 10 minutes and four-tenths of a second.

The previous record, 10 minutes 4 7-10 seconds, was set in the 1935 Fresno relays by a team from the Olympic Club, Los Angeles, and was tied by the same Indiana team in the Penn relays this year.

Besides Lash, Trutt ran a half-mile, Miller a quarter and Smith three-quarters mile on the victorious medley team.

Indiana took an early lead in the meet, first between the two schools in 13 years, but the Buckeyes' superior power in field events, low hurdles and the quarter mile overcame it.

Dave Albritton, Ohio State's star Negro hurdler and jumper, lost the high jump to his teammate, Melvin Walker, also a Negro, who attempted unsuccessfully for a new world's record at 6 feet 10¼ inches after clearing the bar easily an inch lower.

Miss Stephens Sets Mark.

St. Louis, June 12 (AP).—Helen Stephens, famous woman sprint star, of Fulton, Mo., bettered the world record for the 220-yard dash here today, with a time of 25 seconds, and also bettered the American mark for the 100-yard dash. Her time for the century was 11 seconds flat.

Cycle Group Races.

The National Capital Motorcycle Club will hold the season's first motorcycle field meet and races over the Marlows Farm course today.

Helen Dettweiler Triumphs, 6-4; Wins Maryland State Golf Title

Baltimore, June 12.—Never has such golf been played in the finals of the women's Maryland State tournament as Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional Country Club, Washington, produced to defeat Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase Country Club, Washington, 6 and 4, today for her second crown.

It was a general clean-up for the young District girl who captured the medal with an 86 Tuesday. Joyce Wethered, from England, set the course record for women with 78 two years ago. If the new champion had not conceded the twelfth today, she would have been able to equal if not better the 78.

Miss Dettweiler scored four birdies and three pars on the first nine for a 37, two under women's par and two over men's, probably the best score a woman has ever made out. Miss Wethered had 40 out and 38 back.

Miss Houghton started the birdie shooting by sinking a 15-foot putt on the first for a 4. They were on in 3's. Miss Dettweiler came right back with a birdie 4 on the second, where her drive soared 225 yards from the tee, and her second, an iron, was 2 feet off the carpet.

The second hole is 418 yards from the women's tees. The third is 376 yards, and here Miss Dettweiler tallied another birdie 4. She started with a 200-yard drive and finished with a single putt.

The new champion smacked the ball on the fourth green, high and trap-guarded, 163 yards away, for par 3 and a 2-up lead as Miss Houghton drove into the left trap and across the carpet to the bank of another trap. Miss Dettweiler's third birdie on a long hole came on the 425-yard fifth in the face of two poor shots. She 1-putted it for a 3-up lead. Both were on in 3's with beautiful approaches. Miss Houghton had the better drive, 200 yards.

The sixth, 575 yards, is par 5, which the Congressional representative made with a drive to the bend of the dog's leg, on in 3 and one putt. Miss Houghton found the rough, which lost her the hole.

Miss Dettweiler's drive on the seventh was on the bank of a trap, but she halved the hole in 5's. They played the 304-yard eighth well, but the new champion one-putted it for a birdie 3. Both their ninth drives were hooked into apple orchard, so they shared it in 4's. Miss Dettweiler was 5-up at the turn to Miss Houghton's 44.

The 350-yard lake hole held no terrors for the medalist, who was on in two strokes, the drive being 225 yards. She won with par 4 to be 6 up. Miss Houghton was a little short of the water on her second. Miss Dettweiler showed signs of strain on her second on the eleventh. It only went about 15 feet, but she one-putted the carpet for par 5 to be 7 up and 7 to go.

Again Miss Houghton took a short cut, but this time it was more successful. Her twelfth tee shot was in the rough. Her second stroke cut across a dog-leg corner of trees and rough within easy chipping distance of the green. Miss Dettweiler's 195-yard drive was almost to the corner. Her second was trapped and her out was deep in the waist-high grass back of the green. It was an impossible lie and she conceded the hole.

Miss Houghton's accurate drive fell on the thirteenth green. Her second putt hesitated at the cup a split second and dropped. Miss Dettweiler was short and then over the carpet to lose and be 5 up.

The fourteenth, with its formidable band of bunkers cutting the midfairway, has told a story of doom in man a match and did so again today.

Birmingham, Mich., June 12.—Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago; Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.; Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., shot their way into American Ryder Cup team berths today in the final round of the forty-first national open championship.

With seven of the places filled, the Ryder Cup committee ruled that the other four should be decided on the basis of the totals turned in for the 36-hole P. G. A. qualifying round and the 72-hole naticnal classic.

Snead led the Ryder Cup race with a total of 430 for the 108 holes.

State Golf Title Taken By Burnett

Volney Defeats Overton by 2-1 to Climax Great Week of Golf.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

In a match that was a foregone conclusion since late Wednesday afternoon, Volney Burnett transferred the Maryland State amateur golf championship from Baltimore to Washington yesterday, relieving Spencer Overton of the crown over the 36-hole route at Manor.

By the margin of 2 and 1 Burnett climaxed a week of sub-par golf that suffered a slight let-down on the final 18 holes, but was still good enough to snuff out a late Overton rally and bring the title to this city for the third time since 1924. Roger Peacock, twice victor, is the only other Washingtonian's name on the Sherwood Forest Trophy.

Two under par for a trio of 36-hole rounds previous to yesterday, Volney's game suffered a natural relapse, but Overton also fell from his par peak. Hindered by several partial stymies the golfer-inventor was a beaten man after the ninth hole of the morning rounds, despite the closeness of the final score.

The defending champion won the first hole of the day, but lost his brief lead by driving into the woods on the sixth, Volney squaring the match with a par. Three putts cost the ultimate winner the next hole and he went 2 down for the first time in the tournament when he overshot the eighth green, but for the next eight holes he produced the most brilliant streak of play in the event.

A pair of ponderous wood shots on the ninth hole and a 12-foot putt combined for an eagle 3. The match was even on the tenth when Overton missed the green and after halving the next in par Volney won the twelfth with a birdie 3, his putt going past the cup, but hit Overton's ball and bounced back into the hole.

The afternoon affair was a see-saw proposition as Burnett lost his putting touch and Overton his usual straight-driving ability. Several of his tee shots found the woods and both golfers scrambled to their pars on several holes.

Volney's lead was increased to three on the third hole when Spence found the woods, but he lost it back by trapping his tee shot on the

25-Year-Old Golfer Gets A Final 69

Free Lance Smashes Way to Great Victory in National Event.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Birmingham, Mich., June 12.—Big, stoop-shouldered Ralph Guldahl, the man who "called" his comeback shots, climaxed an epic golf struggle today with a record-smashing triumph in the forty-first Open championship of the United States.

The 25-year-old Chicago free-lance professional, so destitute a year ago that a friend helped him get his clubs "out of hock," came from behind in miraculous finish to post a world record aggregate of 281 for big-time competition.

The Texas-born giant whipped old man par by seven full shots over the historic Oakland Hills lay-out; led his nearest rival, Slammin' Sam Snead, by two strokes, and clipped a shot from the former world and American Open championship record of 282, set just one year ago at Baltusrol by Tony Manero.

8,000 in Gallery.

Guldahl registered successive rounds of 71, 69, 72 and 69 to beat America's foremost shotmakers in a finish that had par absolutely groggy and a gallery of nearly 8,000 spectators wild with excitement. The winner was cheered by the biggest golf crowd since Bob Jones last won the event, in 1930, at Interlachen. Jones was among the onlookers.

Guldahl's final round was a rare combination of courageous recoveries and miracle shotmaking after Snead, the boy wonder from the hills of West Virginia, had posted a near-record total of 283 that represented the third best performance in tournament history.

Trailing by one shot at the outset of the fourth and final round, Guldahl shot two birdies and an eagle to register an outgoing 33 and take a three-shot lead over Snead.

Rips Course Apart.

Faltering as he entered the stretch, with a pair of bogey 5's that cost him all of his hard-won advantage, Guldahl grinned and proceeded to "rip" the course apart with a fighting finish that sent chills running along the spines of all who could scramble into places to see the big pro write a new chapter in golf history.

Birdies on the twelfth and thirteenth, due to marvelous approaches, proved decisive but they were no more vital to Guldahl's successful finish than the recoveries he made, to offset bad breaks, on two succeeding holes. Having refused to "crack" under the heaviest kind of pressure, he came "a-conquering" through the turmoil with flawless golf on the last three holes.

Through an eight-hole stretch in his march to victory—from the eighth to the fifteenth inclusive, Gudahl had exactly seven one-putt greens as he survived the strain that took an otherwise heavy toll among contenders in the final stages of the battle.

Almost four years ago, to the day, Guldahl, then a comparative unknown, missed a short putt on the home green and his chance to tie Johnny Goodman for the Open championship at Chicago. Now he's on top of the shot-making heap, with the door of opportunity open for riches as well as fame, together with a berth on the American Ryder Cup team that sails next week for England.

Wins $1,000 in Cash.

The victory was worth $1,000 in cash on the spot to Guldahl as the United States Golf Association boosted the total prize money from $5,000 to $6,000, split among 30 players, instead of the customary 20.

Second money of $800 went to Snead, who performed sensationally in his first open championship, while Wee Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., took down $700 third prize with his 285, and "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, of Chicago, at 286, carried off fourth money of $600.

Cruickshank, coming back dramatically with a 67 for the third round and finishing with a 72, missed his third gallant bid for the title since he lost a playoff to Bob Jones in 1923. The 42-year-old Scot, sentimental favorite in the big field, made a comeback reminiscent of his 69-68 finish at Fresh Meadows in 1932, when it took Gene Sarazen's then record-equaling count of 286 to win.

Gets Bad Breaks.

Cooper, last year's runner-up to Tony Manero at 284, shot successive rounds of 70, 72, 73 and 71, only to fall short once more because of a few bad breaks. "Lighthorse" Harry lost four shots on one hole—the classic sixteenth "lake hole"—and thereby landed once more among the "also rans," despite scores good enough to win nine times out of ten.

Lost completely in the concluding charge of the light brigade was Manero. The 1936 titleholder wound up 19 shots behind the winner with an even 300.

All told, five money winners bettered par for the registration book. Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, Pa., pace-maker for nearly two days of the closest kind of jockeying for positions, just got under the par wire with a total of 287. Big Ed, out in front by a stroke at the 54-hole mark, with 211, lost his putting touch in the stretch and took a final 76 that left him only the consolation of fifth money, $450.

Omaha's Johnny Goodman, making his best bid in four years to regain the crown, carried off the medal for low amateur with final rounds of 72-75 for a total of 290.

Mrs. Stanley Robinson Triumphs in Maryland Women's Tennis Event

Downs Anne Harrison in Straight Sets

Triumphs After Up-Hill Battle; Miss Bloede Wins Consolation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, June 12.—Steadiness, accuracy and greater experience gave the Maryland State women's tennis title to Mrs. Stanley Robinson, of Washington, today in straight sets at the expense of 17-year-old Anne Harrison, of Baltimore. The scores were 9—7, 6—2.

Mrs. Robinson did not get the crown so easily. She was carried to three sets by Sarah Moore, of Washington, in the quarter-finals, and to a pair of long sets in the semifinals by Edith Clark, of Washington.

It looked doubtful for the Washingtonian several times in the sizzling opening set, as Miss Harrison aced her three times in two games and held doggedly on for 16 games.

Effective at Net.

It was Mrs. Robinson's ability to take the net and run Miss Harrison back and forth that gave her numerous points. It was her deadly accurate clipping off the corners that cost the Baltimorean games. It was practically a lobless game, much to the disappointment of some Harrison rooters, who felt she could have scored by that route.

The Baltimorean opened auspiciously enough by breaking Mrs. Robinson's service to win the first game. But her rally came when she was trailing 3—1.

Each of them foot-faulted once. Each served doubles, but Miss Harrison more than Mrs. Robinson, mostly because of nervousness. The Baltimorean made too many errors. Her fore court game that worked so well in the semifinals never really got into play. She got to the net several times, but not enough, whereas Mrs. Robinson did, because Miss Harrison did not play her shots deep enough.

Miss Harrison placed some just over the net and scored on her opponent's errors to break her service and alternate the next three games to lead 4—3. She covered the court well and passed Mrs. Robinson at the net. Mrs. Robinson tied it at 4—all.

Applies Pressure.

Mrs. Robinson knotted it at 5—all and held a 6—5 advantage. In the twelfth game, Miss Harrison aced her opponent twice and played her backhand to advantage and used the same tactics to tie at 7—all. The new champion varied her speed and put on the pressure to run out the set.

Lisa Bloede, a Baltimorean, who won the consolations, is a junior of the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va., where she has been on the tennis varsity two seasons. She defeated Margaret Graham, 6—4, 6—3, the No. 1 badminton player of Washington.

Vosmik's Hit Helps Browns Defeat Yanks

Double in Ninth Inning Scores Tying and Winning Runs.

St. Louis, June 12.—Joe Vosmik's double with two mates on base and two out in the ninth inning today scored the tying and winning runs to give the St. Louis Browns a 7-to-6 victory over the Yankees. Frank Crosetti hit two homers and Lou Gehrig one for the Yanks.

Robert Riggs Wins in Dixie Net Tourney

Nashville, Tenn., June 12 (AP).—Robert Larrimore Riggs, 19, maintained his perfect batting average for the summer tennis season today by trouncing Joe Reuben Hunt, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5, in the all-California finals of the Southern Amateur tournament.

The black-haired bundle of speed and power, in his drive to the Dixie title, lost only two sets and those to defending champion Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, in the semifinals.

Riggs' whistling drives hugged the chalk lines all afternoon, his accuracy forcing Hunt into numerous errors, especially as they latter tried to take the net throughout the match.

Mrs. Jean Artzburger, of Pittsburgh, and Betty Buxton, of Memphis, annexed the Southern title in the women's doubles division. They vanquished the Atlanta tandem of Gladys Vallebuona and Etta Taylor Coyne, 6—4, 7—5.

The girls' singles diadem went to little Jessie Grossnickle, of Columbus, Miss., who breezed through Nashville's Vesta Dunn, blonde lefthander, in straight sets 6—4, 6—3.

Barney Welsh Downs Imhoff for Net Crown

Overwhelms Young Californian, 6–3, 6–3, 6–2, in Finals at Baltimore Country Club; Imhoff Kept Off Balance.

Baltimore, Md., June 12.—Barney Welsh, Middle-Atlantic tennis champion, won the Maryland State singles title by overwhelming young Douglas Imhoff, of California, in a three-set final today at the Baltimore Country Club. The score was 6—3, 6—3, 6—2, and Welsh was that far superior to the California sophomore.

The triumph returns the Maryland title to Maryland for the fourth time in 15 years. Only Johnny Howard, in 1925, and Eddie Jacobs, in 1930 and 1932, have kept the trophy within the Free State. Welsh, though he plays most of his tennis in the Washington district, entered from Rockville, Md., where he lives.

The sixteenth player on the national list lashed out with all the pace at his command to keep the dangerous youngster from the Coast off balance all the way. He never permitted Imhoff to set himself at the net as the latter did when he eliminated Paul Newton, another Californian, in the semifinals the day before.

Consequently Imhoff did not show the game of which he is capable except for a very few brief flashes. He was too busy chasing the drives that Welsh sent to the corners, or trying to puzzle out the grass-court spin of his chop strokes, which the victor mixed in plentifully with the driven shots.

Welsh's favorite weapon was a sharply angled cross court thrust off the backhand. It zipped across the net, an inch above the strap, for many placement points. Imhoff showed best in service, with five aces to his credit. Welsh didn't make an ace, but neither was he charged with a double fault, of which Imhoff had two) the second one coming just after he had fought through three adverse match points to deuce the final game.

The double championship went to the Texan pair, Lindsay Franklin and Robert Kamrath, who won from the composite team of Howard Stephens, of Yale, and Craig Neel, of California, 8—6, 6—0, 6—4.

Madison, Wis., June 12 (AP).—The University of California defeated the University of Wisconsin in varsity and freshmen crew races on Lake Mendota today. The Golden Bears finished 2½ lengths ahead of the Badger varsity, covering the 2-mile course in 10 minutes 50 seconds.

The losers finished 11 seconds behind.

The California freshmen badly outclassed the Wisconsin yearlings in a preliminary race, winning the 2-mile test by about 10 boat lengths in 10 minutes 55 seconds. The Badgers were clocked in 11:35.

Spring Hope Wins Horse Show Honor

Upperville Event a Huge Success; Many Fine Horses Shown.

By Grace Brooks.
A Staff Correspondent.

Upperville, Va., June 12.—Spring Hope, a lovely brown gelding by Mad Hatter—Culliner, owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Llangollen Farms, won the championship ribbon at the closing of the eighty-fourth annual exhibition of the famous Upperville colt and horse show, at Grafton Farms today.

Spring Hope, well-ridden by Mrs. James Hamilton, of Warrenton, won his blues that gave him his championship points in the light-weight hunter class, the ladies' hunters and the Corinthian classes. Peach Brothers' Dorothy M and Ray S. Shoemaker's Hi-Glo tied for the reserve ribbon and the judges selected Dorothy M for the second place.

The show was a decided success. The weather was ideal both days, and the crowd on the closing day was as large as in many past years. Nowhere have so many fine horses been seen was the opinion of the sportsmen who attended the show. Prominent society people were present on both days and mingled with those of the countryside in their homage to King Horse.

The youngsters put up some splendid performances in the pony classes today. Little Ann Clay Bayly, clever young rider, rode two of her mounts to victory in the saddle class for larger ponies. Her Cameo took first place and Camelot captured third. In the pony jumping classes for larger ponies, Marvin Green, riding Queen of Sheba, was thrown at the first jump. Immediately his older brother, Stanley, jr., rushed across the ring, mounted the Queen and rode her to win a blue ribbon in this class. Robert Palmer's Busy Bee, performing in a classy manner won the second place. Marvin came back in the ring later on another pony.

The biggest applause of the day was given Louis Leith, veteran rider, when entering the ring on Mrs. George P. Plummer's King Dominant. The beautiful chestnut gelding performed in a lovely manned and placed in most of his classes.

The family saddle class attracted much attention, although there was only one entry in this class. Mrs. Hugh Fontaine and her three attractive children, Jimmy and Jack Barker (twins) and Joyce Barker, were loudly applauded as they rode around the ring. The twins rode ponies identical in color and size. They were awarded a lovely silver plate.

It looked like a merry-go-round in the ladies' hunter class, as Miss Margaret Cotter, of Washington; Mrs. Billy Weatherall Jacobs, Miss Nancy Penn-Smith and Mrs. James Hamilton came in the ring time after time, and each entrance on a different mount.

The thoroughbred yearlings and 2-year-olds, shown just before the noon hour, attracted the horsemen to the ring, for many come to this show just to see these fine youngsters, many of which are heard of later on the race tracks. The yearling filly class was won by a beautiful chestnut owned by W. H. Lipscomb, horse breeder of near Leesburg. Springsbury Farms' Sly Portia took second place, and an entry of Mrs. Cary Jackson placed third.

Springsbury Farm took first in the yearling colt, with Edward Friendly and William Ziegler, jr., taking second and third. Mrs. J. T. Moore, jr., with Capt. d'Archy, won first place in the thoroughbred 2-year-olds.

The judges were James Butler, of New York, and Frank Bowditch, of Wilmington, hunters, and Humphrey S. Finney, of Annapolis, thoroughbreds.

Michigan Tankman Wins Two Events

New York, June 12 (AP).—Tom Haynie, of the University of Michigan, turned in two impressive performances today in the intercollegiate events of the Eastern intercollegiate and interscholastic swimming championships at Zach's Bay, Jones Beach, Long Island.

Haynie outclassed his field to win the 400-meter free style in 5:02.6 over a 55-yard course. The time was .6 faster than the national intercollegiate record for the slightly longer 440-yards distance. The Michigan ace then came back to win the 100-meters free style in 1:00.9. Peter Breuckel, of Yale, was second in the 400 and third in the 100.

St. Francis College of Brooklyn topped the unofficial college point scores with 12 points. Haynie's two victories gave Michigan 10, while Yale had 9.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Chicago, Ill., June 12.—Saturn, the evil planet, was nearest the earth that day in 1931 when Wesley Cheek Farrell, born under the sign of Aquarius, felt a stabbing pain in the shoulder of his $100,000 pitching arm and—all right, you scoffers, but listen . . .

POVICH.

Because Wes Ferrell takes his astrology and his horoscope seriously. Particularly susceptible to Saturn's evil influence at that time were those born under the rule of Aquarius, Ferrell relates, and it was practically fore-ordained that harm would come to him on that day.

He didn't know astrology then, hadn't studied it. But for the past three years his horoscope readings have been a regular duty with the big, good-looking pitcher who joined up with the Washington club. Unblushingly, he admits he has been won to it.

He was a pretty sad young man in the last months of that 1932 season when that awful pain in his shoulder robbed him of the fast ball that was earning him $15,000 a season with the Cleveland Indians. Doctors by the dozens he visited, but that stabbing pain persisted when he attempted to throw a ball. And then sombody suggested astrology.

"I went to see a lady in Cleveland who thought she could help me," Ferrell recited. "She read my horoscope and said that people born under the rule of Aquarius were susceptible to thyroid gland troubles. She suggested thyroid treatments, told me to winter in Florida and predicted that on February 1, when Saturn would be farthest removed from my scope, my arm would be well.

"I went to Florida, took the treatments, wound up for a pitch on February 1, for the first time and—no kidding—my arm felt swell. I reckoned there must be something to that astrology.

"Then I began to study it. It fascinated me. A Cleveland sports editor kept the dates on which I won and lost ball games. It checked perfectly with my unlucky and lucky days.

"My brother Rick was born under the rule of Libra. So was Joe Cronin. That day in Washington last month must have been the unlucky day for Libra folks. Cronin was hit in the face and had to go to the hospital on a stretcher, you remember. And the same day Rick broke his hand trying to catch a foul tip off Jess Hill's bat.

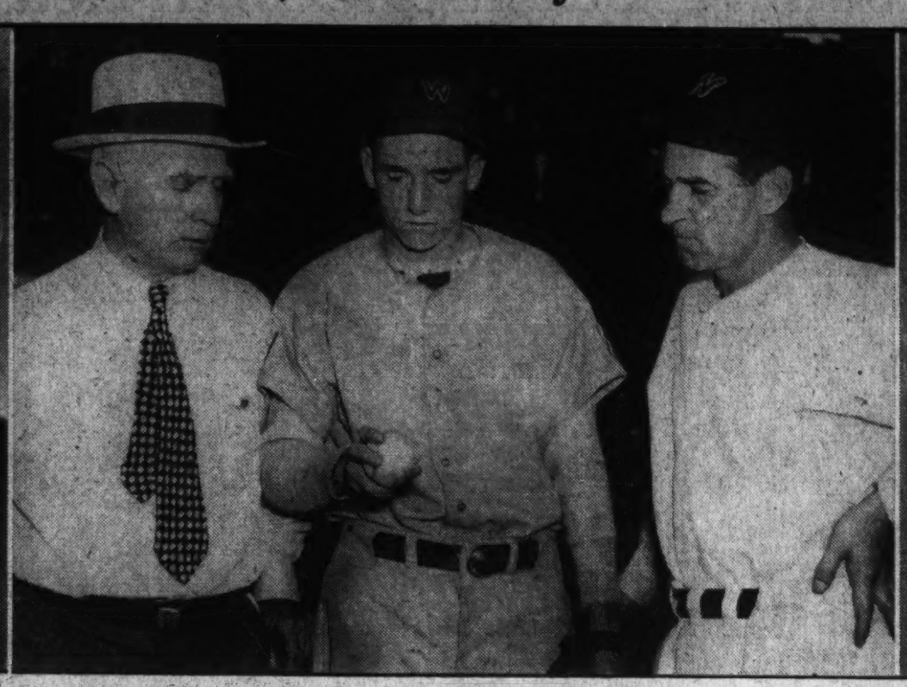
"We guys who are born under Aquarius are strange people, the horoscope says. Maybe that's where I get the reputation of being temperamental out there pitching. We play hunches and have big ideas, our chart says—do strange things, big things. Look at L

'Bucky' Jacobs, Richmond Star, Author of Three No-Hit, No-Run Games, Will Join Nats

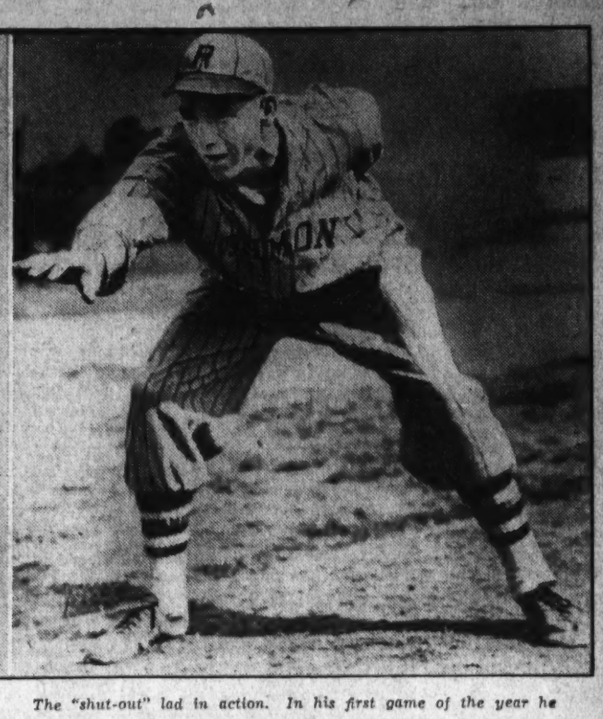
An early picture from the family album, made when the college twirler was about 18 months old. Even at that age he appears to be developing a pitcher's stance.

Student Newton Jacobs, as he looked shortly after enrolling at the University of Richmond, where he attained a high standing in athletics and kept a good average in his studies.



At Griffith Stadium, 'Bucky' spent a crucial day at the Nats' park while Stanley Harris and Clarke Griffith watched the lad demonstrate his mound talent. He showed them some excellent pegging and it was not long after his visit to the Capital that he was asked to affix his signature to a contract.

Jacobs in his basketball uniform. For a number of years he played forward for the Richmond quintet and was responsible for much of their high scoring.



The "shut-out" lad in action. In his first game of the year he managed to hold the opposing team hitless. A performance duplicated twice since then while hurling for his Alma Mater.

Guldahl Sets Record of 281 To Win Open

Chicago Free Lance Pro Burns Up Course; Snead Is Second.

This beat Frankie Strafaci, 21-year-old Brooklyn public links star, by one stroke. Strafaci, a 200-to-1 shot who had the bookmakers jittery in his first tournament appearance, faltered only on his third round, with a 77. He started with 70-72 and finished with a par 72 for his 291

Victims of the biggest blowups were Frank Walsh, of Chicago, and Jimmy Thomson, the Shawnee "Siege Gun." Both were tied for the lead at the halfway mark, with Guldahl and Dudley, but passed out of the picture with third round 78's. Thomson, with a finger infection on his left hand, finished under painful handicap with 296 to Walsh's 295.

Guldahl, a later starter, broke up the "chariot race" with his outgoing 33 on the last round. Until he caught fire near the turn, Dudley, Snead and Cruickshank were running neck and neck, separated at the sixty-third hole by only one stroke.

line and through with the ceremonies that the cramp really caught him—too late to be damaging.

DeMar killed off Rios in two individual duels that took the South American's reserve power and left him an impotent hanger-on with miles to go. The first engagement occurred at the 8½-mile mark when Rios shot ahead of the Keen schoolmaster. DeMar obligingly fell back, although they were not fighting for the lead, and permitted Rios to pass.

But his smooth, rhythmic pounding brought him up with the swarthy Peruvian again at the 15-mile post. Rios promptly galloped ahead, only to falter at the 17-mile flag, where he discarded his footgear, and continued barefooted. These two duels, according to Porter and his trainer, Addie McKenzie, who trained "Donkey" Wright, who in turn was second in the 1932 Olympics, ended Rios' hopes of winning.

It was one of the closest, hardest marathons staged here, although Porter finished looking fresh enough to dance.

At the 5-mile post Longman led with Fred Ward second; Porter, third; Dengis, fourth, and Bartlett, fifth. The field was loafing, according to one of the Playground Department's clockers, who caught the leader at this point in 27 minutes 49 3-5 seconds, as compared to 28 minutes 18 seconds for last year.

At the 8½-mile marker Porter and Dengis were fighting for the lead with the eventual winner 20 yards in front of the Baltimorean. Ward was third by 10 yards, with Longman fourth; Demar, fifth, and Rios, ready for his first challenge, sixth.

Reporter Finds Youthful Hurler Entirely Too Self-Effacing.

By Scott Hart.

Hero.

In the late of the other afternoon a crowd of students idly batted or caught at a worn baseball near one of the Gothic buildings on the rolling campus of the University of Richmond. Other students sat about on the grass watching them, and occasionally an automobile full of students would run by on one or another of the labyrinth of hard-surfaced roadways that seem like dark threads confused and tangled in the green of the university lawns.

It was quiet and cool out there. About the only sound you could hear was the worn ball being slapped by the indolent bat or, from far off, it seemed, the motor of an automobile quarreling with the steep grades of a roadway that winds off through the trees in the direction of the Country Club.

Down one of the roadways two automobiles were parked. A couple of students stood on the outside of one of the cars. They leaned their elbows on the lowered door glass and propped their feet on the running board. Occasionally you could glimpse the faces of several girls in the car—you could when one or another of them inched a little toward the lowered door glass to emphasize some point that undoubtedly was important in the closing days of a college year.

Then up near the Gothic building the old, worn baseball was dropped on the ground by the boy who had caught it off the slow-swinging bat. Some of the crowd on the ground stood up, and the boy who had dropped the ball cried:

"A good game, Bucky; you pitched swell this afternoon."

Others of the group said the same thing. They were acclaiming a gangling youth with freckles on his face who had come out of the Gothic building and was walking down toward the automobiles that were parked down the roadway.

He was Newton S. (Bucky) Jacobs, the boy who pitched three no-hit, no run games for his college this year—who was in the eye and much wanted on the contracts of teams in Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit and who finally signed on a dotted line handed him by Clark Griffith.

The boy with the long arms, long fingers, stiff chin and freckles didn't say anything. But he bowed very slightly and in what seemed a most old-fashioned way. The group watched him as he walked across the grass toward the automobile. They seemed to watch him all the way. Then one of them picked up the old, worn ball and began to bat it idly around again.

Someone in the group said: "If you're here to get an interview with Bucky you're going to have a hard time. He won't talk. I don't mean that he's got a swell head. He's the most self-effacing boy on the campus. I just mean that it's terribly hard to talk to him. He'll answer your questions but he won't volunteer anything for you. You'll find him very decent—but I doubt if you get much out of him."

Bucky was now down at the parked automobile. Like the other two students, he propped his elbow on the lowered door glass and propped his foot on the running board. It could be seen from the distance that he was laughing about something, and anyone who laughed like that shouldn't be difficult to talk to.

Certainly, he was agreeable enough to the prospects of a dinner downtown.

"Some of yawl will have to move into the other car," he said. "Yawl drive downtown behind us; or do you want us to follow after yawl? The crowd separated and filled both automobiles; but a round-faced girl with the bluest sort of eyes and a wisp of hair that was unruly about her ears didn't budge from the front seat where the campus hero sat.

The car started up the hill. Looking back the campus seemed a green level flat far down among the trees. Now, to be perfectly truthful about the matter, Bucky Jacobs was turning out as an incredibly difficult person to talk to.

"When did you begin pitching?" he was asked.

After what was a rather embarrassing silence, he said something about a long time ago, something about he didn't remember and his voice seemed to trail off into the sound of the car's motor.

"You didn't walk a man this afternoon; where did you get that control. In all probability you used to throw a lot of rocks when you were a kid—bet you could knock a squirrel out of tree," he was prompted.

The answer was a very slight laugh, and "I don't know." He said something that couldn't be overheard by the round-faced girl. When the two automobiles reached a restaurant, the girl joined the party in the other car and drove away. Bucky went in the restaurant and ordered a steak.

Country Boy.

Before the steak arrived, a sort of understanding had been reached. Bucky had been asked bluntly to open up. He had even been asked to drop the respectful "yes sir" and "no sir" he used with so little affectation at being polite. He was even told that it was known why he said "yes sir" and "no sir," and why that slight bow he made when he came from the Gothic building seemed so natural and unaffected. The simple truth is that they still raise children with good manners down there south of the James River and there is a bow in their manner that comes from 'way back. They are not even aware of it themselves.

Then Bucky opened up. But he did it slowly and it seemed almost painfully, because he has never prepared in his own mind a press agent stunt for himself. He was born in a country town, Altavista, in Campbell County, hard by Lynchburg, made famous for its picturesque hill-setting and Senator Carter Glass. He was named Newton Smith after the physician who brought him into the world. And certainly he used to throw rocks at trees and when he was young he could hit them.

He didn't live around there long. His family moved to Bedford, Va., made famous by the National Elks' Home and its close proximity to Franklin County, renowned for its illicit booze.

Now, this boy who was to pitch 18 consecutive winning games for his college and to bring from the lips of Shanty Hogan the enthusiastic exclamation: "That boy has everything—speed, control, change of pace and a fine curve ball"—had no baseball players in his family background. He sat above his steak and pointed out that his father is an optician—that he has no relatives who play ball, unless you are thinking of Pete Jacobs his brother, who is now captain-elect of the Richmond University team.

Certainly, in those early times in the country towns Bucky never thought of himself as a baseball star. When his family moved to Chatham, in Pittsylvania County, made famous as the home grounds of Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, Bucky was playing at shortstop. Then he was a catcher. He pitched first on a team called Chatham's Juniors and then the town team took him over. At Hargrave Academy, he went on the mound, but he doesn't recall his record there.

* * * *

Now someone from the university began talking for Bucky. "In his sophomore year, he pitched five games and won five. In his junior year, he pitched six games and won six, and in this, his senior year, he pitched seven and lost one. And they didn't see him much until this year. In his junior year, all the talk was for Herb Hash, who had great speed and was in the eye of the scouts from the North. Nobody paid too great attention to Bucky, but this year he swung himself out front. Those three no-hit, no-run games brought him up.

"The scores in these no-hit games were:

'Richmond, 1; V. P. I., 0; he struck out 10 men; only one got on a base and that was because he was hit by a pitched ball.

"Richmond, 4; Hampden-Sydney, 0; he struck out 20 men; one man got on base; he was walked.

"Richmond, 2; V. M. I., 0; he struck out 12 men; two got on bases through errors and one was walked."

Bucky heard this recitation with no change of face. He was eating of the steak and his long fingers were holding a biscuit. The big league scouts have complained a little about his lack of weight. He now stands about 155. A few days ago Clark Griffith had said: "Likely looking; very likely looking. But not quite the weight. But they take on weight after they leave school." Griffith had seen him pitch a few balls by way of demonstration in Washington.

"We need pitchers at Charlotte and that would be an ideal place for you," Griffith was reported as having told Jacobs. "Maybe next year you would be ready to come to Washington."

Bucky Harris, the club manager, was quoted as saying: "He showed me plenty; in fact, he looked good enough to sign without even watching him pitch in batting practice."

Bucky was reminded of this, and of the other offers, rather advances, made toward him. "I'm waiting for the best one," he said bluntly.

He didn't look up from the steak when the university man told of how Jacobs was chosen the school's outstanding athlete, despite the fact that he doesn't play football. He told of his prowess at basketball. Bucky kept chewing on the steak.

And then he drew a comparison between Bucky's three no-hit games and a hand of cards:

"Just imagine sitting down and picking up a hand of 13 spades. Suppose, a couple of weeks later you could rush to the phone and tell the editor that you again had picked a hand of 13 spades. He promptly would tell you to quit annoying him with lies. But suppose that two or three weeks after that, you stood up and swore again you had picked a hand of 13 spades. They'd call you a collosal liar, perhaps would ride you out of town on a rail. Well, that situation is scarcely any more fantastic than the situation of those three no-hit no-run games."

Bucky looked up from his steak: "I'm not going to get married; don't put that out. But I've carried that girl around as my luck charm. She was in the stands when I pitched those no-hit games."

'Bucky' Jacobs, No-Hit Pitcher, Signed by Nats.

Richmond, Va., June 12 (AP).—Newton Bucky Jacobs, the slim pitching ace who hurled three no-hit, no-run games for the University of Richmond this spring, has signed a contract to join the Washington Nationals this season.

The 23-year-old Lawrenceville, Va., hurler said he had received an offer from the New York Giants but signed the Washington agreement because it gave him an opportunity to go directly into the majors.

He will join the Nationals next Wednesday. The amount of the bonus which he will receive and the salary, were not made known here.

fourth. Overton was all over the course in recording a bogey five on the fifth and Volney won the hole by sinking a 4-footer for a par. For the first and only time of the day, Burnett held a 4 up lead, winning the seventh with a par.

Overton cut the lead with a par on eight and reduced it to 2 up on another par 3 hole, the eleventh. The ninth and tenth were halved in regulation figures.

The new champion scored his only birdie of the final 18 on the twelfth hole with the only long putt of the round, as his lead jumped to three holes with six to play. The fifteenth hole was a striking example of the unfairness of the stymie. Burnett trapped his tee shot, barely reached the fairway in two and was on in three while Overton played two perfect shots to the green but only halved the hole when Volney's ball stymied his 5-foot putt, after his approach putt was short.

Birdies on the fourteenth and fifteenth holes followed, the golfing fireman placing his approach shots on each hole to within 3 feet of the cup as his lead was increased to 3. Volney faced the par 3 seventeenth hole, needing par for a 32, but drove into the woods and lost the hole and halved the next in bogey 5's to complete the morning round 2 up and 2 over par, 37, 35—72.

Spencer kept the match alive on the long fifteenth hole when Volney required six strokes, but a pair of pars on the next two holes preserved Burnett's lead and the match ended on the seventeenth.

The winner's patn to the title was clocked by a quintet of the best golfers in the Mid-Atlantic section, making his triumph all the more impressive. Martin McCarthy, Otto Greiner, Harry Pitt, Bobby Brownell and Overton bowed in order. The losers' victims included Billy Dettweiler, Fred Savage, Harry Parr 3d and Louis Fuchs.

Tiger Polo Team Defeats Yale, 7-3

New York, June 12 (AP).—Yale University, seven times holder of the title, was eliminated from the fifteenth annual Intercollegiate Polo Association championship when a better mounted, hard-riding Princeton University four slammed out a 7-to-3 victory at Morris Memorial Field on Governors Island today.

Princeton will meet the indoor champion, Cornell University, on Wednesday. Yale, with only one veteran, Peter Dominick, at No. 3, was entirely outplayed and showed its only polo in the fifth chukker, when it scored twice.

the day, a single to right that scored Cecil Travis who had previously bashed a single to left and taken second on Radcliff's muff.

The Sox spotted Rigney to a 2-0 lead in the third inning when they got half of their four hits off Ferrell following Sewell's walk and Rigney's sacrifice. Radcliff scored Sewell with a looping single to right and Kreevich scored Radcliff with a two-bagger that Almada could only trap after a valiant dash into short center.

After that the Sox could get to first base against Ferrell, but they couldn't get any farther. The only two guys who could reach him for a hit in those last six innings were Appling, in the sixth, and Piet in the seventh.

Back in the fourth, the Nats tied the score when Johnny Stone and Al Simmon whacked a pair of singles into the outfield. Stone romped home while Appling was throwing Travis out, and Simmons crossed the plate because Myer singled to right, one of his three hits of the day.

Incidentally, Washington ended its three-game losing streak.

Joe Archibald Due in District By Tomorrow

Joey Archibald, the little bantamweight who has captured the public fancy, will arrive in Washington tomorrow morning to complete training for his ten-round match against Lou Gevinson, prime local favorite, at Griffith Stadium next Wednesday night.

One of the fastest bantams in the ring today and packing a wallop all out of proportion to his weight, Archibald was well liked even before the recent police benefit card.

On that show Joey zoomed to the very top of the local heap when he scored a sensational knockout over Ray Ingram. Ingram previously had been officially adjudged "too experienced" for Gevinson, who made his fifth professional start on the same card by knocking out Johnny Pena.

Among others, Archibald has stopped Dark Cloud Bradley, Joey Brown, and has won decisions from Kid Quintana, Biff Lenineous and Jimmy Martio. He dropped a verdict to Ora Toma.

Gevinson has lost one fight in five starts as a professional. He was defeated by Johnny Pena, an experienced New York featherweight, last winter, but reversed the decision by stopping Pena on the police card.

In a ten-round cofeature, Red Lewis, of Richmond, will take on Buddy Scott, a local light heavyweight.

Lou Gehrig and Hank Greenberg Gain American League Batting Lead

Yankee, Tiger Stars Show Way to 'Boys'

Gehrig Ascends to Top With .383 Mark, Greenberg Is Second With .382, and Walker Drops to Third With .372; Pearson Leads Pitchers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 12.—The top end of the American League batting list looked natural again today, with those two slugging first basemen, Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, and Hank Greenberg, of Detroit's Tigers, peering down on the youngsters who did the early pace-setting.

Gehrig, handicapped during the early part of the campaign by a finger injury, added one 1 point to his average last week, figures which include Friday's games disclose, but ascended to first place with a .383 mark. Greenberg improved his average 6 points to .382, and with Gehrig, went ahead of Gerald Walker, of the Tigers, last week's leader, who took a 17-point beating from the pitchers to drop into third place with .372.

Greenberg was the league's leading slugger, showing the way with 15 home runs, an increase of three during the week; 58 runs batted in, an edge of one over another walloping first-sacker, Zeke Bonura, of the Chicago White Sox, and topped the scorers with 49 runs, five more than he had last week. Walker continued to lead in base hits with 74, although he connected only six times.

Other individual leaders who retained their positions were Joe Vosmik, of St. Louis, in two-base hits at 20, representing owe two-bagger during the period, and Joe Kuhel, Washington's first baseman, who had eight triples, the same as his last week's collection. Luke Appling, of the White Sox, stole one base to move into a tie of eight apiece with Ben Chapman, who was traded to Boston by Washington during the week.

Following Gehrig, Greenberg and Walker in the "Big Ten" batsmen group were Beau Bell, St. Louis, .367; Joe DiMaggio, New York, .366; Joe Cronin, Boston, .361; Bonura, Chicago, .360; Charley Gehringer, Detroit, .356; Lyn Lary, Cleveland, .346, and Mike Kreevich, Chicago, .344.

Monte Pearson, of the Yankees, and Chicago's John Henderson Whitehead topped the pitchers in percentage with four straight victories, but Detroit's youngster, Roxie Lawson, boasted the better record among hurlers working in more games—eight victories and one defeat. Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, of the Yankees, struck out 11 batsmen during the week to retain his leadership in that department with 62.

Robertson Rides Reaping Reward to Victory at Latonia

Red Label Wins Skyline In Fast Dash

Takes Week-End Feature in Close Finish at Charles Town.

Charles Town Race Track, June 12.—Red Label, the horse that caused the sensational suspension of Jockey Don Meade last year, galloped to his third straight victory of the meeting and for the third time, it was Precious King that chased the Petee-Wrack mare to the wire. Emvee, the favorite, was third in the field of seven that competed in the Skyline Drive Handicap, week-end feature event of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc.

With the popular Sammy Palumbo in the saddle, Red Label gave her backers no anxious moments and was eased to the finish line 2½ lengths in advance of Precious King. The latter had the same advantage over Emvee. The winner paid $8.20.

The race, over the mile and one-sixteenth course, was run over a heavy track that had dried out in spots and the time of 1:53 2-5 was ordinary. The eight-race program drew a crowd of 7,000 and as usual on week-ends, the betting was brisk.

Red Label, owned by W. G. Townsend, was first to break out of the stall gates and Palumbo did not have to call on the mare for her best speed. He took a wrap on her, let her out a bit along the backstreetch and then took her in hand after looking back for an expected move from Emvee.

Favorite betters lost a bet without having the pleasure of seeing their horse run in the first race. Miss M. Hodges' Porter Call, a son of The Porter, which was shipped in recently from Ohio, threw his jockey while the horses were being lined up and then eluded an assistant starter to run away. At the clubhouse turn, the gelding crashed into the fence, falling over it. He arose and crashed the clubhouse after knocking over a ticket booth. He was caught on the lawn. Porter Call suffered a badly dislocated hip and later was destroyed.

With the favorite eliminated, the race turned into a parade for Edith Walker, with Jockey Sammy Palumbo in the saddle. The $6.40-shot handily defeated Silver Arch and Tell It.

Blind Talk, an $8.60 betting proposition, scored an impressive half-length victory over the favored Mazyniata in the second race. Jockey C. F. Simpson handled the winner capably, taking command in the stretch while having the Blind Play gelding in a drive. Flying Dervish was third.

No Mistake Wins Third.

No Mistake, a 3-to-1 favorite, proved much the best in the third race, winning handily by three lengths despite interference at the first turn. Ridden by Jockey R. Root, the ancient gelding, was almost knocked to his knees by Cautious Boy, but recovered to come through on the rail, get to the front and hold sway to the finish. Yard Stick was second and Running Water third in the field of eight.

Mrs. K. N. Gilpin's Frank Brooke made it two straight winners for backers of the choices. Under the guidance of Jockey L. Machado, Frank Brooke galloped to the wire with most of the good 2-year-olds hereabouts in his wake. The Waugh-Bowman entry was second and third with Schley Nurse beating out Schley Buck a neck. The winner paid $5.20.

Jockey Root rode his second winner of the day in the fifth race, piloting Miss Patches to a length and a half victory over the 6-furlong route. The winner at $9 mutuel shook off Lady Buck and went on to overtake Balmacan, the favorite at the end. Third money went to Mabel Beyond, a 124-to-1 shot.

Prince Pettie Wins.

Prince Pettie, a winner at 22 to 1 in his previous start of the week, came back today to win at 7 to 1 in the seventh race at a mile and a quarter. This time he defeated, among others, Amasin, the choice, and Dudley C.

Jockey W. Snyder made it a double when he brought home Jim Brown in the eighth race by eight lengths to defeat Pauline H. and Early Call, and paid a $6.60 mutuel.

West Virginia Sportsmen Look Forward to Good Trout Fishing

Restocking Over Million For a Year

Biological Survey Leaves Soon for Far North; Other Game News.

The brook trout was once very plentiful in the State of West Virginia, and it was in no way out of the ordinary for them to reach weights of five to eight pounds. Of course, those days are probably gone forever. How could it be otherwise, with possibly a hundred or more fishermen in these days to the one of long ago.

ACKERMAN

The fish commission in the past several years has accomplished much, and hopes the very efficient men who are now working on the problem, assisted by concerted action on the part of all sportsmen, will soon see their streams so stocked with brook trout that fair fishing will be enjoyed in season.

Already the stockings each year are in excess of a million fish of all sizes. In large streams, with plenty of natural food available and low temperatures, there is no reason why in a few years trout of several pounds cannot be taken by experienced anglers. In the smaller streams it is seldom that an adult brook trout ever exceeds 12 inches, and mostly it is only six or eight.

Field parties of the United States Biological Survey again are heading for marsh and lake regions in Canada to learn how wild ducks and geese are faring this season on the nesting ground. To reach the remote nesting areas they will travel in steamships, canoes, airplanes and on foot. In the Arctic region, dog teams probably will be used.

Reports on conditions in the "duck hatchery" belt, that extends across the northern prairie States and westward and nesting regions in Canada, analyzed and co-related with previous reports will enable the survey to determine trends in waterfowl numbers. Last year was the first time since the studies have been under way that showed more birds returning to their nesting grounds in Canada than in the year previous. Up to 1935 the downward trend of waterfowl had continued for many years.

Brant Affected.

Harold S. Peters, of Washington, biologist of the Atlantic flyway, will make a complete survey of waterfowl conditions in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. It is within this region that many of the black ducks, sought by sportsmen along the Atlantic Coast, nest. Later he will join the Artic expedition of Commander Donald B. McMillan and proceed to the northern part of Labrador and Baffin Island, where he will study the Atlantic brant on its nesting grounds, the snow goose, the blue goose and some of the seaducks.

Atlantic brant have been seriously affected in recent years because of the continued shortage along the Atlantic Coast of their principal food, eelgrass. Is it hard to remember that there was no open season allowed on these birds in the United States last year?

Shotgun enthusiasts from many parts of the country are preparing to enter the ninth annual National Telegraphic Team championship, held as a feature of the Great Eastern Skeet Championships under auspices of the Remington Gun Club, Lordship, Stratford, Conn., according to reports from officials of the shoot.

The match will be held Sunday, June 27, and a record number of entries is expected.

In the telegraphic matches last year Los Angeles-Santa Monica Club and Tyler (Tex.) Skeet and Gun Club tied for first place with 487x500. In the shoot-off for first, Los Angeles-Santa Monica cracked out a new world's record with 493x500.

Angelus-Mesa Skeet Club, of Los Angeles, finished third with 482, nosing out the Pacific Rod and Gun Club, of San Francisco, by two points.

This year's shoot is open to any club team of five shooters in the United States who have bonafide members of the club they represent at least three months prior to the date of the shoot. Clubs may enter more than one team if desired. One of the primary objects of the match is to promote intersectional competitive shooting.

Teams or individual shooters planning to attend the Great Eastern at Lordship and teams wishing to enter the National Telegraphic shoot should communicate with R. C. Swan, general chairman of the Lordship Shoot, 939 Barnum avenue, Bridgeport.

Delaware's trapshooting enthusiasts will gather at Newcastle this week-end to compete for shotgun titles, trophies and cash awards in the annual State tournament, scheduled Friday and Saturday, June 11 and 12. The Delaware Trapshooting Association has arranged an attractive program and a large field is expected to be on hand, including out-of-State competitors who will fire for special awards.

A year ago it was William M. Foord, of Milton, who walked off with Delaware's most coveted trapshooting title—the State amateur crown. Foord, a veteran who was winning Delaware titles 20 years ago, broke 193 out of 200 to win. He is expected to defend his title this week, and will also seek to qualify once more for the Champion of Champions event, one of the outstanding competitions in the annual Grand American tournament at Vandalia, Ohio. The Champions' event is open to State "clarbusting" titleholders only, and last year it was Hale Jones, Illinois champion, who walked off with the title with a score of 196 out of 200. The Grand American this year is scheduled August 23 to 27.

Two Seeded Players Appear for Tourney

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Only two of the seeded players, Frank Kovacs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Thane Halstead, of Chicago, showed up for the opening of the twenty-seventh national clay courts singles tennis championship tournament today, and furnished what little excitement there was by winning their first tests.

Kovacs, who drew a first-round bye, trounced George Steidl, of Chicago, 6—0, 6—1, in his second rounder. Halstead, a former University of Chicago star, had tougher going, however, beating Bob Pease, of Chicago, 6—4, 8—6, to enter the second round.

Red Sox Split With Tigers; Newsom Wins

Buck Allows 6 Hits in 10 Innings; Boston Takes Nightcap, 5 to 4.

Detroit, June 12 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox lost the first game of a double-header here today, 3 to 2, but overcame Detroit's four-run lead to win the ten-inning nightcap, 5 to 4, before 40,250 fans.

A ball pitched by Louis (Buck) Newsom fractured a bone in the right arm of Ray Hayworth, Detroit catcher, in the fourth inning of the second game. Physicians said he would be out of the line-up for at least three or four weeks.

The defeat stopped the Tigers' winning streak at six games and kept Detroit from advancing to a virtual tie with the New York Yankees for top position in the American League.

Colonel Mills, who had walked, scored the winning run in the second game after a single by Eric McNair.

Roxie Lawson held Boston to four hits in the first game to win his ninth victory this season. Detroit got six hits in the second game off Newsom, former Washington pitcher who made his debut today in Boston uniform.

Billy Rogell and Jimmy Foxx knocked out home runs in the opener and Foxx tied the score in the second game with his twelfth homer of the season.

Final Sail Race Set For Potomac Today

Capital Windjammers Will Move Over to Galesburg, Md., After Events This Afternoon for Weekly Program.

By Daniel F. Craig.

Washington windjammers will sail the final race of their spring series this afternoon off Hains Point as three classes, the "A" and "B" handicap boats and the comets, get the gun shortly after 2 o'clock.

Today's race will end competition on the Potomac until the fall series begins some time after Labor Day, but the majority of local skippers, especially in the comet class, intend to cart their craft over to the West River Sailing Club at Galesville, Md, to continue racing there every Sunday until after that club's Labor Day regatta, when they return to Washington for the President's Cup regatta.

At Galesville, on the shores of the Chesapeake, is an excellent harbor, a good race course, and last but not least, the prospect of some lively competition, in addition to the regular Sunday races, in the form of regattas throughout the bay area, will lure an estimated 10 comets, a number of handicap boats and already claims three boats of the 20 open class, Ralph Youngs' Myray, H. C. Bush's Cricket II and Bill Heintz's Madic.

Probable Entrants.

Among the likely entrants next week in the comet class will be Clyde Cruit's So Big, Verner Smythe's Sassy Too, H. H. Jacobs' Litl, Zimmer's Serena, Richard Dolye's Freya, Charlie Dodge's Nandua, Dr. Albert Pagan's Gwen, Ernie Covert's Escapade, U. S. Lambert's Leda, Charles Degges' Tangier and Barbara Myer's Minx.

Judge Edrington may enter Lady Avon and several skippers of handicap boats are toying with the West River idea.

The club became a member of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association last year, and this season fleets are due to compete in C. B. Y. R. A. regattas, including the Maryland Yacht Club Regatta at Baltimore, July 9, 10 and 11; the Miles River Yacht Club Regatta at St. Michael's, Md., August 5 and 6; the C. B. Y. R. A. rendezvous and regatta at Oxford, Md., August 14; the Annapolis Yacht Club Regatta, August 28 and 29, and the West River Sailing Club's Labor Day Regatta, September 5 and 6.

Hartges Chief Builders.

The Hartge brothers, Dick and Oscar, who uphold the best of bay traditions in boat building at their shop in Galesville, designed and built a majority of the boats that race on West River.

The six classes that are expected to give the race committee plenty of woe this year, the same fleet, incidentally, that Paul Tomalin, the Potomac Sailing Association maestro, will wave his magic slide rule over today, while R. P. Dumont takes over here in Washington, are as follows: the 20-foot open boats, which form the fastest class with Vanifie and Challenger stiffening the competition; the Albatross class numbering 13; the Sea Witch class with 7 boats; the Comets with an estimated 13; the 18-foot open with an unpredictable number, and the 14-foot open class, in which Bill Preston may enter his 11-foot dinghy Flighty. Flighty trimmed a sizable dinghy fleet at the Maryland Yacht Club regatta last week.

Last night an informal meeting and dance was held at the home of C. Erle Kline. Club officers for 1937 are William W. Heintz, commodore, Wilson B. Nairn, vice commodore; E. H. Siegler, secretary, and C. Erle Kline, jr., treasurer.

summer, in the Coastal Plains League. I had pitched 14 innings and nobody had scored. Then three men got on bases; it was two outs and three balls on the batter. I managed to throw three straight strikes. We played 16 innings and the game was out by darkness. Later, he pitched two scoreless nine-inning games and hurled one scoreless inning in another game for a total of 35 scoreless innings. He regarded this as just funny—not necessarily good pitching.

And after the no-hit, no-run games they made him go down to the broadcasting company and tell about it on the radio. He had no prepared notes to talk from. He just stood there and talked. And wasn't a bit excited.

He was asked what he intended doing if he didn't go into the majors. He said he had thought of teaching school. Maybe of coaching. He has prepared himself in sociology and expects to return to the university in the fall to work for a degree. All of the hub-bub they've made over him in Richmond hasn't moved him. The subject of newspaper write-ups was worked around to and he said: "I've never kept a scrapbook, but my mother and sister in Lawrenceville have one somewhere around the house. And if you want to know more about me, I don't smoke cigarettes or cuss or chew but sometimes, when I'm riding around in a car with my friends, I smoke a big cigar. But I don't inhale it."

Nice Work, Wes!

Chicago, June 13.—When Wesley Ferrell returned to the Nats' hotel today after beating the White Sox with a four-hit debut in a Washington uniform, he found awaiting him a congratulatory telegram from Clark C. Griffith.

"Nice work, Wes," Griffith's wire read. "I knew you could do it."

Dartmouth's Nine Defeats Maryland, 3-1

Johnson Star as Mates Bow; Indians Use Alumni Team.

Hanover, N. H., June 12.—Ted Bruce, veteran right-hander of Dartmouth, came back today after one day's rest to close his career in brilliant fashion by defeating Maryland, 3-1, before a commencement throng.

Only Eddie Johnson, son of the famous Walter, could do anything against Bruce, who was the master at all times. The visitors gained some satisfaction by defeating the great Dartmouth team of 1912 in the last two unofficial innings, 7-1. The alumni, back for their twenty-fifth reunion, presented their lineup intact after a quarter of a century. Capt. Ray Ratajczak and Eddie Casey closed their college careers by starring afield and at bat. Bradford Jenkins, of Milton, Mass., was elected captain after the game.

A meeting of the sailing association was held at the Capital Yacht Club last Wednesdy night to present trophies to the winner of the Decoration Day Regatta at Gunston Cove. George Dankers received the Commodore's Cup, presented this year by Verner Smythe, and the association's trophy for the winner of the three-race series in the handicap class.

The Jack Marsh Trophy went to Verner Smythe, who won the comet series, while Judge Prentice Edrington carried off the trophy for the 20-foot open-class series, by virtue of Lady Avon's decisive victories.

Two Old Dominion skippers, Ralph Youngs and Bob Cochran, were admitted to the "Dunkers" or "Bottoms-up" Club, both receiving sponges. Ralph, however, carried off the "super-sponge," so-called for its resemblance to a cup and its generous proportions.

Art Clephane's Loke, 8-meter, is leading the Gibson Island Yacht Squadron series for the George A. Whiting Trophy, having won the first race. The winner of the three-race series will be decided today when the final race gets under way off Baltimore Light at 11 a. m. Valkyrie, P. W. Howard, is second; Amethyst, the Amethyst Syndicate's boat, third, with the 10-meter Ballemena, scratch boat of the series, owned by Richard E. Breed, fourth, and R. S. Mueller's Quest, fifth.

At one of the regular luncheons of the President's Cup Regatta Association recently a Fo'csle Club was formed. James A. Councilor, general director of the President's Cup Regatta, has, for several months, been working on the Fo'csle Club scheme. The setup was finally worked out in conference with Admiral R. R. Waesche, of the Coast Guard, and other nautical experts.

Active membership will include persons who make definite contribution to the conduct of the regatta and its related activities. Such contribution may take the form of money, service or trophies. Honorary membership will include distinguished citizens who have indicated an interest in regatta affairs and whose names would add to the prestige of the organization. No initiation fee or membership dues will be assessed and active members will have exclusive voting privilege.

Capt. L. O. Colbert addressed the luncheers and explained the work involved in laying out the regatta race course and anchoring the buoys in such a manner that record-breaking performances can be accepted by the American Powerboat Association.

The association's annual cruise, this year called the "Country Fair Cruise," will take place aboard the S. S. Potomac June 22. Entertainment, which includes a fireboat display and Police Boys Club music, and dancing is planned.

Homer B. Millard arrived at his mooring off Corinthian last week after a leisurely two-month trip from Miami, in his new 79-foot auxiliary schooner Cachalot. Cachalot stopped en route at Brunswick, Ga., where she shipped a new suit of sails, thence sailing outside up the coast to Morehead City, N. C., before entering the inland waterway, which she followed through to Norfolk, using the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal. Cachalot has a 40-horsepower Lathrop and carries 5,000 square feet of canvas when her tops'ls are set, easily being the largest sailing yacht in Washington. The canal has a controlling depth of 12 feet from Morehead City to Norfolk at the present time, according to Mr. Millard.

Net Favorites Waltz Through First Tests

Lieut. W. R. Robertson Is Only Upset During Hectic Day of Play as 128 Contestants Start Grand National Tennis Tourney.

By Jack Munhall.

Old Man Upset lay dormant yesterday while local favorites waltzed through opening round matches but arose in the gathering dusk and with a cobwebby hand plucked Lieut. W. R. Robertson from the surviving list of the Grand National Amateur tennis tournament now in progress on the Potomac Park courts.

The young Langley Field officer was the victim of a form reversal at the hands of Paul Falconer in a gruelling three-set match. The scores were 9—7, 9—11 and 6—2. Both performers were off their game and the play sluggish throughout.

Meanwhile Dooly Mitchell, Yelverton Garnett and Hugh Lynch, seeded 1, 2 and 3 among the locals, breezed in with comparative ease. Only Mitchell, who was extended winning from Myer Garland, 6—1, 8—6, experienced any difficulty. Mitchell, displaying his steady all-around game, turned on the heat in the final set to eke out the victory.

Garnett relied on a blistering service and an unerring backhand to turn in an impressive triumph over Howard Hudson, who played fine tennis in vain. Lynch flashed good form beating Carol Huls, 6—2, 6—4. Both the latter contests were held at Edgemoor.

George Dunklin, of the University of Virginia and a late entry, easily bounced Edward Kane, 6—1, 6—0. Frank Thompson, another highly-regarded visitor, rode into the second round on the wings of a default by John Stasulli.

Other local choices who advanced were Deane Judd, who scuttled Sam Minkoff, 6—1, 6—1; Tony Latona, who trimmed Lawrence Lichlighter in brilliant fashion, 6—0, 6—1; Rick Willis, who outscored Harold Masby, 6—3, 6—1; Tom Moorehead, who proved too experienced for Larry Sinclair; Albert Ritzenberg, who blasted Walter Keating, 6—0, 6—1; George Dunklin, who beat Edward Kane, 6—1, 6—0, while Hy Ritzenberg was also progressing by means of a default by Andrew Kirk, jr.

Among the seeded younger players, Harry March defeated Henry Cooper, 6—1, 6—0; Harry Heffner slipped by M. A. Erana, 6—2, 6—3, and Allan Blade downed Byron Schmid, 6—2, 6—2.

Frank Shore, Stan McCaskey, Bill Howard, and Ray Stocklinski, also seeded among the locals, did not see action. Frank Goeltz, rated first among the visitors, also did not engage.

Wide Selling Topples Wheat To Year's Low

$1.06 for July Compares With $1.30 a Bushel Two Months Ago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 12.—Wheat prices dropped almost 3 cents a bushel today to the lowest level in six months. The $1.06 per bushel close for July wheat was ¾ lower than a week ago and the lowest the contract has been since the last of November. It compared with a peak of almost $1.30, reached only two months ago.

Persistent selling engulfed the wheat pit, not only in Chicago but at other important marketing centers in the world. Traders said most of the liquidation was associated with spring wheat belt rains both sides of the Canadian border together with prospects of favorable weather over the week-end.

Wheat closed at the day's low, 2½ to 2⅞ below Friday's finish; July, 1.05⅞ to 1.06; September, 1.05¾ to 1.05⅞; December, 1.07¾ to 1.07⅞. Bankers' Acceptances 17% Above Year Ago

New York, June 12.—Bankers' acceptances, widely used to finance the shipment of goods, increased $55,264,507 in May over the corresponding month a year ago, a 17 per cent rise. The total outstanding of $385,795,967 for May represents a drop of $9,235,312 from April, which is the usual seasonal recession.

The decline in acceptances to finance exports was quite small, $612,313, in contrast with the steady decreases which have been registered month by month in recent years. This total in May was $80,781,962 against $81,394,275 in the same month last year.

Acceptances for the financing of imports again stage a substantial gain, being $57,255,600 higher than in May a year ago, and now aggregating $167,505,817.

More Jobs, Pay, Shorter Week

New York, June 12 (AP).—With hourly wages up, a shorter work week nad an increase in employment, the national industrial conference board's monthly survey of 25 manufacturering industries, made public today, painted a cheerful picture of the labor situation in April.

Average hourly earnings in April rose to 68.4 cents from 65.9 cents in March, the highest since 1920, the board's figures show. The average work week in April declined 1.7 per cent from March or from 41.7 hours to 41 hours.

In April average weekly earnings were $28.09, compared with $27.50 in March and 15.5 per cent higher than in ARpril last year.

Employment in the 25 manufacturing industries in April was 1.5 per cent higher than in March, 17.9 per cent higher than in April last year and 1.9 per cent higher than in 1929.

Heavy Consumption Of Copper Abroad

New York, June 12 (AP).—Foreign consumption of copper is running probably record figures, said Cornelius F. Kelley, president of Anaconda Copper Mining Co., on his return from Europe today. He saw no signs of an early let-down in foreign demand, which trade sources have attributed partly to rearmament needs.

Meanwhile informed metal men scouted rumors that leading American copper producers were sending additional representatives to a London parley on production control.

Warm Weather Spurs Business During Week

Many Retailers Report Largest Volume of Sales This Year.

New York, June 12.—Acceleration spread to trade movements in more divisions this week, as the abrupt arrival of warm weather multiplied summer needs, Dun & Bradstreet say today in their weekly review, which adds:

"Crowded stores brought to many retailers the largest sales this year, with apparel offerings the center of attraction. Wholesale volume was expanded by reorders for seasonal goods, which indicated the incompleteness of inventories, held down by cautious buying policies. Production totals were thrown out of gear by the extension of labor difficulties in some industries, although average operations in other lines changed little.

"Most of the leading industrial indices were pulled down by either factory closings over the holiday or strike influences. Off 3.4 per cent, electric output was the smallest for any week since December 26, 1936, and the rise over 1936 was shortened to 10.9 per cent, for the forty-eighth week, however, sendout was above 2,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours. Bituminous coal made a better showing, with output up 2.5 per cent and 12.6 per cent more than the 1936 tonnage mined. After reaching a new peak in the week preceding, daily average gross production of crude oil dropped 35,550 barrels, reducing the flow to 3,538,150 barrels.

"Unsettled labor troubles lowered steel operations to 76.2 per cent of rated capacity, a decline of 1.2 points for the week and 14.8 points in the last two, the rate still was above last year's at 69.5. Freight-car loadings were the fewest since February 6, due to curtailed material shipments to strike-affected areas, and for the first time in 62 weeks fell below the corresponding number of the year preceding. Lumber production, shipments and new orders were under the previous week's by 3, 2, and 5 per cent, respectively, but were above the comparative 1936 totals by 22, 19, and 9 per cent, respectively."

International Exhibition Shows World French Labor Crisis

Incomplete Work Marks Union Power

C. G. T. Leader, Primed by Concessions, Nation's Man of Destiny.

Only One French Building Complete at Fair Opening.

By Agnes E. Meyer.

Paris, May 30.—There is scarcely a better place to study the social revolution and the political animosities which are shaking France and the other European nations than at the International Exposition of Arts and Techniques in Paris, which was officially opened this week by President Le Brun.

Some effort is made by the French to forget temporarily their acute internal dissensions, and the speeches of foreign envoys are for the most part very diplomatic, but nevertheless the whole interplay of the antagonistic forces is daily revealed in one way or another. The mere fact, however, that the exposition could take place and that there is so much comic relief mingled with the intense rivalries and animosities, indicates that Europe is making some progress in its hazardous struggle toward a new national and international equilibrium.

When the opening ceremonies took place, the procession of high officials and foreign ambassadors was obliged to pick its way precariously around open ditches and debris of all sorts, while clouds of white dust blew over the open plaza from half-completed masonry walls. The exposition at this stage must be imagined rather than seen, for only one French bulding is finished, the Modern Museum and that only on the outside; and there could have been no official opening last Monday if five of the foreign nations had not made a point of hurrying their exhibition halls toward completion in the last few weeks. At least two of these nations, Russia and Germany, succeeded in preparing their huge structures on time only by sending a detachment of shock-workers from their own countries, a thing they were undoubtedly glad to do as an illustration of the superior efficiency of dictatorship.

Labor Battle Centers Around Exposition.

For the exposition has been made the chief battleground of the French labor war, and the incredible delays which have taken place are a deliberate demonstration of power on the part of the C. G. T. (Confederation Generale de Travail, more or less the C. I. O. of France). Since the exposition is situated along the banks of the Seine, in the very heart of Paris, traffic is often obstructed by the scaffoldings and building materials that are lying about, and the workmen can be observed as they soldier on the job or saunter to the nearest cafe to take a drink. France is, so to speak, having her labor pains in public with the frankness that is a peculiar and rather an ingratiating trait of all democracies.

As the architecture of the exposition buildings is in an ultra-modernistic style, the contrast between new and old comes as a shock at first sight. The symmetry of the Place de la Concorde, for example, with its beautiful eighteenth century facade, is suddenly interrupted by four towering straight shafts, looking for all the world like overgrown telegraph poles, which mark one of the entrances to the exhibition. The Grand Palais, built for the great exposition of 1900, has a huge metal door in simple modern lines placed over its former ornate entrance. But unpleasant and disturbing as this mixture of styles may be, it symbolizes vividly the social transition in which France now finds herself involved.

The relationship of the Blum ministry toward Leon Jouhaux, the head of the C. G. T., is not unlike that which exists between President Roosevelt and Mr. John Lewis. Thus it can readily be understood how hard it is for the opposition to restrain itself from using the exposition delays as a constant reproach to the government in spite of a very general feeling that violent recriminations are misplaced while there are so many foreign visitors in town.

It seems that Mr. Leon Blum, the prime minister, in his antifascist poster of February 12, promised that all preparations for the exposition would be completed as of May 1. This promise was constantly repeated until April 24, when the opening had to be postponed until May 24.

The explanations for the delay are numerous: constant strikes, increases in the cost of materials and labor, introduction of the 40-hour week, but chiefly a general and deliberate slowing down of individual effort and productivity on the part of the great majority of the workmen. The average production is now estimated at about one-fifth of the normal figure. Mr. Blum, as far back as February 12, implored labor to make a special effort by working overtime on Saturdays and Sundays, but only a handful of workers reported for duty. The appeal was a failure.

Today I spent several hours watching the men at work and talking to them. Their frame of mind has been called anarchistic by Mr. Gignoux, president of the C. G. P. (Confederation of Employers), but demoralization seems to me a more accurate description of the prevalent condition of these men. Wages, even for unskilled labor were suddenly doubled, while the working hours were sharply reduced. Unaccustomed to such sudden affluence, wholly unprepared for so much leisure, the men sit around the bistros, as the little side-street cafes are called, talking indefinitely and drinking more than usual. Their women folk, it appears, are even more distracted than the men themselves, for the extra wages are frequently wasted and the hard-working French housewives are more annoyed than pleased by having an idle husband hanging around the house, lying in bed Saturday mornings or coming home somewhat the worse for wear.

Good-Natured Workmen Loaf, Chat With Visitors.

For someone not concerned with the problem, the spectacle of thousands upon thousands of men loafing on the job is rather restful and vastly entertaining. This half-finished exposition is certainly more amusing that the finished product could ever be. The men sit around, good-natured as only French workmen can be, and ready to chat with anybody who comes along. They reminded me of meditative Orientals or of Robert Louis Stevenson's famous lines:

"'Tis better to travel hopefully than to arrive, and the true success is to labor"—but not too much, nor too long.

What is more alarming than the mental condition of the workers themselves is the clear indication that they lack strong leadership and discipline. These honest, sane and realistic French workmen would not be endangering the success of the exposition, would not be cutting down the general production of France so dangerously if there were not a serious breakdown, not only in the supervision on the jobs, but in the C. G. T. leadership itself. It is an open secret that the C. G. T. has taken over the whole exposition and that nobody without a union card is permitted to work there.

Temporarily even the great prestige of Mr. Jouhaux seems unequal to the maintenance of any real ascendancy over the union members. As a result the working man is justified in feeling that for the moment he is the real ruler of France's destiny.

Mr. Andre Tardieu, whose words must be taken with a grain of salt since he is a violent opponent of the present government, stated recently that the situation indicated a complete breakdown of lawfully constituted authority. The government, having granted many privileges to the working classes in quick succession, now finds it difficult to check the flow of benefits, a truism that sounds strangely familiar to American ears. On the other hand, there might have been serious trouble in France if the Blum ministry had not rectified some of the injustices under which the workers were suffering. Tardieu is right, however, when he says that magnificent collaboration of the architects, engineers and artists of France, together with the financial rewards that France expected to reap from the many visitors, are all being jeopardized by the unpatriotic behavior of the workmen.

Tension Aggravated By Dictator Nations.

This internal political tension is aggravated by the fact that the U. S. S. R., Germany and Italy have made a dramatic play by forcing the preparation of their own buildings and exhibits. Had it not been for the efficient management of Belgium, Norway and Denmark, only the dictatorships would have been ready for the opening celebrations.

The countries dominated by Stalin and Hitler are represented by two of the most impressive structures in the whole exposition. As one emerges between the two wings of the beautiful but unfinished Trocadero, these two buildings, about three times the height of the others, catch the eye on either side of the central esplanade, confronting each other in a manner that seems almost truculent. A huge gold eagle tops the tall Nazi structure, while two vigorous sculptured figures on the Soviet Building brandish the hammer and the sickle toward their German opponents.

Mussolini has contented himself with a less conspicuous placement across the bridge on the banks of the Seine. Yesterday it seemed as if the Duce had not chosen his location very well, for the big crowds were surging through the more easily accessible exhibitions of Germany and the Soviets.

The national characteristics of these three dictatorships, with their differences and their similarities, can be clearly discerned, though the effect is not always intentional. All three are quite naturally dominated by political propaganda, but the means used by the Soviets are largely theoretical and intellectual, those of the Germans realistic and material, while Italy conveys its message by an emphasis on ethetic values.

Soviet Makes Appeal Through Statistics.

The most effective appeal of the Soviets is largely through statistics, for their actual products, such as the paintings, sculptures and a few inferior woolen and cotton goods, do not make a good impression, though it is interesting to see how the vigorous personality of Lenin survives even in a poor sculpture and unskilled portraiture.

Without ever having been in the new Russia, I had gained an impression of the proletarian state as powerful, even awe-inspiring, but this, my first direct contact with the Soviet spirit, left an impression of pathos that was wholly unexpected. The models of vast power plants fail to carry conviction because they look like the things our children construct with their mechano sets. The over-life-size paintings on the walls of healthy, happy, pink and white proletarians are contradicted by the small, pale but poetical and kindly people who are in change of the various departments. The enormous sign which stated that the Soviets love the classics of their own country and of Europe, is such an obvious attempt to appear cultured that it indicates only a weakening of the proletarian cult. The favorite European authors of the union of workers and peasants are listed as Stendhal, Goethe, Shakespeare, Balzac, Heine and Byron in that order. At least they are true to their internationalism.

But incomprehensible and truly humorous is the exhibition of one little Soviet automobile. I expected to hear French or American sarcasms from the polyglot crowd which surrounded it but everybody was extremely polite on this first day, though the mood can scarcely continue. Perhaps it was sheer sentimentality on my part to be sorry for a nation so vast, so full of energy and resources, but I came away from the Soviet's attempt to present their achievements with a feeling of sympathy that was not devoid of pity.

What a contrast meets the eye in the opulent German exhibition! A long hall hung with majectic candelabra, lined on each side by row upon row of glass cases, fairly radiates luxury and superb workmanship. Well arranged are the silverware, chinaware, leather goods, books exquisitely printed on magnificent paper, glittering Diesel engines, scientific and musical instruments all of the finest. Here in a single inclosure one could sense the might and the skill of the German race. The substitute woolen and cotton goods in the German exhibit seemed better in quality than the genuine materials in the Soviet Building. But I saw no substitutes exhibited anywhere for justice and decency. It is said the German people have discovered that there are none.

More appealing if less overpowering than the German Building is that of the Italians on the opposite bank of the Seine, poised over the river much the way the beautiful palazzos hang over the waters of Venice. The publicity value of the Italian exhibition is handicapped in its effort by a less accessible location; to see their whole exhibit it is necessary to climb stairs, and few of the exhausted visitors were willing to do it.

Italian Exhibit Makes Winning Impression.

Though the Italian exhibit cannot compete with the variety and perfection of the German products, the spirit of the Italian presentation, the indoor flower gardens, the photographs of the Italian scenery and architecture both new and old, make a winning impression on the casual visitor. The political element is just as evident as in the two other buildings. Many proofs are offered of the blessings which Italy is bringing to Ethiopia, together with evidence of the cruel practices which have been eliminated in that conquered country by Mussolini's gentle hand.

At the main entrance a wall of polished granite rising the full height of the building bears at the very top a single inscription: "Italia et caput rerum urbs nunquam obscura nomina." I could not resist asking the Italian guard what it meant in order to study the man's reaction to that naively boastful statement. I expected him to throw out his chest, but to my surprise he replied with considerable embarrassment and with some modification of the Latin words: "Oh, that means we are a greater nation than we used to be."

It was the most reassuring experience to find that in all three of these highly nationalistic, aggressive countries, the actual people who represented them were much better national advertisements than the tone of the exhibition itself. The Soviet representatives were wistful and lovable, the Germans, in their formidable uniforms, polite and helpful; the Italians, modest and good natured, in short, almost the opposite in character of everything which their powerful governments would like to convey.

Exposition An Aid To Peaceful Intercourse.

The crowd, milling about in the open, sun-baked esplanade, speaking every conceivable language, gave me the same feeling that the peoples of Europe would have no difficulty in getting on with each other peacefully if only they had some direct means of communication which could leap the barriers of political leadership.

This great international exposition, which throws all the races into close contact, can have a calming and beneficent effect in itself, if again the politicians do not poison the atmosphere. Only yesterday Mr. Schacht, Germany's official representative, was able to arrange a tourist agreement which will facilitate the visit of thousands of his countrymen, but at the same time he threw the Paris press both of the right and left into paroxysms of rage because he took this opportunity to remind the French that Germany must have colonies and access to raw materials as a prelude to disarmament. Every shade of political opinion gave to him at once the often-repeated answer: "Disarm first, and we will make concessions."

After these three interesting exhibits of the dictatorships, the scaffolding of the uncompleted French buildings and the general lassitude of the workmen so depressed me with democratic ineptitude that I sought out a French industrialist with several factories scattered about France to find out more exactly what was to be expected of the French labor situation. For it is evident that unless the French government can keep its word that the exposition will really be more or less completed within another month, the situation may prove a disaster for the Blum ministry and for the country as a whole.

In spite of the fact that this company is still being harassed by arbitrary strikes called at a moment's notice, the management declares that the machinery for collective bargaining is slowly being built and that conditions on the whole are much better than last year.

"Production is still being deliberately slowed up," asserted the company superintendent, "until our output is reduced by 10 to 15 per cent with the same working force. Even the piece workers have slowed up their output because the C. G. T. punished the men with fines if they speeded up in order to earn more individually. The idea, of course, is that we will be forced to take on more men, but that has not been the result of these mistaken tactics. Some of our piece workers were even dismissed by the C. G. T. as a warning against increasing their output above a certain fixed amount.

"Our business is off 30 per cent as against last year. This is natural when wages and materials are high and work is impeded by strikes and the slowing-down process. Orders are falling off and most of the time of our executives is taken up by endless meetings to arbitrate labor problems and collective compacts.

"However, the progress is real both in actual accomplishments and in the mental attitude of our workmen. Formerly we had to pay the minimum wage rate fixed for Paris in all our other factories situated in districts where the cost of living is lower. Now we have arrived at a much needed differential so that the unskilled worker who receives 7.40 francs an hour near Paris, gets only 4.50 in the Haute Marne district, and 4.75 francs an hour at Sedan, or about 36 per cent less than in Paris. The wages of our unskilled workers are up 50 per cent and in some cases 80 per cent. Average wages, including skilled workers, are up 53 per cent to 80 per cent. Subsequent to the devaluation of the franc the cost of living has increased approximately 20 per cent. In terms of dollars common labor in Paris receives 34 cents and skilled labor 59 cents an hour.

Extremists Causing Most of Troubles.

"Moreover," he continued, "the psychology of the men is improved except for a few extremists, but I confess these extremists keep the sensible men pretty well stirred up. However, good workmen are getting the upper hand more and more. Yesterday, for example, we had a four-hour strike for no reason at all, which was finally settled by the more reasonable element among the men without any intervention on our part.

"Unfortunately the C. G. T. leadership is weak and cannot control its own men, but the good sense and the native intelligence of the French working classes is already beginning to steady the situation. The employers can now get the men to make concessions, a thing that was impossible a year ago.

"The C. G. P. has also made some wise provisions of its own. In order to keep the engineers from joining forces with the labor union (C. G. T.), the employers have arranged a system of insurance for them under which the two groups, the employers and the engineers, each pay 5 per cent of a man's wages into a reserve fund. The details are not all worked out, but the plan will shortly be completed.

"The fight is still on for the closed shop. The C. G. T. wants the power to tell us whom we can hire, but this we shall not concede.

"In this whole struggle of the French workingman to improve his status," continued my informant, himself a Frenchmen and a great executive who had worked his way up from the bottom, "it must not be forgotten that these social reforms now being instituted with such rapidity should have begun long ago. While wages have gone up steadily during the past ten years in other countries, in France they have practically stood still.

"Although the rise in French wages is reasonable, it has upset the men because it came suddenly and only because they had the political power to insist upon it. The 40-hour week is also temporarily demoralizing. These men have never had so much leisure and as nothing was done to prepare them to use it wisely, they are apt to make trouble for themselves and their families. Some of our men in one of the factories struck for the six-hour day only yesterday. That is to be expected. They naturally want to get all they can while the going is good.

Blum And Officials Address Union Men.

"It may also be a tactical error" he continued "for these men to look upon the exposition as a cow that can be milked every day. But they are drawing out their jobs as long as possible because they fear they may be out of work again when the exposition is completed. And they realize that here they have the greatest opportunity to show their power and their solidarity."

That the government is frankly worried about the situation was evidenced yesterday when Mr. Blum, surrounded by six members of the cabinet and the secretary general of the C. G. T., appeared before a congress of union workmen. The papers all described the event as of great importance in the history of the labor movement, for such an assemblage of high government officials had never before addressed a labor meeting.

After the singing of the Internationale and the Marseillaise, M. Jouhaux told the men persuasively that the ministers and he were addressing them together to prove "that according to our opinion the authority of the state is not incompatible with the solidarity of the state and the workers."

Thereupon Prime Minister Blum, in equally conciliatory language, developed much the same theme:

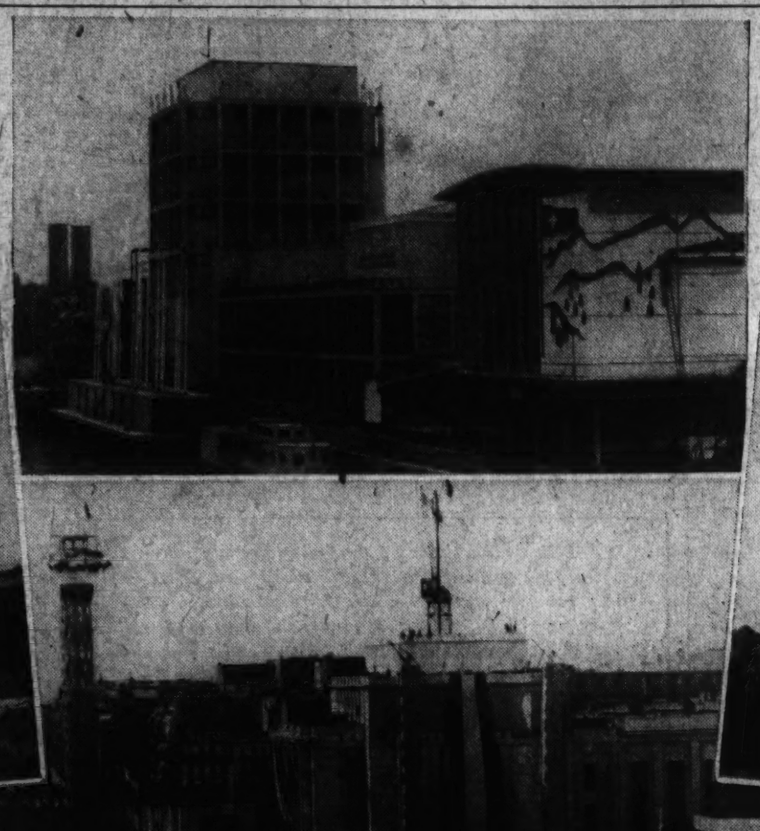
"Your role becomes more important every day. The Socialist worker must become daily more aware of his duty and of his social importance. In the factory and in the workshop he must be the good example. It must not be forgotten that socialism is not a doctrine of underproduction and laziness but that, on the contrary, its aims are to create abundance through an equitable division of production."

Le Matin points out in its chief editorial that at the same time Blum and Jouhaux were imploring union labor to increase its production, the building unions were holding another meeting at which they stated: "If in two months other work has not been found for us, we shall take possession of the exposition." Le Matin does not hesitate to use the ugly word blackmail to describe this declaration, and then continues: "It must be admitted that the impious language of the leaders of these workmen, threatening as they do the ruin of the exposition, justifies the movement of revolt on the part of those elements who are uniting to prevent the harmful effects of communism."

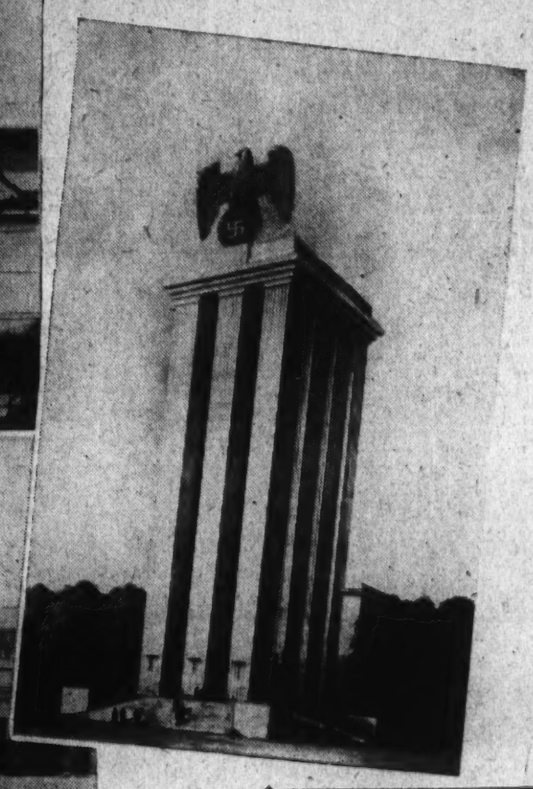
The fact remains that in spite of M. Blum's conciliatory speeches and M. Jouhaux's attempts to get action, only a few masons reported for work on the exposition buildings yesterday and today as I finish this article, the scaffoldings along the Seine are empty and silent.

Fortunately this is an exposition of arts and techniques, and what better way could there be of illustrating both procedures than to invite the world to see them actively carried on? Many other people seem to agree with me that an exposition in the making is more fascinating than the finished product, for during the first week 400,000 visitors enjoyed the amazing spectacle, and the entrance fees alone exceeded 620,000 francs.

When the Paris exposition of 1937 was formally opened by President Lebrun on May 24 many of the buildings were still uncompleted, as the picture at the right shows. The court is part of the beautiful but unfinished Trocadero.



One of the few completed structures at the fair along the banks of the Seine is the impressive building of the U. S. S. R. (above). Its two large silvered figures hold aloft the Soviet hammer and sickle.



Just as impressive at the Soviet structure aggressively facing it across the central esplanade is the Nazi building, with a huge gold eagle on top of it. Italy's fair building (center above), is less conspicuous than that of its two brother dictatorships, and is not attracting as many visitors. While only one French building was finished when the fair was inaugurated, the structures erected by Russia, Italy and Germany were all ready to welcome the public.

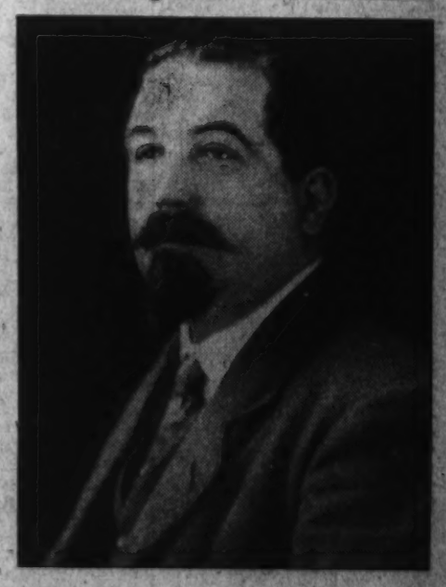
Premier Leon Blum frequently implored French labor to make a special effort to get the exposition completed on time, but all his appeals failed. The union workmen loafed on the job for several months and the result is the half-finished fair.



Leader of the French union workers is Leon Jouhaux, "the John Lewis of France." Even his pleading failed to move the French workers to do the exposition job quickly and efficiently.

Framing the Constitution

By W. B. Ragsdale
Associated Press Staff Writer.

This the last story in a series dealing with the origins of the Constitution.

Not even the men who wrote the Constitution could agree upon what it meant after they finished.

So many were the compromises woven into its fabric that quite a few of the delegates got different ideas from looking at the finished product. This they showed in the debates at Philadelphia and in the subsequent State conventions. One such case sprang from the section that determined the validity of the social security act.

The general welfare section the delegates agreed upon read: "The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States."

Dr. James McHenry, of Maryland wanted also to write in the power to build piers to protect shipping in winter and preserve harbor navigation. Gov. Morris of Pennsylvania told McHenry he favored Congress having such power but felt it was covered already in the general welfare clause.

Feared Privileges To Trading Firms.

McHenry was somewhat surprised at the thought that the power went this far for he set down in his notes: "If this comprehends such a power, it goes to authorize the Legislature to grant exclusive privileges to trading companies, etc."

Many of the questions prominent now were not touched upon in the debates because they are worries of a maturing nation and not those of an infant republic. The big reason that the convention met was to make certain the republic would live, not to solve all the problems of future generations. Most of the powers given the new Government were to correct defects that had shown up in the old. Much of the text of the Constitution was drawn from the Articles of Confederation, but in the new document life and fire and strength were given to the words.

In the debates, some pointed to what might happen beyond their own generation; others were frankly skeptical that the Constitution would live. James Madison argued that if a House member was given for every 40,000 citizens, that branch of Congress would get so large as to be unwieldly. Nathaniel Gorham, of Massachusetts, replied: "It is not to be supposed that the Government will last so long as to produce this effect. Can it be supposed that this vast country, including the Western territory, will 150 years hence remain one nation?"

Interstate Commerce Given Little Thought.

In giving Congress the power to regulate commerce, the delegates were most interested in dealing with foreign trade. Slavery was bound up in the import problem. That called for a compromise. Whether exports should be taxed was debated. But despite the rows growing from tariffs some States had levied upon goods from others, little mention was made of interstate commerce.

Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut, said the power given Congress to regulate trade between the States would protect them against each other. Gov. Morris thought an export tax might be used by the Federal Government some time to encourage domestic manufacture. Madison felt an embargo against exports might be needed.

Foreign trade was important. Raw materials were shipped, manufactures imported. Trade among the States, save for raw materials, was not very large. At a time when slaves worked from daylight to dark without pay, men did not spend much time debating working hours, wages, child labor and the complexities that would grow out of strange machines.

Toward the end of the convention, McHenry raised the question of allowing the States to collect duties on tonnage to clear harbors and build light houses.

Extent of Regulation Given Consideration.

"Whether the States are now restrained from laying tonnage duties depends upon the extent of the power 'to regulate commerce,'" observed Madison. "These terms are vague but they seem to exclude this power of the States."

"The power of the United States to regulate trade being supreme can control interferences of the State regulations when such interferences happen," said Roger Sherman, of Connecticut. Even there, the problem they were debating had to do with foreign trade.

More debate was devoted to the feasibility of giving the Supreme Court a power that it never got than to all of the other details of setting up the Court. The convention left to the committee of detail the job of writing most of the specifications of what the Court should do. The committee did not specify that the Court should decide what laws fell outside the bounds of the Constitution. And among the debates on the section, the question did not arise directly.

Several efforts were made, however, to have a part of the judiciary act with the President as a council of revision which would go over the laws enacted and veto those the council found were bad. In this manner, such laws would be weeded out before they went into effect. The final decision was against such a council.

The chief difficulty encountered after the delegates settled the argument between the big States and the little ones was how to elect a President. Many changes were made in both the method of election and the length of his term before they finally settled upon the plan for which, in the main, has come down to the present day.

Election of President Divided Three Ways.

Like quite a few other problems, this one was given to a special committee to work out. The plan finally arrived at gave the election of the President neither to the people, the States nor to Congress, but divided it among the three. This division of power was much in line with an argument Madison made in the con-

Planes of Four Nations Poised for Transatlantic Service; Pan-American Company Opens New Bermuda Airline

Great Circle Survey Flights Begin June 24

Regular Trips Expected by One or More of Lines This Summer.

By Alexander F. Jones.

The race to establish regular commercial airplane service across the North Atlantic, carrying both passengers and mail, is proceeding at a rapid clip, with American, British, German and French lines hurrying preparations to be the first in the field. Regular transatlantic service by airplane can be expected this summer from one or more of the lines now in the forefront of the race.

Almost simultaneous announcements were forthcoming from Paris and Berlin this week that passenger and mail planes would be starting for New York—in the case of Lufthansa, the German company, within a month, and the French as soon as official sanction is given.

At the same time, Pan American, already conqueror of the South American and Pacific fields, is working in co-operation with Imperial Airways, the British pioneering company, on plans for spanning the Atlantic on a two-way route. One route considers the great circle, New York to Newfoundland, Ireland and London. The other is the longer, but from a weather standpoint, easier, via Bermuda, the Azores, Madeira and Portugal.

Thus, ten years after Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight and prediction of regular transatlantic service, this practical dream is on the very brink of realization.

Pan American Survey Trips to Start June 24.

On June 24, Pan American will start survey trips from Newfoundland on the great circle route. Last week, the same company inaugurated its new service to Bermuda with a preliminary survey trip on which 25 newspaper men were passengers.

The great Sikorsky ocean-going air liner lifted its heavy burden—there were eight members of the crew in addition to the passengers—off the bay at Port Washington, Long Island, through fog and rain, and within a few minutes was out of sight of land. Commanded by Capt. R. O. H. Sullivan, whose eight years with Pan American have seen him flying 225,000 miles for his company including all of the exploratory work that resulted in the establishment of the Pacific service and the new Bermuda Clipper, skimmed through a stretch of unfavorable weather without a quiver. And in 5 hours and 15 minutes it fluttered down on the protected basin at Darrells Island, in Bermuda. The big plane can make better time than this, but assumed a leisurely cruising speed of 160 miles an hour, while the impressed passengers lolled around the tastefully furnished compartments, playing bridge or poker, eating exquisitely prepared food and bothering the veteran crew with all sorts of half-baked questions.

At the same time the Bermuda Clipper was travelling east, the Cavalier, of Imperial Airways, was westbound for Port Washington, and it was a real thrill for at least one passenger to have the radio man announce: "We will pass the Cavalier in ten minutes." But at the time of passing the big liner was cutting through a "cold front" or fog bank and we did not see the Cavalier, but the following message was received:

"Hello, up there. We are flying at 3,200 feet and everything is lovely. Hope you are having as good a time and that you enjoy Bermuda. Cheerio." The Bermuda Clipper was at that time flying at 8,000.

And it was another thrill to come ashore in coral encircled Bermuda and find 71-year-old Sir Henry W. Watlington, His Worship the Mayor of Hamilton and a group of Bermuda notables waiting with a cordial welcome. Sir Henry, a keen old gentleman, was a trifle bewildered by this business of dropping in on him five hours out of New York.

"You know my family has been in the clipper business for many, many years, but none of them looked like this," he said. "It is quite a change in one man's lifetime. We are always talking about bringing the British and Americans closer together. This does it with a vengeance, doesn't it?"

As he talked in that leisurely way of Bermuda folk, he was looking at the huge hangar Pan-American and Imperial Airways has built. It is a trifle incongruous, considering the beautiful homes and hotels, all white roofed and corrugated to catch rain water. But it spells progress and more business for Bermuda and the islanders are all for it. They proved that by the splendid entertainments provided for the visitors.

Next morning, after a dip in the turquoise water and a trip around lovely Hamilton, the voyageurs were back in the Clipper, New York bound. Leaving at 10:27 a. m., the big ship made the Port Washington base at 4:06 p. m. On the return trip, the passengers were less interested in the mechanics of the trip and keener about lunch and the bridge games. Lunch, by the way, was as follows:

Iced Honeydew Melon
Hearts of Celery
Mixed Olives
Young Radishes
Rolls and Butter
Consomme Berganaise
Broiled Filet Mignon
Aux Champignons, Bearnaise
Fresh Broccoli, Beurre Noir
Pommes Rissole
Lettuce and Tomato Salad
Mocha Cake Demi Tasse

Somehow, it was possible to bear up under that. The food is prepared ashore and the heat and flavors marvelously preserved by fireless cookers. And for those whom a heavy lunch made sleepy, berths were made up. In short, Pan American officials did everything but hold the hands of the losers in the poker game.

That was the start of the Bermuda service. Hereafter, the Bermuda Clipper will leave Port Washington at 10 a. m. on Thursday and return on Sunday, while the British ship will leave Bermuda on Wednesdays and return on Saturdays. It is only a hop of 773 miles over the water.

German Line To Use Azores Route.

The German announcement from Berlin states that the Lufthansa schedule contemplates service via the Azores from Frankfurt. The French announcement is also expected to go that way, although definite plans were held in abeyance. The great circle route to Europe is much shorter than via Bermuda, but weather conditions are not as stable.

One thing the Clipper service has demonstrated, and that is that sea boats can run on schedule and through any weather. To date 65 round trips have been made to Honolulu from San Francisco without missing a revolution of an engine. The South American service is as steady as a clock. And there is another factor in ocean flying that is attractive to a very amateurish layman—one does not bump into mountains and whenever one of these big ships does have to land on the water it can live in any sea.

WITH the completion of the final preliminary survey flight to Bermuda prior to the establishment of regular passenger service, the Pan American Airways, cooperating with Imperial Airways, is one step closer to commercial flights across the Atlantic. Transatlantic flights, goal of companies from four nations, will soon become a reality. Passenger service to Bermuda will be maintained by the Bermuda Clipper (left) and other clipper ships of the Pan American line, and the Cavalier (right) and other flying boats of English Imperial Airways. This summer, survey flights have been planned over both the northern great circle route, shown on the map below, and the southern route, by way of Bermuda, the Azores and Portugal. The airlines plan to use the great circle route, which is shorter, during the summer and the southern route during the winter.

Does a determined Senate minority still have the power to filibuster a bill to death?

That happens to be a much mooted question around the Capitol these days—what with the coming battle on a court plan compromise, and the uncertainty as to the final vote.

There are two schools of thought in the Senate corridors, both loudly vocal. One holds that the twentieth amendment to the Constitution underlined the "bust" in filibuster—that it tossed the Senate's traditional weapon out the window along with lame ducks and short sessions.

The old theory of filibuster was built on a certainty that Congress would close on a certain day, and the idea was to talk and talk until that day arrived. The twentieth amendment changed all that. Now Congress just runs along until it is ready to quit, or until another session starts.

Court plan opponents say this talk is so much bunk, and they will soon furnish a convincing demonstration. They are ready, and say they are capable, of putting filibuster back in the dictionary, with a longer definition.

Shades of the late Bob La Follette, who holds the filibuster record of about 17 hours, may again stalk through the Senate if they go through with the plans. Nebraska's Senator Burke says he is ready to deliver the longest speech of his career. Another Senator already has written two speeches. Another has roughly outlined 15.

They plan to hold out, night and day, if necessary, by continuous talking, quorum calls, and a reserve squad of five ready speakers available to draw on, until such a time, if it comes, as they know they have the votes to defeat a compromise.

If the twentieth amendment thesis holds, they can't do it. If their speeches and combined strength holds out, they can. Anyhow, it does look like we might have a filibuster to end or continue filibuster. And about the end of August or September, we might have the answer to our question.

* * * *

They do say around the Capitol as how Vice President John Nance Garner is planning a vacation for himself.

In past sessions, Jack Garner always has been one of adjournment's first harbingers. When Garner started packing his bags, there was a general rush toward the ticket window for passages home. Nor was it ever a false cue.

But when the Garners start packing today they will pack alone. His colleagues will watch wistfully, but will not follow, however much they would like to. At least, them's orders!

The President takes his fishing trips, the court takes it recesses, and, by gad, a Vice President has some privileges. Garner sticks to his job more closely than his predecessors when Congress is in session, but when midsummer comes—well—that's quitting time.

Anyhow, that's how a lot of Democratic members, other than Garner, feel about it. That's how the National Grange, in a statement last week, said it feels about it. And that's how a lot of blase, Congress-weary Washingtonians feel about it.

* * * *

Garner has probably the most cosmopolitan acquaintance of any high official of the Government. He has close friendships extending down through the entire Capitol staff, guards, elevator operators, pages, clerks. One story is told of how Garner's wide Washington friendships once stood him in good stead.

"Cactus Jack" was Speaker of the House at the time, and Democrats were not so strong in numbers that every vote in the party was not urgently needed and sought.

This was about the time Ed Crump, Tennessee's two-fisted political boss, decided to come to the House in his own right and see how business was done up Washington way.

For a long time, so the story goes, Crump kept aloof from Garner. Then one day he popped into the Speaker's office.

"I just wanted to tell you I'm with you," Crump said. "I've been looking and talking around. I haven't been talking with the members. I don't care what they think. But I've had talks with some of the cab drivers and policemen and employes around the place. They like you. And I guess if you're all right with them, you're all right with me."

When the coming battle really gets going in the Senate, you can look for some pungent, if homely, contributions from Senator Vic Donahey, of Ohio.

Economy is red meat for Ohio's Donahey. Pennies saved for the taxpayer blazed his meteor first into the Buckeye governorship and then into the Senate. And at the bottom of it all was one baked potato, nicely done.

In some sections of Ohio, Donahey still is known as "the baked potato Senator." And thereon hangs a tale.

It all started back seven or eight years ago, when Donahey was a State auditor, with ideas about public service and what it should cost. Among other routine, it was his job to audit expense accounts, and he took the job seriously.

It so happened a State appellate judge had a dinner at the expense of the State, and sent in a little bill of $3 to cover the cost. Now Donahey never paid $3 for a meal, and he was curious to know upon what meat State judges fed.

So he asked the judge to itemize his account. When the jurist obligingly complied, one item caught the State auditor's eye—it was one baked potato, 60 cents.

It was incredible to Donahey that a baked potato, however served up, could cost 60 cents. It was incredible to him that anyone should pay such a price. And it was incredible that anyone could, would or did eat a 60-cent baked potato.

Ohio has heard many times about that baked potato. Donahey has told Ohio about it many times. And it is just possible the Senate will hear about it, and other comparable items, when Donahey turns his keen eye on Government relief expenditures.

Artistic Designs Submitted for the Washington Monument.

The Board of Managers of the Washington Monument has received several excellent models by noted artists for the proposed monument to General Washington. Since Congress has not yet complied with the Board's request for a site and the funds requisite to the building of a shaft commensurate to the greatness of the man in whose blessed memory it is to be erected, no final action could be taken as to the selectivity of the most effective design. However, the Board did extend to these artists its considerate appreciation and recognition for their splendid work.

Disposition of Cuba Cause for Alarm.

The application of Cuba for representation in the Spanish Cortez indicates the urgent desire for at least a greater measure of home rule and could easily portend the efforts which the Cubans intend to exert toward complete independence. This island is the key to the Gulf of Mexico and it is a known fact that England looks with a longing eye to the control of this strategic point. As mistress of Gibraltar she has divided the forces of France and Spain; and with the Cape of Good Hope she controls the route to India. Her exercise of sovereignty over Cuba would make her mistress of th Carribean and doorkeeper of the Gulf of Mexico. Only recently the United States was successful in preventing the Spanish Government from hypothecating the Island for a loan by England to Spain, and therefore in lieu of retention by Spain, the only disposition acceptable to the United States would be the granting of complete independence.

Postmaster General Refuses Court Summons.

Last year Congress passed a law granting relief to certain mail contractors by directing the Postmaster General to pay their claims against the Government if they were approved by the solicitor of the Treasury. They were so approved, but Postmaster General Amos Kendall deducted a sum of $39,000 from the final payment as not being proper in his estimation. Two weeks ago the contractors applied to the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia for the issuance of a rule against Mr. Kendall to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued compelling him to pay this sum. He refused to answer the rule and in sending his refusal to the court he attached a copy of a ruling of the Attorney General in which it was denied that the court had any right to issue a mandamus against the head of a department of the Federal Government. Ignoring both the Attorny General's opinion and the absence of the Postmaster General, the court issued the mandamus compelling payment to be made immediately.

Angry Firemen Disrupt Irish Funeral Procession.

BOSTON—Having just returned from fighting a stubborn fire, and being somewhat exhausted, the firemen of Station No. 126 decided to leave the engine standing in the middle of the street until they were quite rested. On the street corner opposite the fire house some 30 Irish mourners awaited the arrival of the funeral procession of their departed friend. Thinking that the fire engine would be in the way of the procession, they asked the firemen to move it. But of no avail. Unmentionable words followed their request; some blows were passed; the fight was on. Brickbats came from every direction. Gathering crowds took sides according to their best judgment. The Mayor called out the militia. Death toll: two Irishmen.

Exiled Prince "Escapes" From U. S.

NEW YORK—By means of a false passport Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, who had been exiled to America by King Louis Philippe of France last October for his part in the Strassburg mutiny, sailed on the American vessel "George Washington" for London. It is believed that he will proceed from that point to Switzerland to visit his mother, the Ex-Queen of Holland who is critically ill. Before sailing he reviewed on Broadway a five-mile parade of the famous "German Corps" of New York's finest soldiers. The corps takes this name from the presence of such a large number of German-Americans within its ranks. Prince Louis, during his stay in this country, has enjoyed great popularity. He is known to have high political ambitions which, no doubt, he inherited from his illustrious uncle, Emperor Napoleon.

The News of the Week Passes in Brief Review

National Affairs

Strike

The War Goes On!

Industrial strife blazed through the Middle West last week as two mighty antagonists, Steel and Labor, strengthened their forces and dug in for a period of protracted and bitter warfare.

The strike-weary Great Lakes area lived through another week of violence and tension as it anxiously watched three Governors try in vain to settle the differences between the aggressive C. I. O. and the equally belligerent independent steel companies. The one and only issue remained whether or not the steel companies will sign union contracts, and on that issue both sides refused to budge an inch.

The independents—powerful Republic Steel, third largest producer in the United States; Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and the Inland Steel Corporation—vigorously reiterated last week their determination never to sign on the C. I. O. dotted line. To comply with the Wagner act they are willing to enter into an oral agreement with the union, but a written agreement—never. Such a contract, they insist, will eventually lead to the closed shop and the checkoff of union dues.

Unlike "Big Steel," which averted industrial strife by signing a C. I. O. contract in February, "Little Steel" is determined to hold out on its open-shop policy indefinitely and feels confident it can administer the first major set-back to the powerful John L. Lewis union.

The C. I. O. is just as adamant in its stand as the steel companies. The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which is conducting the strike, loudly declares its men will picket the plants and impede and hinder operations by local workers until the companies agree to a contract.

With steel plants scattered throughout the Midwest, the companies and the union fought on a wide front, and pickets clashed with police and armed civilians in cities in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. As the week closed, the strike spread to Pennsylvania, hitting Bethlehem Steel, largest of the independents.

Chief developments of the week along the five-State industrial battle line were:

The C. I. O. was fighting both the big industrialists and its own members in several areas. Groups of workers in the young, inexperienced United Automobile Workers Union got out of hend in several Michigan cities and had to be disciplined by Lewis and Homer Martin, youthful chief of the U. A. W.

Leader Lewis and his aides in the steel and automobile field were thus faced with the double problem of getting new signed contracts from industry and at the same time forcing their more hot-headed members to live up to existing contracts.

AT MONROE, Mich., the Republic Steel Co. and the S. W. O. C. had their first showdown, and the company, reinforced by the town's mayor and a group of armed civilians, won.

After conciliatory Gov. Murphy refused State intervention, scrappy Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs of Monroe issued a call Tuesday for volunteers to aid police in breaking through the picket line and reopening the Newton Steel Co., a Republic subsidiary. Several hundred men responded and were sworn in as special deputies. On Thursday 200 police and special deputies stormed their way through the union ranks and, with a tear and nauseating gas barrage, scattered the picket line, clearing the way for 500 loyal workers to get back into the plant. The attack was so successfully carried out that there were no casualties on either side.

AT PONTIAC, Mich., the U. A. W. local, incensed at the treatment of their fellow unionists in Monroe, called a city-wide "labor holiday," stopping production at several automobile plants, preparatory to starting a union march on the neighboring city. The danger of a serious clash was averted when Martin rushed to Pontiac, persuaded union leaders to cancel their "labor holiday" and stop the "march on Monroe."

To divert union enthusiasm into other channels he announced that a gigantic, peaceful mass meeting would be held in Monroe today to protest the routing of the pickets at the Newton plant. Members of C. I. O. unions in Michigan, Indiana and Ohio will converge on Monroe at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Mayor Knaggs asked Gov. Murphy for National Guard troops to protect his city during the demonstration and the two officials conferred in Detroit yesterday on plans for making the mass meeting a "peaceful" one.

• • • •

AT LANSING, Mich., the United Automobile Workers seized the business section of the Capital, forced the closing of banks and department stores and stalled all traffic for several hours Monday morning in protest against the arrest of eight pickets striking against the Capitol City Wrecking Co.

The one-day "labor holiday" was ended after Gov. Murphy intervened, and secured the release of the pickets.

AT FLINT, Mich., 115 union employers of the Consumers Power Co., dissatisfied with an agreement their C. I. O. leaders had just won for them in Washington, cut off all power and gas service in the Saginaw Valley area, crippling industry, throwing 160,000 men out of work for a day, and inconveniencing more than 400,000 persons. The small group of strikers pulled the switches at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday, paralyzing production in Flint, Bay City, Saginaw, and 192 smaller communities, and the lights remained off for 16 hours.

Gov. Murphy, who was en route to Pittsburgh when the strikers seized the power plants, got Lewis and Martin on the phone Wednesday morning and demanded they end immediately "this despotic action on the part of labor." The two C. I. O. leaders had just signed a contract with the power company calling for a 5 cents an hour wage increase and exclusive bargaining rights for the C. I. O. The workers called that wage boost insufficient, and their seizure of the power plant was the result.

When the strikers' own negotiating committee arrived at the plant in a chartered plane at twilight Wednesday night with orders from Lewis and Martin that the strike end immediately, the workers acceded, and voted 88 to 27 to accept the agreement signed in Washington.

Martin promised that instigators of the "unauthorized strike" would be disciplined by the parent union.

AT YOUNGSTOWN, in the heart of the famous Mahoning Valley steel area, Mayor Lionel Evans swore in hundreds of special deputies when a city-wide general strike to aid the steel pickets was threatened. Strikers patrolling the Youngstown plants were disarmed of their baseball bats and clubs by police in several skirmishes in which a number of persons were beaten up and injured. Fourteen strikers were gassed and two policemen injured as the police escorted several food trucks into a plant of the Republic Co.

• • • •

AT WARREN and NILES, Ohio, postmasters continued to refuse to accept "abnormal" mail to be sent to workers in the Republic plants there. The company and relatives of the besieged workers have tried to send food and clothing by mail. The Republic Steel Co. formally demanded, in a letter to Postmaster General Farley, that the postoffice accept and deliver all mail for the plants in Warren and Niles, and threatened to take "legal steps" if its demands were not met.

• • • •

AT COLUMBUS, Ohio, Gov. Martin L. Davey, after a conference Friday with company officials and union executives suggested a 7-point peace plan. The main recommendation was the signing of an agreement under the terms of which the steel companies would recognize the C. I. O. as the representative of its own members, as the United States Steel Corporation did in its contract with the Lewis union.

Slight hopes of success are held out for that compromise solution, however, as "Little Steel" appears adamant in its determination to resist any contract at all, and the union now demands an exclusive bargaining contract.

AT GARY, Ind., representatives of 86 Midwest locals of the S. W. O. C. held a strategy meeting Sunday and sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, asking him to intervene in the strike which has seriously curtailed steel production in seven States.

• • • •

AT CAMBRIA, Pa., C. I. O. workers marched out of the Bethlehem Steel plant early yesterday morning, thus drawing the largest of the independents into the strike. The union claimed that 10,000 of the 15,000 employes were out, but the company insisted production was being maintained with a large majority of their regular force.

Bethlehem Steel, third largest producer in the country, employs 80,000 men. So far, the strike affects only its Cambria plant.

• • • •

AT CHICAGO, where the eighth victim of the Memorial Day riot at the Republic Steel plant died, leaders of the steel workers organizing committee invoked the Wagner Act for the first time since the strike began on May 26. They formally charged the Inland Steel Corporation with "unfair labor practices" in a complaint filed with the National Labor Relations Board.

At the South Chicago plant of the Republic Steel Corporation, scene of the bloody Memorial Day riot, more than 1,000 employes, living in Pullman cars in the mill yards, continued to produce steel. The company claimed that its production was almost 80 per cent of capacity.

After Chicago's Mayor Edward J. Kelly ordered the Republic company to evacuate its employes because living conditions violated the health and building ordinance, the company obtained a permit from the city to turn its warehouse into a dormitory and living quarters in order to comply with the health law. It will cost the company about $2,000 to remodel the structure.

• • • •

IN WASHINGTON the Senate Committee on Postoffice and Post Roads ordered a complete investigation into charges of union tampering with the mails and counter charges of "unfair labor practices" by the three independent steel companies.

Senator H. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, charged that union leaders were handling and censoring mail packages at the Warren and Niles postoffices. This was denied by department officials.

Other developments of the week on the C. I. O. front included:

The American Newspaper Guild, at its annual convention in St. Louis, voted, 118½ to 18½, to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization. The Guild became a member of the A. F. of L. in 1936.

Sidney Hillman, chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing committee, threatened a strike of 60,000 silk workers unless manufacturers sign a contract with the C. I. O. within two weeks. The strike would be the first major union uprising in the textile industry and would affect plants in New York, New England, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

• • • •

Members of the committee against false economy bolted the American Federation of Government Employes last week to join the C. I. O. At a large mass meeting at the Willard Hotel, the group, numbering about 1,500, assailed the A. F. of L. and voted to ask the C. I. O. to help organize Government employes "in defense of their jobs and job standards" and to unite them with the rest of the organized labor movement.

Congress

The Work Piles Up!

Members of Congress will look longingly after Vice President Garner today as he leaves the Capital for his home in Uvalde, Tex. In other years Garner has always been the leader of a large caravan of home-going Congressmen, but this year he goes alone, while members of the House and Senate glumly face the prospect of a session lasting until late August, or maybe even September or October.

Garner called up the "boss" last week and said he would like to go home for a month or six weeks of resting and fishing. "Go ahead" said the President in effect, "and I'll call you if I need you."

Weary Congressmen wish the President felt the same way about them. But instead he insists on a long "ought" program of legislation before they can go home, and then keeps sending more work over to Capitol Hill.

Last week he added to the high pile of proposals now facing Congress his recommendations for the American Merchant Marine.

In a special message, he asked the House and Senate to allot $10,000,000 immediately to start the "long-delayed rehabilitation" of United States shipping, and to authorize the new Maritime Commission to spend an additional $150,000,000 as a beginning on a five-year ship replacement program to cost eventually about $450,000,000. The funds would be given to American shippers in the form of subsidies to cover the difference between construction costs here and abroad, and to aid them in building an efficient American merchant marine to replace the present obsolete one. Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, said the fund would be enough for the construction of 95 ships.

Lewis Approves Wage Bill.

John L. Lewis appeared before the joint congressional labor committee last week to defend the Black-Connery wage-hour bill as a "modest beginning" in "industrial planning under Federal auspices." While approving the measure in general, he objected, however, to one important provision, the power of the Labor Standards Board to interfere with wages above the minimums. That field, he believes, should be left to collective bargaining. Lewis favors as minimum wage and maximum hour standards 40 cents an hour and a 35-hour week.

Several corporation officials assailed the bill at last week's hearings, charging that it would wreck many business, that is was a "super NRA" and that it "tended to fascism."

Tax Investigation Ordered.

Congress voted last week to begin a public investigation of the tax-dodging that President Roosevelt told them is being so widely practiced today. The inquiry to be conducted by a joint House and Senate committee, will open next week with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as the first witness. He is expected to make public the names of those anonymous tax evaders mentioned in the President's recent message. Persons accused by the Treasury of tax-dodging will then be asked to appear in their own defense.

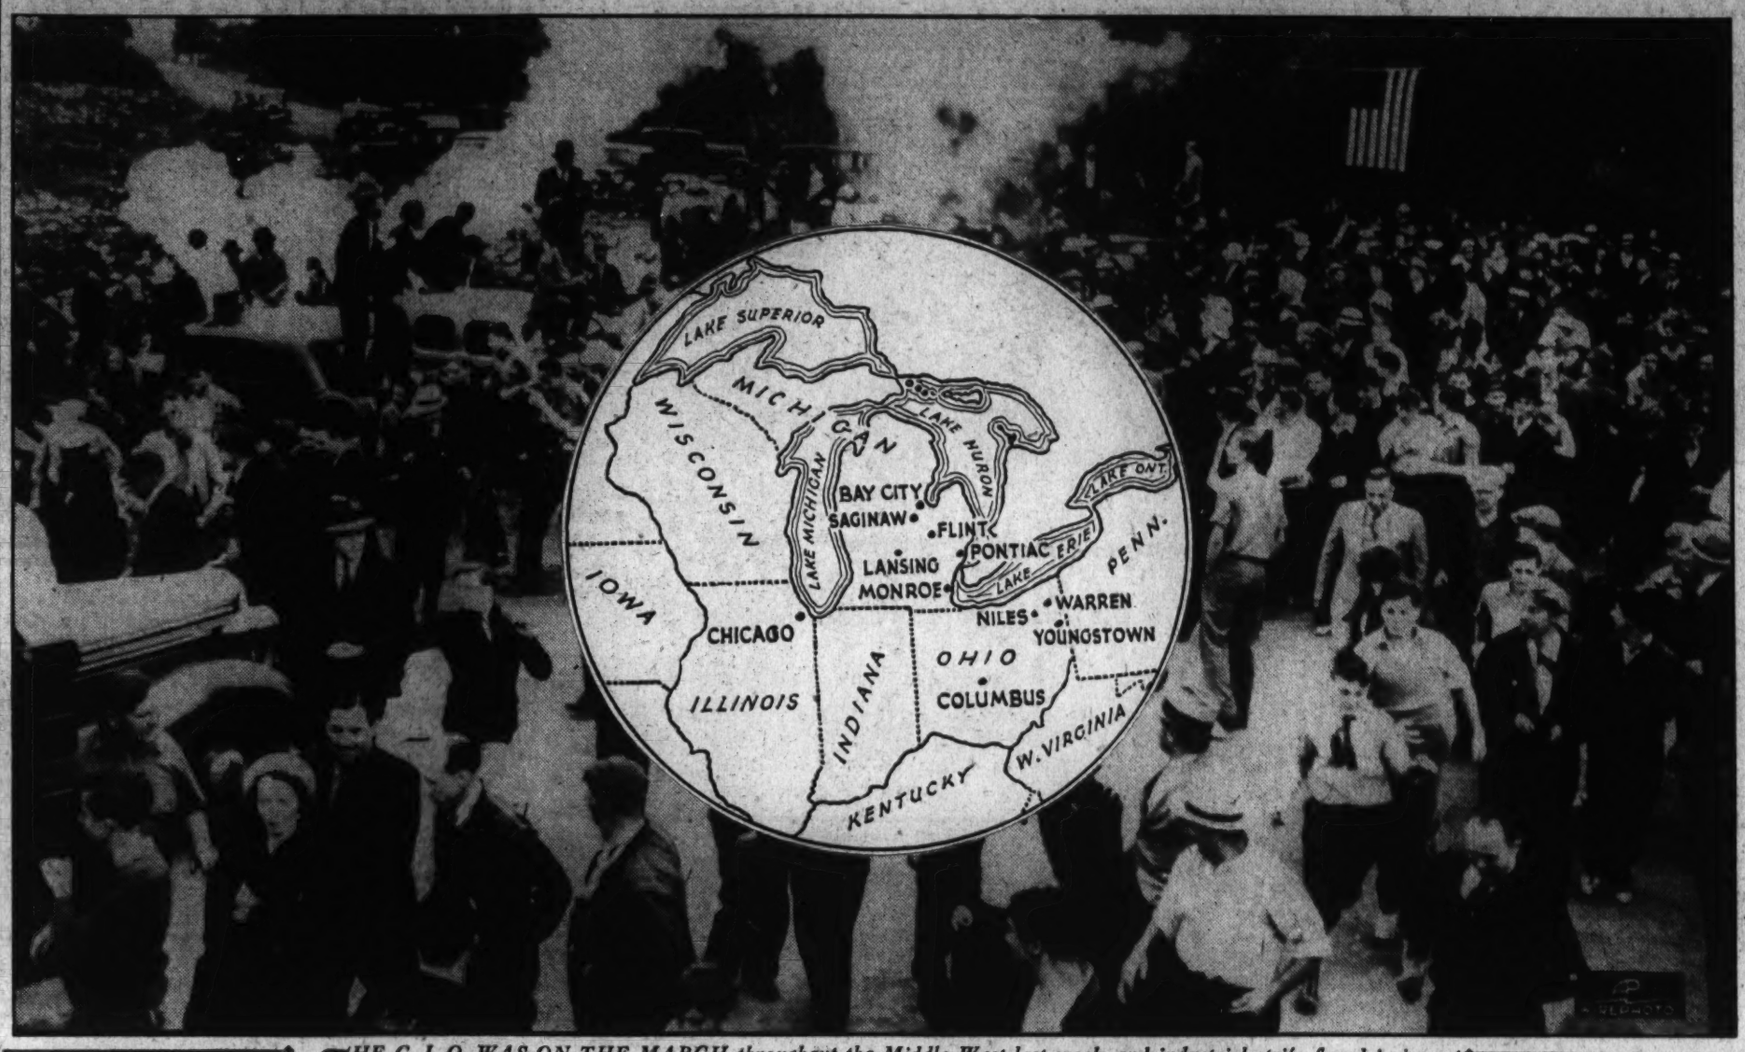
Financier J. P. Morgan, in a shipboard interview on the Queen Mary last week, came out vigorously against the Presidential statement that "morals" were involved in the tax question. He said:

"If the Government doesn't know enough to collect taxes, a man's a fool to pay them . . . Taxation is a legal question, pure and simple . . . Anybody's justified in doing anything as long as the law doesn't say it's wrong.

• • • •

Relief Inquiry Voted.

The Senate, by a voice vote last week, voted $10,000 to finance an inquiry into relief and unemployment policies, to formulate a long-range program. Senator Byrns will head the committee for the investigation.



THE C. I. O. WAS ON THE MARCH throughout the Middle West last week, and industrial strife flared in important industrial cities in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Scenes like the one above, with pickets clashing with police and armed civilians, took place at Monroe, Mich., where the Republic Steel plant was re-opened with loyal workers, and at Youngstown and Warren, Ohio, where food trucks for workers inside the mill were rushed through the picket lines. In Saginaw Valley area in Michigan all power was shut off for 16 hours when a small number of C.I.O. workmen pulled the switches, which stalled factory machinery in Flint, Bay City, Saginaw and many smaller communities. In Lansing business was at a standstill during a one-day labor holiday. Gov. Davey tried unsuccessfully to settle the Ohio steel strike in a conference at Columbus; Gov. Townsend failed, in a conference at Indianapolis, to bring peace to the Chicago-Calumet area, and Gov. Murphy was busy all week settling the strikes at Flint and Lansing.

Soviets

Purge the Red Army

The Soviet Union doomed eight high army officers last week to be shot as spies for an unnamed "enemy."

It was Russia's third big trial. The other two were the trial of the Zinoviev-Kamanev group in August, 1936, which ended in the summary execution of 16, and that of journalist, Karl Radek and his fellow-defendants last January which resulted in the death of 13 more.

The drama which Russians love was, however, missing here. In secret the trial was held. The place was unannounced. There was no prosecution, no defence. This was in keeping with a law passed shortly after the murder of Sergei M. Kirov, Stalin's chief aid, at Leningrad, December, 1934, which decreed secrecy for such trials, banned any mercy plea or appeal, and directed the immediate carrying out of "the supreme measure of social defence"—death by a firing squad.

The trial was the biggest military sensation in Soviet Union history. Involved were Marshal Mikhail N. Tulkhachevsky, famed military strategist; Gen. Jonas Emmanuilovich, former Kiev commander; Gen. Jeremy Uborevich, former White Russia commander; Gen. A. I. Kork, head of the Fruze Military Academy; Robert Petroivich Eideman, former head of the Red Army's civilian reserve; Gen. Putna, one-time military attache at London; Gen. Feldman, chief of the personnel section of the general staff, and Gen. V. M. Primakov, Yakir's, first assistant in command of the important Kiev district.

All defendants were tried in secrecy by their peers. The court martial included two marshals and was presided over by brusque Judge Vassily V. Ulrich, who presided at the earlier treason trials.

Specifically, the doomed men who "confessed," were accused of "selling out" Russia. The verdict handed down read:

"The court established that the defendants were employed by the military secret service of a foreign government, conducting an unfriendly policy against the U. S. S. R.

"They systematically gave it espionage information, permitted wrecking acts for the purpose of undermining the power of the Red Army and preparing, in case of military attacks on the U. S. S. R., a defeat for the Red Army, and had as an aim the splitting of the U. S. S. R. and the return to power of the landlords and capitalists.

Spain

Guns Pound Bilbao

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's northern army, now under the command of Gen. Fidelio Davila, blasted its way last week to Bilbao's last concrete line of defenses.

Regaining ground lost after Basque counter-attacks, the rebel army ploughed through high hills overlooking the valley towns of Lezama and Larrabezua, while their big guns and aircraft punished the sturdy Basque army unmercifully.

Archduke Otto of Hapsburg was a witness of the resumption of the rebel drive. From a hill-top near the front southeast of encircled Bilbao, the 24-year-old Austrian pretender watched rebel artillery and planes showering shells and bombs with deadly effect on Basque positions.

The rebel command predicted the drive would be continued "so long as the weather lasts or until Bilbao falls."

Other war news: Catching the rebels by surprise, loyalist troops on the Guadalajara front captured an important position and took many prisoners and munitions: Indalecio Prieto, Spanish government defense minister, announced an army of nearly 500,000 men is being formed to win a "merited victory"; Madrid was subjected to the most intense bombardment in its siege history. Shells screamed every ten seconds into scattered parts of the city.

Diplomacy: Britain was still wishfully hoping last week to win the Reich and Italy back to the non-intervention committee. Both Fascist nations quit the committee after the Germans shelled the unfortified town of Almeria. The British, optimistic as ever, believe they can coax both nations back by using the time-honored British method of finding a formula to cover their return.

Protest: A delegation of Basque Catholic clergy paid a secret visit to the Pope. It is known the delegation protested the destruction of open towns and churches by rebel artillery and aircraft.

Germany

Church Fight Rages

Roused to action by the Nazi government's charges of widespread immorality among its priesthood, German Catholicism fought back last week from the pulpit.

Highlighting the week's news was a free-for-all fight in the streets of Munich resulting in the arrest of ten priests. The fracas started after services in which a statement was read showing that only one priest in every 500 is involved in the moral trials.

Meanwhile, Hitler was warning the country that he would not tolerate religious strife.

"It is not God who divides us, but human beings," he said. "The Almighty has blessed our work; therefore it cannot be destroyed.

"No power within or without the Reich will keep us from going our way to our future."

Touching the religious issues, Hitler then added:

"There are some who would like to see the devastation of the 30-year war happen in Germany again—but that attempt will fail, too."

Hitler's stand on the church question was crystalized in an editorial in the leading nationalist socialist organ in the Rhineland. The newspaper welcomed the fact that open warfare has been declared between the Vatican and the German government. It added:

"The only decision that must be demanded is this: Will you obey Adolf Hitler more than you will a church long regimented as a worldly power—a power that has shown itself up in a shameful way?

"We believe that the German people already have decided."

Briefs: Pope Pius again referred to the delicate German religious situation in an address to pilgrims from Bavaria.

"The situation in Catholic Germany," he said, "is not only grave but lamentable. It is so grave, so threatening and so painful that it causes one to weep."

Hitler conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of Merit of the German Eagle, the highest decoration for foreigners within the gift of the Reich, on fellow-dictator Benito Mussolini.

A Hitler "suprise Saturday" may be in store for the free city of Danzig. The German dictator is scheduled to address 600 of his oldest and most trusted followers on Polish frontier problems in a town near the free city, June 19. He will speak in a medieval castle that was once a seat of the Teutonic knights, who overran little Danzig six centuries ago but later suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of a Polish king.

News in Brief

The Irish Free State electors will go to the polls in July to vote on President Eamon de Valera's proposed constitution which declares Ireland a "sovereign, independent state."

Two issues confront the people:

1. Adoption or rejection of the constitution which proposes a new chief of state or president who will be responsible only to the people.

2. A fresh mandate or defeat for de Valera's Fianna Fail Ministry.

Well-grounded fears that the president under the constitution would wield autocratic powers were allayed somewhat by the inserted amendment providing that any army officer cannot hold the presidency.

The big oil strike in Mexico between Lombardo Toleando's industrial unions of the C. I. O. type and 17 foreign companies has succeeded in paralyzing the life of the nation.

The workers continue to demand the 40-hour week and $1.70 basic pay, as well as pensions and other perquisites that the oil companies describe as "ruinous."

Meanwhile, as strike pickets calmly played checkers, the only game publicly permitted by President Lazaro Cardenas, the union strike committee ordered that no gasoline should be supplied to trucks transporting foodstuffs to and within the capital, thereby threatening a foodshortage.

With negotiations suspended between the companies and the unions, only government intervention of some kind can end the strike which is causing increasing unrest in political, labor and army circles.

Matteotti

Remembered in Blood

In June, 1924, Giacomo Matteotti, Italian Socialist Deputy and resolute foe of the Fascist regime, was kidnaped in broad daylight and slain by professional killers reputedly hired by Mussolini.

The death of Matteotti presaged a long list of political assassinations and arrests. Everywhere, secret agents ferreted out those who did not take too kindly to the new regime. Arrested, they were usually sent to the bleak islands of Lipari.

One of those arrested was Prof. Carlo Roselli, prominent Socialist and member of the faculty of the University of Genoa. He was sent to Lipari for the particular offense of aiding in the escape from there in 1926 of Filippo Turati, long a political foe of Mussolini.

Shortly after his incarceration, Roselli made a sensational escape from the island fortress. With him in the daring break were Emilio Lusso, a deputy and distinguished veteran of the World War, and Francesco Nitti, also a deputy and a nephew and namesake of a former Italian premier.

Roselli came to France where he began the publication of the newspaper Giustizia e Liberta, devoted to propaganda against the Italian Fascist regime. In this he was assisted by his brother, Nello. Both soon became a source of annoyance to Il Duce, for both had contacts in Italy and were able to print information which the Rome government found embarrassing.

But now Rome can breathe more freely. Thirteen years to the day after the murder of Matteotti—last Thursday—the two brothers were found dead in woods near Bagnoles, a fashionable resort in Normandy. They had been shot and stabbed with a stiletto.

The latest edition of their paper contained an anti-Fascist article in mourning borders, recalling that it was the anniversary of the killing of Matteotti. The article concluded: "How more worthily could we commemorate our dead than by affirming ever more emphatically that the struggle must continue."

Eclipse

Moon Shadows Sun

Sliding across the face of the sun, the moon blotted out its light along a narrow path last week. Scientists from all parts of the world gathered in Peru, on Canton, a small island in the middle of the Pacific, and on the steamship Steelmaker to observe the longest total eclipse of the sun in 1,200 years.

After months of preparations, the scientists brought out their cameras and smoked glass to witness the seven-minute period when the moon came between the sun and the earth. On tiny Canton Island were grouped men from the United States Navy and from the National Geographic Society. Flying high over Peru, Maj Albert W. Stevens viewed the eclipse from an airplane for the American Museum of Natural History.

Crime

Kidnaped

Pratt Kin Missing

State police and Federal Bureau of Investigation men were baffled last week by the disappearance Wednesday of Alice McDonell Parsons, socially prominent matron of Long Island.

Mrs. Parsons vanished after leaving her home Wednesday, ostensibly to show some property which was for sale. A crude note was found under the foot rail of the Parsons' car, which was parked in the driveway, demanding $25,000 for her return. Later a second note was found instructing her husband to take the money and meet a man in the Jamaica, Long Island, bus station. This note also said that the kidnaper had no place to keep Mrs. Parsons and that after 24 hours she would be dead.

Federal Bureau of Investigation men called into the case when there was an apparent violation of the Lindbergh law, followed all leads but were able to make little progress in tracking down the kidnapers. A bloody ax, which was found shortly after Mrs. Parsons' disappearance, was found to be one used for killing chickens and the blood was that of a chicken.

Jordan

Death Sentence Commuted

Scheduled to die in the electric chair tomorrow morning, Thomas Jordon, 36-year-old bus boy, was granted his seventh reprieve Friday by President Roosevelt. The President, acting on the advice of Attorney General Cummings, commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

Jordon, convicted in the Garden-T-Shoppe slaying in 1931 of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, has been fighting for his freedom. New evidence came to light this year when a police incidental was found in which Mrs. Jaynes described her murderer as being 6-feet tall and of light complexion, while Jordon is 5 feet 6 inches and has dark hair and eyes.

Mrs. Jayne's husband, who has been a frequent visitor at police headquarters, vigorously opposed the leniency shown by President Roosevelt.

American Youth Indorses 'Liberal' Policies in Nation-Wide Poll

Depression Generation Approves of New Deal

Young People Favor F. D. R.'s General Liberal Trend, but Want No Change in Basic American Institutions.

Background

In every national poll the American Institute of Public Opinion seeks out the correct proportion of young voters in every State and obtains their viewpoint. Often this viewpoint differs significantly from that of their elders. Today, for the first time, the Institute assembles the opinions of more than 100,000 young Americans and reports what they are thinking.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 12.—More than 2,000,000 young Americans will be graduated from high schools and colleges this month to begin the search for jobs. They will fall in line with those other long academic processions that have gone ahead of them since 1929—the generation of voters who have come of age since the depression.

What kind of country do these young people want? Are they getting ready, in the words of Rex Tugwell, to "roll up their sleeves and make America over?" Or are they fundamentally satisfied with the order of things as they are?

The American Institute of Public Opinion has sounded the opinions of young voters in scores of national polls, and today two facts stand out unmistakably:

1. In regard to politics, young Americans are overwhelmingly "liberal." They approve of Roosevelt, of most of the New Deal and of the idea of centralized authority in government.

2. In regard to the country's basic institutions they are "conservative." They are opposed, by a small majority, to increasing the Supreme Court. They are lukewarm to organized labor. Finally, despite the spread of "peace pledges," they favor big appropriations for the Army, the Navy and the air forces.

These answers will have long-range importance for the leaders of political parties, for the leaders of business and for everybody else in America during the next generation. Only a fortnight ago more than 500 leaders in the economic life of the country met in New York City to discuss the problem of the 5,000,000 young people who have failed to get jobs since early in the depression

"This is idle and fertile ground," Owen D. Young told fellow conservatives, "for the production of a lot of plant which none of us like as American citizens. Yet in twenty years these young people will be the mature citizens whose voices will determine largely what kind of country we will have."

For about a year and a half the American Institute of Public Opinion has been paying special attention to the young persons it must reach in every one of its Nation-wide polls. In that time the Institute has measured, by means of mail ballots and personal interviews, the opinions of more than 100,000 young persons between the ages of 21 and 25. The accumulated record is probably the most extensive survey of young people ever attempted.

Large Majority of Young Voters Prefer "Liberal" to "Conservative."

There is no doubt that the youngest generation of voters is liberal in politics. The Institute first pointed this out a year ago. It asked representative voters throughout the 48 States:

"If there were only two political parties in this country—Conservative and Liberal—which would you join?"

Although the country divided almost evenly on the question, young voters preferred the liberal side by a ratio of 2 to 1. In practical politics, the result has been an inflow of young voters into the Democratic Party.

Just before the November election the Institute polled a cross-section of the country's age groups and found that Roosevelt was strongest with voters in their twenties and weakest with voters over the age of 55. If continued, of course, such a process would drain the Republican Party dry and doom it to a minority status for a long time.

Republicans may well hope that this trend can be reversed. But a recent Institute poll shows that the Democrats are still holding twice as many young voters as the Republicans. The Institute found that 53 per cent of the fledging generation regard themselves as Democrats and only 26 per cent as Republicans.

It is also highly interesting to notice that after a severe economic depression, and following sharp criticisms of capitalism by the leaders of the Left, only 3 per cent of the young people in the poll called themselves Socialists. The remaining 18 per cent described themselves as independents.

In other tests the Institute has found young persons opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt and opposed to third terms in principle. Only 12 per cent of them say they would join a new Farm-Labor Party if one was organized.

Although they disapprove of certain New Deal measures, young Americans like the New Deal in general and will go farther than their elders toward a system of government giving more authority to Washington.

President Roosevelt's Administration has "gotten things done," these voters say. "National problems have to be solved by the National Government."

When the Institute asked U. S. voters for opinions on the trend toward a centralized government, 56 per cent of the voters approved such a trend. Among young voters an even greater number—71 per cent—approved it.

Young People Favor Centralized Government, Most New Deal Aims.

Examples of New Deal objectives which they like are the President's wage and hour bill, the abolition of child labor, and the social security program. In March an Institute poll showed a majority of young people in favor of reviving the NRA, and, a year before, they were willing to amend the Constitution in order to give Congress power to regulate industry and agriculture.

They forthrightly declare that the care of the needy unemployed is a function of the Federal Government, not of State or local governments.

But successive Institute polls show that young voters are not in favor of President Roosevelt's plan to increase the size of the Supreme Court, nor are they in favor of limiting the Court's power to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional.

They approve of labor unions, but they disapprove of sit-down strikes and they think the unions should be regulated by the Government. On the question of whether craft or industrial unions should be encouraged for the U. S., they divide almost exactly as their elders do—in favor of craft unions.

For national defense they favor a big Army and Navy, including a strong air force, and they believe that America should take no part in the leagues and alliances of Europe. In this respect they again resemble the older generation, but they go even farther. Although older voters voted in favor of a league of American nations at the time of President Roosevelt's Buenos Aires trip last winter, youngest voters opposed even this measure of international co-operation.

They are not bluntly optimistic about the system they live in or about the world's peace. They are 3 to 1 of the opinion that there will be another serious depression, and only 38 per cent of them think the United States can stay out of another European war.

Approve of Repeal, Birth Control, But Oppose Making Divorce Easier.

In social questions young voters take a more liberal attitude than their elders. They approve of the repeal of prohibition and think that conditions are better as a result. They think that the distribution of birth-control information should be made legal, and they believe that the schools should teach the facts about communism, socialism and fascism. To a lesser degree their elders take the same stands, but not by such emphatic margins.

With a characteristic touch of fundamental conservatism, however, they vote 4 to 1 against making divorce easier to obtain.

Poll Voters Prefer WPA To Direct Relief, 4 to 1

But General Public Would Like to See States and Localities Bear a Larger Share of Work Relief Costs.

By Institute of Public Opinion.

WPA Poll

Does America prefer the WPA or a direct system of cash relief—otherwise known as the dole? Should the States pay a greater share of relief costs? To answer these questions the Institute of Public Opinion has conducted two Nation-wide surveys. Here are the answers.

New York, June 12.—Although there is public and Congressional disagreement today over how much money should be appropriated for the Works Progress Administration, there is a substantial agreement among American voters that the WPA is a better solution to the relief problem than the cash dole.

When the WPA was broached in Congress two years ago many economy-minded members challenged the Administration's program on the grounds that it was substantially more costly to provide "work relief" than to pay an outright dole. President Roosevelt and his work relief administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, replied that the dole was no solution at all. They promised that work relief would render a lot of useful public service, create improvements and so on.

Their view has largely prevailed with the public as well as with Congress.

The American Institute of Public Opinion finds today, at the end of a Nation-wide poll, that the voters prefer the WPA to a system of direct relief by a ratio of 4 to 1.

Congress may argue with the White House over the size of the $1,500,000,000 appropriation the President is seeking for the WPA this year. But Congress is not likely to turn its back on work relief in principle, even if it wanted to, in the face of such a sentiment.

The Institute put its question to representative voters of all parties and classes in each State, and the result is approximately what would be obtained if every voter in the country had cast a ballot:

"Should the Government do away with the WPA and give only cash, or direct, relief?"

Throughout the United States 79 per cent of the voters in the survey answered "No," while 21 per cent vote in favor of substituting direct relief.

New England voters are more opposed to continuing the WPA than voters in other sections of the country, and farmers, as a class, are most opposed to it. Even among these groups of voters, however, WPA wins by a ratio of almost 3 to 1.

In contrast, WPA is especially popular in the Middle West and throughout the Rocky Mountain States. These areas have benefited in the last 12 months from a work program of drought relief and flood control, and they are looking forward to further Government assistance.

Persons who are on relief themselves share the opinion of the rest of the country very closely on the merits of WPA versus direct cash relief. "I'd rather work for what I get," they tell staff reporters for the Institute of Public Opinion. Or, "Work relief keeps me employed even if it only means spade work." Reliefers average 82 per cent for WPA, 18 per cent for direct relief.

Voters Say State Governments Should Pay Greater Share

In a supplementary Institute poll today public opinion indicates that State and local governments ought to assume a greater share of the costs of relief.

State and local governments spent nearly four times as much money for relief last year as they did in 1933, the first year of the Roosevelt relief program. But the outlays of the Federal Government have likewise increased over 1933 and 1934. Last year, while the State and local governments were spending about $1,245,000,000, the Federal Government poured out about $3,850,000,000 for WPA, for PWA, for emergency conservation work and for other Federal relief and improvement projects.

In today's poll the voters favor shifting a larger share of this burden to the States and localities. Throughout the country their vote averages 62 per cent in favor of such a move, with the greatest extremes of opinion being shown in New England and on the Pacific Coast.

In general, Easterners are more in favor of increasing State and local responsibility for relief than are Westerners.

The Framing of the Constitution

Numerous Compromises in Document Confused Delegates.

vention and a theory to which referred several times.

Even as they argued over how to create an Executive, word was spreading that a monarchy was being considered. The common rumor was that the Bishop of Osnaburgh, second son of George III, would be invited to become king. The rumors brought convention into the newspapers.

Limited Monarchy Won Some Support.

Still, quite a few kind words were said for a limited monarchy in the debates. Evidence has been since produced that Gorham, about six months before the convention, wrote Prince Henry of Prussia about the possibility of his becoming king of the United States.

The decision upon how to elect a President settled that point, however. This had been one of the chief problems left when the Constitution came from the committee of detail. After the convention waded through the report from this committee, debating every point with infinite detail, working out fresh compromises, sending new material to the committee to be passed on, it picked five members to go over the document and rewrite it into final form.

On this committee of style were Dr. William Samuel Johnson, of Connecticut, Alexander Hamilton, Gouverneur Morris, James Madison and Rufus King. It went to work Monday, September 10; reported the next Wednesday, Gouverneur Morris was credited by Madison with having written the final draft.

Worries Over Crops Hurried Final Vote.

Brief discussion followed. Some changes were suggested, some made. Three days were spent in comparing the final draft with the agreements that had been made before the committee went to work on it. Now and then new questions came up, but the delegates, almost four months away from home, anxious about a drought that had seared some sections, saw the finish in sight and hurried toward it. Cries of "question" came right behind each motion. Most were voted down. On Saturday, September 15, Madison recorded:

"On the question to agree to the Constitution as amended. All the States aye."

Edmund Randolph, of Virginia, had just made a last appeal for a second convention to act on amendments that might be proposed by the States. Several times he had expressed his dissatisfaction with changes that were being made in the plan of government he had proposed at the outset. Now he announced he could not sign the finished document unless arrangements were made for another convention.

Madison agreed with Randolph. If another convention were not arranged, he could neither sign the Constitution, nor support it in Virginia. Elbridge Gerry felt the same way. But all of the States had voted against Randolph's motion. The delegates were fearful of what the next convention might have to deal with.

The convention met for the last time on Monday, September 17. The engrossed Constitution was read. To disguise the fact that some delegates were unwilling to sign, Gov. Morris devised a form which gave an appearance of unanimity. But he thought the convention might like it better if it came from Benjamin Franklin.

Convention Receives Franklin Parable.

So Franklin brought in a speech which James Wilson read for him. It related the story of the woman who never met anybody but herself who was always right, said that in those sentiments he agreed to the Constitution and moved that it be signed under a form which specified that it was "done in convention by the unanimous consent of the States." There were not enough dissenters in any State delegation to set down the vote of a State against it.

Randolph arose amid the atmosphere of solemnity that had settled down over the hall and apologized for not signing. He predicted nine States would not ratify, that the plan would fail. Gov. Morris said he, too, had objections, but thought the plan the best that could be gotten. Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina, said he did not think a better was to be expected and had no scruples about signing. Hamilton urged every man to sign. William Blount, of North Carolina, said he had declared he would not sign, but now felt he could.

Franklin said he hoped Randolph would put aside his objections. Randolph replied that he could not, that he felt the plan would produce anarchy and civil strife since as it stood it must be accepted or rejected in full. Gerry said he feared a civil war, that there was especial danger of one in Massachusetts where there were two parties, one devoted to democracy, "the worst of all political evils," and the other violently the opposite. He felt the plan proposed would promote strife between the two.

A little more talk and the motion by Franklin was adopted. The papers of the convention were formally put into the keeping of Washington, subject to the order of Congress, "if ever formed under the Constitution."

Only 39 Delegates Signed Document.

The members moved forward to sign, the towering figure of Washington leading. Next came New Hampshire's men, led by John Langdon, who was paying the expenses of that delegation out of his own pocket; then Nicholas Gilman, his colleague. In order, they came down the length of the seaboard, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and, finally, Georgia.

Only 39 delegates signed. Gerry, Randolph and Mason would not. Robert Yates and John Lansing, of New York, had gone home in disgust after the Paterson plan had been beaten, leaving Hamilton the only signer for New York. Luther Martin, of Maryland, had stayed a while, then departed saying he would have nothing more to do with such high-handed doings.

Ten others who at various times had been there did not sign. Some of them had been delegates to Congress and had not spent more time in Philadelphia. Others had been called home and were absent when the work ended.

The convention resolved that the Constitution be put before Congress and then submitted to conventions of delegates elected by the people of each State. As soon as nine States had agreed, Congress should work out a date for election of the first President and a time and place for the new Government to take over. This was a departure from the original instructions the delegates had received.

Interpretations of Various Clauses Were Many and Different.

Across the land, word of the doings at Philadelphia was running, received with varying emotions. In New York, Congress got a copy three days after the signing. Quite a few members thought changes should be made and several efforts were made to alter the document, though the journal is silent about them. It simply records that on September 28 a resolution was adopted to put the Constitution before the States. Here, too, an effort was made to give the country the idea that Congress was unanimously for it.

Ratification Rapid Though Hard Work.

Ratifications came rapidly, though hard won in some States. Delaware ratified on December 7, Pennsylvania, December 12. In order, through December and January, came New Jersey, Georgia and Connecticut. In Massachusetts, the issue was close drawn, but it approved in February, 1789.

Maryland ratified in April, South Carolina, in May; New Hampshire, in June; giving the necessary nine. Virginia, after much disputation, accepted it four days after New Hampshire. New York agreed by a close vote, 30 to 27, in July. North Carolina, after two trys and a little pressure from the new Congress, ratified in November, 1789.

Rhode Island still held out. Its first convention was not called until March, 1790, and it did little more than adjourn. Congress took up a bill to authorize the President to suspend all commerce with Rhode Island and demand from that State its share of the Federal debt. In the face of such a threat, Rhode Island ratified in late May, 1790.

Polls of Public Opinion Give Background to News

New York, June 12.—Many events in the day's news are foreshadowed by the Nation-wide public opinion polls of the Institute of Public Opinion. Following are some recent events which the polls illuminate:

President Roosevelt wants a more general use of the civil service merit system. His message on Government reorganization last winter asked that "all but policy making positions" be placed under the civil service. Now in a letter to Congressional leaders the President has reiterated his objective and protested against legislation which exempts Government jobs from the merit system.

In one of the most overwhelming majorities ever recorded in an Institute poll, the voters last year agreed that all Government positions, "except those having to do with the making of policy," should be under the merit system. Eighty-eight per cent protested against any extension of the ancient "spoils system."

Congressman Maverick, of Texas, stood up in the House last week to ask Congress for an investigation of relief and unemployment. Congress, he said, should inquire into the charge that relief is being administered on a partisan basis.

He also asserted Congress could not appropriate money for relief without knowing a great deal more about the character of the unemployment problem.

In an Institute poll a year ago a majority of the voters declared they believed politics influenced the administration of relief. Sixty-five per cent of the voters thought so, while 18 per cent thought politics did not play a part. Seventeen per cent had no opinion.

In a subsequent poll last month voters were 3 to 1 in favor of an unemployment census.

Princeton, N. J., school children will have their fingerprints taken when they return to school next September, and the fingerprint records will go into the growing file of "civil identification" prints in the Department of Justice at Washington.

The decision was made after a canvass of 600 parents showed a large majority in favor of the plan. Only 12 opposed the plan, on the ground the records thus obtained might be used for criminal identification purposes.

Last January the Institute of Public Opinion reported that nearly seven persons in every ten favored the idea of fingerprinting civilians for ordinary identification purposes.

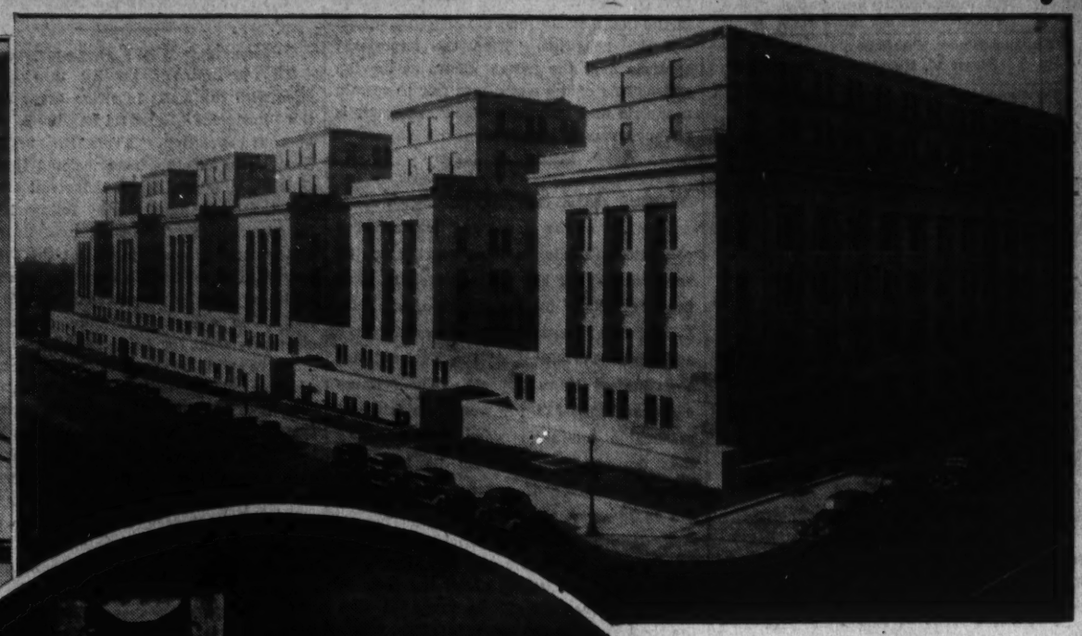
PWA, Greatest Builder in History, Assured 2 More Years of Activity



DAMS for irrigation and electric power are being built in many places as part of the huge PWA program. The center photo shows men working in one of the diversion tunnels of the Fort Peck dam under construction with PWA funds in eastern Montana. The Bonneville Dam (above) in Washington will have a large power output and help to control floods and soil erosion in the Columbia River territory.

PWA allotments plus State and local funds have constructed a huge array of public works in the United States in the last four years. PWA projects range from rural schoolhouses to gigantic works such as the Triboro Bridge in New York (upper left), which connects three boroughs of the metropolis. In the Capital the New Interior Building was built by the PWA.

The Midtown Hudson tunnel, which will provide another high speed link between New Jersey and New York City, is rapidly being rushed to completion by the PWA.

In southern California the PWA is digging a huge canal, to be known as the All-American Canal.

In crowded cities PWA money is aiding in solving the housing problems. The greatest housing project to be undertaken is the Williamsburg group in Brooklyn, shown below.

Federal Unit Slated to Die Late in June

Enactment of Extension by Congress Fairly Certain.

Multitude of Developments Owe Existence to Organization.

By Gerald G. Gross.

The Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, better known as PWA, approaches its fourth anniversary with the death rattle in its throat. Yet the outlook really isn't as black as all that, because even though this early recovery agency is due to expire June 30, exactly two weeks after candle No. 4 is lighted, the House already has passed a bill giving it two more years of life and enactment of the measure is fairly certain.

To look back over these four years of PWA is to view an endless panorama of bridges, housing developments, school buildings, power plants, battleships, hospitals, Federal buildings, parks, highways, etc., which owe their existence to the greatest public works program in American history. It has provided employment for millions at a time when jobs were needed most, lifted thousands out of the slums and into decent habitation, stimulated business and industry generally and provided a large percentage of the national population with new facilities to make life a bit more pleasant—a municipal auditorium here, an up-to-date gymnasium there, and so on.

Greatest Construction Program in History.

The PWA itself has prepared a quadrennial review which is a concise recapitulation of its achievements. It has:

Launched without precedent the largest construction program in history and established public works as an effective weapon against depression.

Made possible four-fifths of all public construction in the United States after building had reached a standstill.

Created at the sites of projects a billion and a half man-hours of work at prevailing wages, reduced unemployment and kept thousands off of relief rolls.

Generated an additional three and three-quarter billion man-hours of work "behind the lines" producing materials in forests, mines, manufacturing plants and in transportation.

Spent $1,126,197,000 for wages to workers on construction sites and $1,948,389,000 for materials, a large part of which also went into workers' pay envelopes, which helped to restore purchasing power and revive industry.

Built 70 per cent of the school buildings erected when educational building had collapsed.

Erected 62 per cent of the hospitals when communities were unable to meet hospitalization and medical needs.

Built 64 per cent of the waterworks and thousands of sewers improving health conditions.

Launched the first Federal slum clearance and low-rent housing program in America with 51 projects for thousands of families of small income.

Purchased municipal bonds which assisted in restoring city credits and later sold these securities, netting a profit to the Government of $10,500,000.

Set new high standards of construction through close supervision of work and materials.

Added immeasurably to the permanent and useful capital assets of the Nation and raised the standard of living.

It was with pardonable pride, therefore, that Administrator Harold L. Ickes addressed a House appropriations sub-committee as follows last month in his argument for a two-year extension of PWA.:

"In one respect," said Ickes, "America was fortunate in this last depression which gave impetus to the most outstanding construction and rehabilitation program of our times.

"The Public Works Administration, in co-operation with some of the best legal, engineering and architectural talent in the various States, has convincingly demonstrated the possibility of effecting a stable, economic recovery through the careful expenditure of public funds on a co-operative basis upon Federal, State and municipal permanent improvements."

With a grand total of almost $5,000,000,000 at its command, the gargantuan organization has had a finger in almost every type of creative project imaginable, from the manufacture of Virgin Islands rum to the fashioning of a corset for Washington Monument. But its most worthwhile projects, the sociologist will tell you, have been those designed to provide standard housing for the low-income classes.

New Slum Clearance Project Under Way.

Only last week PWA opened bids on the last of its 51 slum clearance and low-rent housing projects. Today every one of the developments is occupied, under construction or under contract. Last to get under way was Parkside in Detroit, a 785-unit village.

Some 22,000 families will be tenants of PWA-built housing projects when the program is completed. Not all of these are former slum dwellers, although inhabitants of the first five projects to be finished came from blighted areas. These are Techwood homes, in Atlanta (604 units); Liberty Square, in Miami, Fla. (243); William B. Paterson Courts, in Montgomery, Ala. (156); University homes, in Atlanta (675), and the Stanley S. Holmes Village, in Atlantic City (277).

In Washington the PWA housing division is erecting Langston Terrace, a low-rent project on Benning road which will accommodate 274 colored families. The cost will be approximately $1,842,000.

To bring its mammoth plan to fruition, the housing division had to move on a correspondingly huge scale. It bought 3,784 parcels of city property aggregating 1,204 acres. This item cost $17,452,958, much of the land being in congested areas. Taken in aggregate, its job was the equivalent of providing living quarters for the population of Sacramento, Calif., or Peoria, Ill. Almost as many new housing units were put under construction in the program as were built by the entire private building industry in the 364 leading towns and cities of the Nation in 1933.

The new communities are setting a salutary example for private initiative and large sums have been spent by owners of adjacent property to fix up their holdings and make them equally attractive. Indeed, in many instances, notably Lake View Terrace, in Cleveland, and Old Harbor Village, in Boston, the tenants enjoy locations far more comfortable and scenic than the majority of their townsmen.

It gives little cause for wonder, in view of the high quality of these unprecedented Federal real estate ventures, that there are 12,000 applications on file for the 574 units in New York's new Harlem River Houses (colored) and that Techwood Homes (white), in Atlanta, is 99 per cent rented.

Nine of the 51 projects have been completed, five of which are under occupancy. In five others management officers have been opened and selection of tenants is under way. How are the tenants chosen? Let Housing Director Howard A. Gray explain that point:

"He must have an income of not more than five times the annual rent," says Gray. "If the annual rental is $300, he must not have an income of more than $1,500 a year. Then he must come from substandard housing, and that standard varies in different cities.

PWA Halted Decline In School Expansion.

The role that PWA has played in education is no less than auspicious than its crusade for standard housing. It has helped finance 70 per cent of all school-building construction in the United States during the last four years, made loan and grant allotments for 3,700 school projects in every State, allotted nearly $300,000,000 in loans and grants for projects estimated to cost more than $550,000,000 and provided 33,718 classrooms and seats for 1,389,655 pupils.

The PWA, besides has aided in the construction of 2,165 auditoria, 1,720 gymnasiums, 884 libraries, 676 mechanical shops and 443 cafeterias. It has made possible the addition of 6,000 other units, such as laboratories, study halls, science and commercial rooms, etc.

This expansion came at a time when the need was greatest. Schoolbuilding construction and improvement had virtually come to a standstill during the depression. In 1926 the total capital outlay for schools was $400,000,000. Six years later it had dropped to $200,000,000 and in 1933 it was $100,000,000. One can only speculate on what the future would have held in store for America's schools, more than half of which are still one-room buildings, if PWA had not come along. Yet it should be borne in mind that in every instance the local community, not Uncle Sam, bore the major portion of the cost.

The same program which has benefited former slum residents and replaced hundreds of dilapidated "little red schoolhouse" with modern consolidated buildings also led to electrification of the Pennsylvania Railroad from New York to Washington (altogether, PWA lent $200,000,000 to 32 railroads), gave New York three new docks for superliners, sponsored hundreds of water systems and other utilities improvements, made possible such gigantic undertakings as the Tri-Borough Bridge, in New York, the Key West causeway, in Florida, Grand Coulee and Bonneville Dams, the Chicago Sanitary District and Moffat Tunnel. It completed Boulder Dam two years ahead of schedule, gave Kansas City one of the Nation's largest auditoria and helped build 922 hospital buildings.

In the District of Columbia, approximately $100,000,000 has been allotted in PWA funds, all of which has already been spent or is now working. Of the total, some $12,500,000 went to non-Federal projects, half of which was charged up as the local share in electrification of the Pennsylvania.

Major Projects In Capital Listed.

Following is a list of the major Washington projects taken at random:

Howard University—New chemistry building, power plant, men's dormitories, classroom building and library; total approximately, $3,700,000.

Washington Monument — Thorough overhauling, $88,000.

Widening of Constitution avenue from Virginia avenue to Potomac River to bring it into harmony with the monumental character of the public buildings along this route—$177,000.

Bringing the Mall within the scope of the L'Enfant plan of 1791, calling for road building, tree transplanting, grading, drainage system, landscaping, etc.—$232,000.

Development of Union Square—$232,000.

Removal of steps and remodeling south side of the old Patent Office Building to permit widening of F streets between Seventh and Ninth—$125,000.

Changes and additions to the Executive Mansion—$159,000.

Remodeling of Franklin, Folger, Lafayette, Marion, Mount Vernon and Melrose Parks and miscellaneous small parks and reservations—$257,000.

Completion of Meridian Hill Park—$130,000.

Flood dykes to protect Federal triangle buildings—$41,000.

New female receiving building at St. Elizabeth's Hospital—$750,000.

Internal Revenue Building extension—$2,100,0000.

Purchase of the Potomac Park Apartments—$550,000.

Apex Building (now under construction)—$3,780,000.

Construction and installation of stacks in the Archives Building—$3,610,000.

Completion of bird house at the Zoo and construction of new machine shop, and exhibit on buildings for elephants, small mammals and great apes—$900,000.

New Interior Building—$13,530,000.

Library of Congress annex—$2,800,000.

New sewage disposal plant for the District—4,125,000.

District Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md.—$2,150,000.

Starting off with a $3,300,000,000 appropriation under the NIRA act of 1933, PWA ultimately came into a total of $4,804,000,000 for distribution. One point that is not generally understood, however, is that only $1,732,600,000 was left for allotment to non-Federal housing and railroad projects after deductions had been made for statutory allocations, transfers to Federal agencies and impoundment of funds for relief purposes.

Russia's Latest Purge.

The latest batch of executions in Russia has deepened the mystery regarding the real situation in that land.

In contrast with what happened last August and again in January, when many "Old Bolsheviks" were liquidated, the trial of the accused army chiefs, among them former Marshall Mikhail Tukhachevsky, was held in strictest secrecy. The press was excluded from the deliberations. There were no microphones to carry the self-accusatory statements of the prisoners to every corner of the land. If there were confessions at this court-martial no one heard them but the judges. Indeed, the only information vouchsafed the world as to what had happened was a brief communique stating that the accused had confessed their treasonable conduct and had been sentenced to death. It is presumed they have been executed. The rest is silence.

But that vacuum created by the Soviet censorship will quickly be filled by the winds of speculation. For there is no disguising the evident seriousness of the situation revealed by the latest purge. Hitherto it has been taken for granted that whatever discontent there was in the Soviet Union was limited to disgruntled politicians and other civilians dissatisfied with the policies of the Stalin regime. While there was much in the August and January trials that was bewildering to the outside world, this circumstance was understandable. Under a dictatorship opposition can only manifest itself in conspiracy.

But it is a new development altogether to find that, according to the admission of the regime itself, there were elements in the Red army, indeed in highly responsible army positions, that were indulging in seditious activities. If disaffection has reached even this petted and pampered element of the Russian population, it may be reasonably argued, then the boasted stability of the Bolshevik government is clearly open to question.

To be sure, it is equally arguable that the success of Stalin in liquidating his enemies, even those who held the very highest posts in the defense system, shows that neither he nor his regime is in any danger of overthrow. Yet the orgy of executions, the spy mania, the mounting fears which characterize the Russian situation today, are hardly reassuring in this regard. After nearly 20 years, the Bolshevik government is back again, psychologically, to the state of mind that characterized it at the outset.

Whose Antarctica?

In the last quarter of the nineteenth century, a host of economic, strategic, humanitarian and even religious arguments were advanced to justify the expensive and dangerous struggle for African and Asiatic territory then taking place.

However, the alleged advantages to be derived from these new colonies were anticipatory rather than actual. As one British statesman said in justifying Britain's participation in the imperialistic struggle, "We are staking out claims for posterity." Immediate gains from the exploitation of these colonies were uniformly skimpy. The colonial ledger then and for many years thereafter showed in the red entries.

In preparing to expand her claims to vast stretches of territory in Antarctica, Great Britain is again thinking of the future, as are the United States, Norway, Australia and other nations which may dispute these British claims. No one knows whether at some time in subsequent decades the frozen wastes of land surrounding the South Pole may become valuable. It is understood that there are vast deposits of coal in Antarctica and, possibly, when the coal reserves in more accessible places are exhausted, those at the bottom of the world may be tapped. But the world suffers from no shortage of fuel today, least of all Great Britain, whose coal mining industry remains in a depressed state in the midst of a national boom.

However, the governments with any vestige of claim to land anywhere are determined to cling to it. The future is a canvas on which glamorous pictures can be painted and no one can authoritatively dispute their accuracy. So the Foreign Offices, with preternatural seriousness, can make ownership of Antarctica and of the North Pole regions new bones of contention.

Fortunately, however, this controversy is certain to remain in the paper stage for many years to come. And, fortunately, too, the "white man's burden" will not be placed on the shoulders of natives of the disputed zones. Not even Eskimos are to be found at the North Pole—at the moment only a few transplanted Russian scientists. And in the South Polar zone the sole inhabitants are the penguins. Thus the imperialist struggle over the frozen wastes at the top and bottom of the world bids fair to remain academic and harmless. That, at least, is an encouraging thought.

Wages And Social Obligations.

Members of the House and Senate Labor committees holding a joint hearing on the wages-and-hours bill are reported to have been "shocked" by the testimony of John E. Edgerton, Southern textile manufacturer and former president of the National Association of Manufacturers. The witness contended that $11 per week is a fair and reasonable minimum wage and admitted that during the depression he had employed a number of women for wages as low as $6 per week.

If Congressmen were shocked by these revelations, it merely proves that they know surprisingly little about the facts of industry. They should be reminded that the NRA code for the textile industry, which brought a pronounced rise in the pay of Southern mill workers, established a minimum wage of only $12 for a 40-hour week. For Northern mills the minimum was $1 higher. Dr. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, which has made valiant efforts to raise labor standards, is urging that the minimum wage for the industry, if set by law, shall not exceed the code levels.

As a matter of fact, if the "shocked" Congressmen would take time to study the data on wages and hours assembled for use of the World Textile Conference recently held in this city, they might conclude that an operative earning $11 per week is favored by fortune. To be sure such a wage is pitiably inadequate judged by any standards but those of stark necessity. Unfortunately, however, the hardships endured by low-paid, unskilled labor, not only in factories but also in stores and business offices, will not be solved merely by legislative decrees that wages suddenly shall be raised.

Secretary Perkins pointed out in testifying on the wages-and-hours bill that the method of fixing minimum wages must be realistic. Sudden changes in labor costs giving no time for readjustments would result in most serious dislocations and might entail throwing large numbers out of work. The textile industry, for example, employs many young women whose wages are insufficient to maintain them outside the family circle. In fact, the unit for measuring textile earnings is the family rather than the individual. That is not a desirable state of affairs; it is simply a condition that has to be reckoned with when we undertake to raise living standards within the industry.

When all this has been said, however, Mr. Edgerton is open to serious criticism for his casual attitude of indifference toward underpaid workers in his employ. His naive conviction that his responsibility to the community is discharged through his church work, while his employes are left to get along as best they may on their weekly pittances, is truly amazing. It is precisely this attitude which gives rise to demands for unwise wage-fixing by Federal authorities.

Today a large employer, especially one who appears as a spokesman for industry, cannot afford to ignore the social responsibilities attaching to his position. If he refuses to assume them, he is likely to find his freedom of action increasingly restricted by State intervention. Progressive industrialists are fully aware of that fact. They are also eager to improve labor standards as fast as possible, knowing that well-fed, well-housed working men provide the best assurance of a peaceful and prosperous society.

Getting Around The Law.

Since Congress has just voted to put income tax evaders on the gridiron, what shall be said of the methods followed by the Democratic National Committee in soliciting funds from large corporations? Information filed with the clerk of the House indicates that the committee has obtained substantial sums from various corporations, ostensibly in payment for copies of the Democratic National Convention's Souvenir Book autographed by the President. Representative Snell is preparing to introduce a resolution asking for an inquiry into the methods of sale, to determine whether the corrupt practices act has been violated.

The President and Administration spokesmen have severely condemned certain wealthy men who have sought and found legal means of avoiding payment of their income taxes. It would seem that the Democratic National Committee is equally deserving of censure for trying to evade prohibitions against solicitation of funds from corporations. Whether or not its tactics are legal in a technical sense, the committee has undoubtedly violated the spirit of the corrupt practices act and deprived that measure of much of its protective value.

Legislation of this sort can never be made proof against the maneuvers of politicians seeking to find loopholes of escape from its restrictions. Publicity of the right kind, however, may impose a salutary restraint upon the less scrupulous collectors of campaign funds, assuming, of course, that Congress insists upon observance of the spirit as well as letter of the law. For that reason the inquiry proposed by Representative Snell, with a view to ascertaining the facts and arousing public opinion against evasion of the law, should serve a useful purpose.

Bowing To Lawlessness.

The preliminary inquiry into interference with the mails in strike areas has left the Postoffice Department in a rather awkward position. From the beginning, department officials have insisted that they should not take sides in industrial disputes, and that they have merely followed established practice of refusing to deliver mail under perilous conditions. But the evidence presented to the Senate Postoffice Committee indicates that the department has nevertheless taken a partial attitude, without any clear precedent for doing so.

There will be general agreement with Assistant Postmaster General Howes' assertion that "the postal service is neither a law-enforcement agency nor a strike-breaker." Likewise, it would be unreasonable to expect the mail service in any area to be suddenly expanded to carry large quantities of food and supplies into plants on strike. But that presentation of the case overlooks some of its most important elements.

One of the packages returned as "undeliverable" contained only clothing, a bag of nuts and a bottle of medicine. It was submitted to the postoffice, not by a powerful steel company trying to break a strike, but by the wife of a worker within a plant under siege. Rejection of such packages on the ground that they are "abnormal" has the effect of putting the postal service in league with the strikers in trying to force non-union men to leave the plant.

Whether or not there was an understanding between strike leaders and postal officials at Youngstown, the latter are certainly carrying out the policy suggested by the strikers. By closing the mails to laundered clothing, etc., they are helping the union to tighten its blockade. That attitude demands a thorough investigation, and possibly, as Senator Bailey has suggested, new legislation to define more clearly the conditions under which mail service may be suspended by the Postmaster General.

The only excuse which the Postoffice Department is able to offer for its arbitrary discrimination between "normal" and "abnormal" mail addressed to plants under siege was presented to the Senate investigators by Jesse M. Donaldson. Speaking of the rejected package previously referred to, he said: "The address calls for delivery over a route where it is unsafe for this particular mail to go through." In other words, whenever a powerful group takes the law into its own hands and threatens to disrupt the postal service Mr. Farley's department will acquiesce and declare the "objectionable" mail to be abnormal.

To American citizens who are accustomed to thinking of their Government as the supreme power in the land this is an indefensible attitude. And it becomes the more so in view of Mr. Howes' assertion that he will not ask Federal law enforcement agencies to intervene. Apparently the Postoffice Department is quite willing to restrict its service on mere threats of violence and to do nothing more about it. If every agency of Government should follow such a spineless policy, the country would soon be in the throes of anarchy.

The Jordon Case.

For the sixth time since his conviction on April 3, 1936, for the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, tea shop cashier, Thomas Jordon has been saved from the electric chair. On this occasion the reprieve is permanent. On the recommendation of Attorney General Cummings, President Roosevelt has commuted Jordon's sentence to life imprisonment.

The President's action reflects commendable judgment and restraint. From the very beginning the Jordon case has been a tangled skein of contradictions. At no time has there been absolute certainty that Jordon committed the crime he was to expiate with his life. The possibility had always to be taken into account that an injustice might be done. Under the circumstances the commutation of Jordon's sentence was both wise and proper.

Honors To A Negro Scientist.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

Unveiling of a bust of Dr. George Washington Carver, Missouri-born Negro scientist at Tuskegee Institute, directs attention to some little known but highly valuable work accomplished by the colored scholar in the field of higher learning.

Dr. Carver, whose research in chemurgy (the conversion of vegetable matter into commercial products) has made notable contributions to that science, has been honored in many lands and by many races. An artist as well as a scholar, his paintings hang in a number of world's galleries, and art and scentific groups of Europe and America have recognized his accomplishments. His most spectacular experiments have been with peanut oil as a possible massage for infantile paralysis victims; while he makes no claims for the method as yet, his progress has stilled the scoffing of colleagues.

For 40 years Dr. Carver has been carrying forward his work at Tuskegee. Like Booker T. Washington, Tuskegee's founder, he has spectacularly overcome handicaps which the social order imposed, rising from humble slave origins to scientific and educational eminence. It is appropriate that white and colored leaders alike should have paid him tribute at the unveiling of his memorial.

Standing In The Need Of Prayer.

Not For Just An Hour

She stopped filing her nails and rushed over to the window. Standing so that she could not be seen from the outside, she peered down through the sleazy white curtains that looked as if they couldn't take any more wind-whipping or spring showers. Just as she thought—the bus was being unloaded and Chuck was helping the ladies out as if he were Galahad or something. The passengers had that rumpled train-ride look as they waited on the gravel path for Chuck to take them and their baggage into the hotel.

There was apparently nobody in this load to worry her. But you never could tell. Some of the stodgiest looking, middle-aged ladies turned out to be perfectly fascinating widows once they got into bathing suits and evening clothes. Funny, how they'd always bring bathing suits and the minute they saw Chuck they'd forget how to swim. Oh, she knew all their little tricks. Hadn't she herself met Chuck that very way? Not that she'd deliberately vamped him or anything like that, but it was nice to look at him and know that she hadn't saved up her vacation money for nothing. Magazines said anything could happen to a girl at a summer resort provided she sort of let herself go.

Three times a day the rickety old bus met the train and just that many times she went through this same agony. It wasn't that she didn't trust Chuck. But every woman who stepped off the Restawhile Resort bus constituted a menace. There was something reckless in the air. People saved their money all winter for a two-week fling in the summer. And they were determined to have it. She herself was seeking romance but of a different kind. She tried to make Chuck understand that; but when she got to talking about marriage, he just laughed and said she was a funny little thing. Only four days since they had first exchanged a hello in the halls and she already knew what Juliet must have gone through. This wasn't a flirtation. This was the real thing . . .

The Restawhile Resort didn't look much like the pictures of it which went back home to the folks. Postcards have a way of showing only the leafiest trees and the best rooms. Cracked mirrors, torn wall paper and hot water faucets which were merely a decoration never seemed to show up on them. Life was a well-ordered, model affair according to postcards—an Utopia where the grass is ever green and the skies always blue.

"It's kinder restful here, isn't it, Chuck?"

"Yeah."

"I mean, you know, sort of like we were in our own home, isn't it?"

Getting no response, she twisted around to look at him. He was gazing toward the valley and chewing on a piece of grass.

"Chuck, whatter you thinking about?"

"Oh, I dunno. Just thinking. I guess."

* * * *

That was the thing about a summer resort. You couldn't pin a man down. Suddenly she hated the cool green banks of fern shaded darkly by long, oblique shadow-bars. Her loathing also took in the great pools of yellow-white sunshine which bathed the graveled path down to the springs. It extended even to the dusty flowers by the spring house. The great outdoors. What a farce! There was nothing you could do but sit and look. Why, back in the city there was so much going on Chuck wouldn't have a chance to moon around. He and she were aliens to the countryside. They knew the push and heat of a subway; the throbbing of the L overhead; shrill voices in the street; movies and cokes and holding hands in a musty parlor. All this sun and green stuff growing was getting Chuck. It was like watching him develop into a beachcomber only there wasn't any beach.

"It'll be fun next winter, won't it, Chuck? You know what I mean. Going around together and everything."

"Sure," he said absent-mindedly. Then, suddenly turning to look at her, he saw that her eyes were full of tears.

"You're sweet, kid."

"Oh, do you think so, Chuck?" Her voice spiraled high with hope. "I was afraid you were thinking about, well, you know that blonde who came in on Number 2 yesterday."

"Gosh, she's old!"

Oh, darling, darling Chuck for seeing beneath all that rouge and powder! Oh, lovely summer time when a boy and girl can get away from the city and sit under trees and feel the sun right to their very bones. She pitied the poor girls in her office who weren't on vacation. She pitied all girls who didn't know Chuck. The magazines were right—if a girl bought a few little cotton dresses and saved her money and went away by herself for awhile, something wonderful was bound to happen. But they were wrong, when they said vacation romances were like shipboard love affairs. If everybody were as sure as she and Chuck, all stories would have happy endings. Evening was spreading a dark-blue wash over the valley. Everything was so sort of peaceful. . .

He didn't look a thing like Chuck but it was kind of cute the way his hair was gray and he was still so awfully young. He was the quiet kind, too. You could tell that by the way he didn't say anything except to ask for the butter or the sugar. Maybe he had a secret sorrow. But a summer resort wasn't any place to take a secret sorrow because everybody was gay and noisy and they didn't want to stop their noisiness and be kind or careful about what they said. In a city you could take your heartbreak to the movies or be sad in an art gallery or think it all over on the top of a bus. But here people were paying for every single minute and they wanted to have enough good times to store up against the winter. They were like squirrels—hoarding every small flirtation, every snatched kiss, every summer sunset.

She was glad when they drifted out together. She liked the way in which he pulled up a chair for her. And she decided, even before he asked her, that she would accept his invitation to the Saturday night dance in the pavilion. Chuck would be furious but he couldn't be expected to understand how a girl felt about such things. He was always on hand to eye the new girls when they arrived and she never knew what he was thinking. A man was like that—taking his fun where he found it, starting things he never meant to finish, promising constancy to every girl he met. Chuck was not to be depended upon. It was lucky she found him out in time so she could now concentrate on this man who sat by her side. They could have grand times going around together next winter. She could just tell by looking at him that this wasn't going to be a silly vacation flirtation. Why, this was the real thing . . .

Between Siestas

Mexico, D. F.

THE government has sponsored an exposition of the fruits of the "Six-Year Plan," and a visit to the Palace of Fine Arts, where it is being held, proves to be exceedingly worthwhile. Aviation, good roads, agrarian affairs, social legislation, latest health measures, everything that President Cardenas pledged himself to do on assuming office in 1934 has a section to itself. While it is assumed that the president is not entirely pleased with all the results so far achieved (he said so in a recent cabinet meeting), much has been done to correct evils inherent in Mexican social and economic life for a century. Any plan may fail, but it at least provides a measuring rod by which to judge the sincerity of a man and his coworkers.

Just a few weeks ago I had the pleasure of viewing a Mexican comedy that would make a delightful movie; in fact, censorship is the only thing that is said to have prevented its screening. This fact, however, lends itself to easy adjustment, as a few lines could be changed without hurting the main theme in the least. The story concerns an interior decorator who seeks out young women of beauty and no money. He teaches them manners, then marries them in the traditional "wife in name only" fashion. Soon a rich rival appears on the scene and the "husband" is glad to bow out—for 100,000 pesos! The denouement comes, of course, when the "Seller of Dolls" (as the play is titled), falls in love with his pseudo-wife and doesn't want to sell her. Nemesio Garcia Naranjo, one of Mexico's most distinguished literary figures is the author.

The national government, aided by state authorities, is in the midst of an extensive drive against drug vendors and addicts. It is interesting to read how the smugglers get dope inside the walls of the federal penitentiary. Heroin and the vicious marihuana, called by the Mexicans ::Dona Juana," rank first on the list when raids are made.

Because of the financial strain which education places on the government budget, it is impossible to place all children of school age, from primary to university levels, in federal schools. This situation has given rise to numerous private schools, some of them good, too many of them bad. Private schools in Mexico are, in reality, an industry, and statistics might show that their attendance, at least in the secondary field, outnumbers that of government schools.

Mexican Moments—There is a rumor about that the famous church of Our Lady of Lourdes, beloved of the French colony in Mexico, will be torn down—to make room for an apartment building! . . . It is understood that prominent French residents are making efforts to save the old building . . . University students throughout Mexico have protested the stoning of the Guadalajara branch of the National University by leftists on May 1 . . . And the similar attack perpetrated on the Commercial Academy of Morelia . . . The only explanation the leftists gave for their action was that the institutions were "too reactionary" . . . Tito Guizar, radio star and leading actor in "Alla en el Rancho Grande," most successful of recent Mexican-made movies, is in town again to make another.

Courteous Washington

SITTING on Casual Smith's porch in the cool of the evening the men smoked and the women chatted, and it occurs to me now that Mrs. Smith's experiences in Washington, as related by herself, are not without interest.

You will please understand that this is not a straight recital by Mrs. Smith. There were household interruptions, some of them delightful, or, perhaps, "delicious" would be a better word. And there were remarks thrown in by her husband and Demosthenes McGinnis, some of them philosophical, some frivolous, and other remarks by Mrs. Mixing and Mrs. McGinnis, complementary and complimentary.

But it is Mrs. Smith's story. I have merely boiled it down and stuck it together.

When we say "birds of a feather flock together" we indicate choice (said Mrs. Smith), but there must be more to it than that. Go into a strange town and ask somebody on the street the way to some place and all the chances are he'll say, "Sorry. I'm a stranger here." This is understandable in Washington, where visitors are many, but it is equally true in any town, large or small. Invariably and quite unwittingly, you are drawn to a fellow stranger.

But because your need is imperative you go at last into a store and ask your questions, and you are very apt to judge the town and its people by the reception you get there. This may be unwise and unjust, but so it is.

And so by this rule I am prepared to say that Washingtonians are a kindly and courteous people.

Not that I am a stranger in Washington. Our visits are fairly frequent. But you know how it is; you get into a rut. For years we took a hack at the boat either for the Union Station or the hotel. Later we varied that by taking a taxi at the bus station. Nowadays, Casual drives me to where I want to go, goes on about his business, and picks me up later in the day. Then we go to the hotel and rest a little and have dinner and go to the theater and then back to the hotel. Even visiting our friends meant little more than getting in a car and getting out again. What I mean is that in and out of a car isn't much instruction in the ins and outs of a city.

But the other day I went to Washington by myself, by bus. There were things to buy for graduation days. It is amazing how the children grow up. And there were half a dozen other things I wanted to do and I didn't have very much time for I was due at a luncheon. So as soon as I got off the bus I went to the information desk and asked where I could buy peppers and egg plants. I always like to have some of each in the garden. And the girl didn't know, but she called to a man in uniform and he said he knew exactly the place and he told me where it was and what car to take and where to get off and where to walk when I got off, and he took me out to show me where I could get the car.

I found the place without trouble, got the plants, and I asked the man if there was a drug store near. And he showed me one across the street and I got some stuff for Casual's asthma, and I said to the drug clerk, "Can you tell me where I can get a typewriter ribbon? It is a very old typewriter and it has a broad ribbon." And he said, "I know the very place." And it was less than a block away and I went there and they didn't have it, and the clerk called another clerk and they consulted and decided there was only one other place in town where I could get it. And I said, "Do you think I could telephone and find if they have it?" And he said, "Yes, indeed!" and showed me the booth and got the number for me. And I telephoned and found they had exactly what I wanted, and I got it.

Then I went to a department store and after I had made some purchases I said to the clerk, "I have read your advertisements in The Post for years and have ordered stuff from you by mail. But this is the first time I have ever been in your place." And I told them where I usually went when in town.

And she was much interested and she said, "And isn't there anything else you would like" And I said, "Yes, right over at that counter, I want some chintz curtains." So she took me over and introduced me to the clerk.

But all I got was some samples, for I didn't know the exact measurements, so she gave me her card so that I could refer to her when I write for the stuff as she'll know exactly what I want.

And I had all my errands done and was at the luncheon ahead of time. What do you think of that for good luck?

* * * *

"It was more than good luck," said Demosthenes McGinnis. "It was good management and good business."

But Casual Smith was looking at his wife affectionately. "You carry your good luck with you, my dear," he said.

Railroading.

An ambitious young man went to a university professor and said: "Sir, I desire a course of training that will fit me to become the superintendent of a great railway system. How much will such a course cost, and how long will it take?"

"Young man," replied the professor, "such a course would cost you $2,000, and require 20 years of your time. But, on the other hand, by spending $300 of your money and three months of your time, you may be elected to Congress. Once there, you will feel yourself competent to direct not one, but all the great railroad systems of our country."

Asphalt Lake Unique Feature Of Trinidad

Virtually Limitless Supply Of Pitch Found On Caribbean Island Sighted By Raleigh; 100,000 East Indians Live There.

By John Francis Steele.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

IT was the lure of gold that brought Sir Walter Raleigh to the western world, but when he beheld Tierra de Brea (Pitch Lake in Trinidad, B. W. I.) he knew he had found something of inestimable value. And so he addressed himself to Queen Elizabeth:

"There is that abundance of stone pitch that all the shippes of the world may be therewith laden; from thence and wee made triall of it in trimming our shippes to be most excellent good, and melteth not with the sunne as pitch of Norway, and therefore for shippes trading south portes very profitable."

Some guide books have wandered so far afield as to call Pitch Lake beautiful. It can make no claims to beauty and, in reality, is not a lake at all. What the traveler actually beholds is 114 acres of congealed, grayish black mud spread out before him. One English writer compared the lake to the thick skin of a huge elephant with the criss-cross lines representing the many folds in the behemoth's hide.

While many fantastic tales have been circulated about the lake—about "insufferable heat and fetid odors"—the only heat there is comes from the sun as the equatorial region is not 20 degrees away. Even many noted travelers and writers when visiting the spot, at the first odor of sulphur, conjured up images of Dante, and rushed for their ships.

There is a fringe of trees surrounding the lake, but try as they may, they can never squeeze the necessary substance from the asphalt for mature growth. You can walk any place on the lake's surface, and while your shoes will make an impression, there is no danger of becoming imbedded in it. However, a protracted endurance test can scarcely be recommended for "sit-down" strikers.

FROM the way the lake frequently gives up its dead, it would appera that behquemoths of aeons past tried capers of the kind, their remains attesting to some such demise. Fragments of mastodons show that sort of life roamed the tropical wilds when the lake was semi-fluid and the world was young.

Scientists have determined that many thousands of years ago during a period of earth movements fractures developed in the earth's crust of sufficient depth to reach large oil and gas reservoirs below the earth's surface, thereby creating a channel of escape for the oil and gas to the surface. Geologists also claim that the agitation of escaping gas and oil gradually wore away the surface clays and earth until it formed a conical basin of asphalt.

Trinidad also boasts a mass of harder and firmer texture known as "land asphalt." This is attributed to an over-flow of oil in an early period of time which evaporated and hardened. Such deposits are also found on other parts of the island but too small for commercial purposes. Land asphalt contains much foreign matter, such as sticks, leaves and dirt. This over-flow of oil occurred when the lake was in a liquid state—when the influx from the ground was greater than the evaporation.

THE digging of the asphalt is simple enough as the mattock is the only instrument required in the operation. The mass is filled with crevices up to an inch in diameter and breaks up easily. Negroes are mainly employed in the labor. They work in gangs, one digger or cutter having five assistants who place the broken asphalt in the cars. These men are called "headers" as they are skilled in carrying these huge lumps on their heads, weighing from 40 to 100 pounds.

At times, from 800 to 1,500 men are engaged in the asphalt mining, of which 225 to 300 work in the mining while the others are employed in the refinery, in pouring sheds and in the storage and shipment of the product. The wage is higher than that of agricultural pursuits on the island of Trinidad. To avoid the extreme heat from noon to four, two shifts are employed, the first starting at three in the morning. A narrow gauge railway runs out into the lake and returns in the form of a loop.

The crude asphalt is dumped into stills or large tanks heated by coils of steam pipes. The asphalt softens and boils evaporating the water. The melted asphalt is drawn and barreled for shipment. At one time when the crude asphalt was shipped it was simply dumped into the holds of ships, thus becoming a compact mass which had to be dug up from the freighters. This method was practically abandoned as destructive as it bowed and pulled the holds out of shape.

* * * *

A VERY interesting and highly important feature is shown in the action of the surface of the lake after huge deposits have been removed. In less than a week the surface becomes smooth with no trace of the digging visible. Geologists claim this does not necessarily mean the influx of new asphalt although the center of the lake appears quite soft in comparison with the outer rim. This is attributed to a higher percentage of gas.

A few years ago an accurate survey of the lake showed that the general level had dropped 20 feet during the last half century, during which period, millions of tons of asphalt had been removed. This survey showed the depth to be 285 feet in the center of the lake but the tonnage has never been satisfactorily calculated. There is unquestionably enough asphalt in this one spot to supply the entire world for generations yet unborn.

Sir Walter Raleigh could have had but the slightest idea of the value of his find or envisioned its far-reaching results in paving, roofing, and the water-proofing of great engineering projects — such as bridges, dams, reservoirs and subterranean passages.

The 60-mile drive from Port of Spain to Pitch Lake is a delightful motor trip. The ribbon-like roadways, made possible by the asphalt lake, are flanked on all sides by tropical scenery, picturesque and colorful. There are 100,000 East Indians on the island and the exotic women with nut-brown skins and exquisite eyes add much to the charm of the countless hamlets dotting the island.

Beginning with the Virgins and sailing south, Trinidad is by far the largest of the islands. Besides its asphalt there are large productions of petroleum. Although Trinidad has been British since 1797 it has by no means lost evidences of its French and Spanish occupation.

Among The Magazines

In the "Contributors' Club" section of the current Atlantic Monthly Shogo Myaida writes, in part:

"Once I thought that art, which is too realistic in the Occident and so idealistic in the Orient, emphasized the truth of Kipling's 'East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet.' Since earliest times Western art has been realistic and of conventional form, while that of the East has been symbolic of idealism with naturalistic form. For example—flower arrangement in the Western world has insisted upon being rich, colorful, and symmetrical in form. Flowers have been used freely in home decoration—painted on walls and ceilings, woven into carpets and mosaics. Flowers, and their natural perfumes are used about the person, the Occidental always surrounding himself with something as nearly like living flowers as possible.

"The Orient has done the opposite. Since 660 B. C., or even earlier, Japan has employed the forms of nature as symbols—a bit of evergreen in a vase, not because of its realistic beauty, but because its character symbolizes some sentimental, spiritual, or idealistic thought.

"In American flower arrangements an idealistic trend is now employed which is called modern and naturalistic. At the same time in Japan the trend has been toward realism—scenic miniatures—and a colorful bouquet, called the Mori Bana. Once again, it seems, East and West are destined to part company.

"Yet the naturalistic ideal of flower arrangement is still part of the Japanese cultural development, even as in my own days in the Flowery Kingdom it was my cultural duty to make a flower arrangement each morning—a "Nageire," or "sketch of Nature"—to please my aged mother.

"One day I arranged a wild plum, a very early bloomer (Umme), and I hung as its background a picture which had been painted by the famous Kano Tan yu (1611-1674). Such an old painting was rather faded in appearance, but the spirit of the picture was intensely vivid—a large carp swimming on the surface of the water, swimming slowly, leaving light wave circles and directing himself with his powerful fin. A carp is the symbol of youth, awakening spring; the Umme is the symbol of patience and womanhood in traditional thought in Japan.

"This picture expressed noiseless calm, and yet suggested minutely a breath-taking powerful movement. It was a masterpiece, a perfect impression of an early spring scene. My Nageire in front of it added the naturalness of a highly scented white woodland flower that invites the song of birds. Such an ideal harmony of arrangement centralized the whole atmosphere of the room and gave it the simple beauty of Nature. So highly did my mother prize the arrangement that— unexpected honor!—she permitted it to remain two days instead of one.

"The great master Sen no Rikyu, she said, had stressed spontaneity in order to be natural in an arrangement. 'One must be guided by the spirit of nature—a flash of originality—not merely by rules.' Yes, surely an outburst of pure inspiration is the vital thing to seek. It is priceless, and should be the goal of each of us in every flower arrangement. No other can attain such heights of respect—even one single flower, when it connects our thoughts and heart with some sentiment, person, or event in our lives. The sense of idealism makes it of transcending value, lingering long in memory, while the spirit of the realistic bouquet perishes as its petals and sensuous appeal wither away."

More On Aliens

Another Reader Contests Talk Of "Trickle" Of Immigrants.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Peter F. Snyder, in The Post of May 28 in answer to my letter in your columns, speaking for immigration lawyers and as an immigration lawyer accuses me of an error for saying: "Practically every immigration lawyer has been in favor of the Kerr-Coolidge bills."

No immigration lawyer has appeared in opposition at any of the hearings that have been held by both the Senate and House immigration committees from time to time during the last four years on the various drafts of the Kerr-Coolidge bills. Mr. Snyder and other immigration lawyers were present at some of those hearings and the only immigration lawyers that put in an appearance and spoke, spoke in favor of the legislation.

At no time previous to his letter in The Post on May 16, has he or any other immigration lawyer opposed in the press any of the many Kerr-Coolidge bills. Two years ago Mr. Snyder had a letter in the New York Times that dwelt much on what a generous and charitable Nation we are and that was certainly favorable to the then pending Kerr-Coolidge bill. His letter two years ago was as favorable as was his recent letter in The Post favorable to the latest revised Kerr-Coolidge bill, (introduced on May 14 and reported by the committee on May 15, before it had been even printed and made available to the public). Either of these Kerr-Coolidge bills would increase the already profitable practice of immigration lawyers who make their money seeing that alien law breakers and law evaders and those picked up red-handed even by our inadequate immigration force, get their rights and, I think, sometimes more than their rights.

Last year over 190,000 aliens entered the United States legally. During the last six years of the depression over 100,100,000 aliens entered the United States legally. During the last 12 years of quota restriction over 4,000,000 aliens have entered the United States legally. That is no "trickle," except in the eyes of the interested immigration lawyer, I respectfully submit. Every year our inadequate immigration patrol apprehends thousands of alien smugglers and smuggling aliens, and seizes thousands of dollars worth of high-powered autos, high speed boats and even dozens of airplanes actually smuggling aliens into our country. The thousands of illegal entrants apprehended by our inadequate patrol is itself more than "a mere trickle" Mr. Snyder writes all alien entries are.

This year again spokesmen for the Department of Labor told the House appropriations sub-committee such facts as that last year there were over 46,000,000 border crossings, that "795,333 alien seamen were examined" (I quote their exact words), and the appropriations ought to be upped millions of dollars and the department personnel increased 50 per cent. The sub-committee was even told that Congressmen were clamoring for "more immigration ports" to take care of the alien influx. The President tells us just last week that our people are ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clothed, and that wages are too low and hours too long and that more jobs must be provided. The interesting fact is that the numbers of aliens in the country according to the census of 1930 plus the number of aliens that have entered since 1930 just about equals the number of unemployed, about 9,000,000. We do not need any more job hunters or applicants for relief. We should stop their importation.

I know that the pleas by department spokesmen before the House appropriations committee for larger appropriations and more men are colored, just as I know their talks about "vanishing aliens" elsewhere are even more colored. But the official annual statistics of aliens entering legally reveal more than "a mere trickle" for during the past 6 years nearly one-fifth of a million aliens entered the United States annually. According to the last official figures (census of 1930) we had the largest number of aliens in our history (about 7,000,000) the largest number of foreign born (over 14,000,000) and the largest foreign stock population (over 40,000,000 persons).

I think it is Mr. Snyder who is "in error," not only as to there being no alien problem, but also about immigration lawyers not throbbing with ordinary self-interest and self-preservation. They have a big interest in and a high opinion of their practice, and want it to grow and increase so that they can relieve the aliens humanely and otherwise.

France Proclaims.

Europe Nouvelle, Paris—Too long has our diplomacy been one of formulas. . . . Taught by . . . experience, M. Yvon Delbos . . . used simpler language in his speech at Carcassonne.

He said: "There is what exists; there is what we hope; there is what we won't accept at any price."

What exists is a Europe divided by rival interests, torn by distrust and staggering under a frenzied armament race. What we hope for is a relaxation to allow cuts in military costs and so raise the standard of living everywhere and appease grievances causing misery and want. What we won't accept at any price is to negotiate advantages at the expense of anyone and from which all could not benefit, as this would tempt some to use returned prosperity and confidence for warlike ends. . . .

In short, the policy of MM. Leon Blum and Yvon Delbos can be defined and defended as a policy of honesty.

Germany Answers.

Frankfurter, Zeitung.—Supposing that we effectually engage ourselves in the domain of international collaboration (as suggested by M. Delbos in his Carcassonne speech), apart from the League of Nations and collective security which weighs upon it. Will France then renounce forging the circle that its alliances can establish around Germany? That is the question on which depends not only the future of Franco-German relations, but the fate of Europe as well.

Hungarians Lament.

Pesti Hirlap, Budapest.—There is a censorship in Rumania . . . The publication of the articles (in two Rumanian newspapers threatening a reign of terfor among Hungarian minorities in Rumania if Mussolini tries to free them) was approved by the Rumanian government.

Hungarian newspapers published on Rumanian territory are constantly being suppressed and confiscated.

The lot of Hungarians torn from their country by the Treaty of Trianon is difficult everywhere because none of the succession states keep their obligations under the minority pacts . . . The cynicism with which the Rumanian government tries to annihilate the Hungarian minorities is a startling fact in the postwar history of the central Danubian Valley.

Rumanians Reply.

Revue de Transylvanie, Cluj.—We are now witnessing a recrudescence of attacks by leaders of the Hungarian minorities against the acts of the Rumanian legislative and administrative power . . . We believe these pretensions are made to weaken the structure of the Rumanian state. . . .

If the (Hungarian) minorities really want to form part of (Rumanian) national life . . . they must not always be invoking treaties with the sole aim of maintaining constant tension between minorities and majorities.

Hungarian territory has not been mutilated. It has been reduced to its proportions. What has been mutilated and will remain so is the arrogant (Hungarian) pretense to place the most different sorts of peoples under the yoke of a feudal minority that exploits and disdains them.

Moscow Is Cynical.

Izvestia, Moscow.—The German-Polish friendship is often clouded over by various little disagreements. Recently, Poland decided to decorate her pavillion in the Paris Exposition with the busts of six Poles famed in the field of politics and science, among them the Polish astronomer, Copernicus. The Nazi press retorted with very acid editorials in which they attempted to prove that Copernicus was a German and that, although he lived in the Polish town of Torun, he always was "an ardent German patriot."

"In the interests of the German-Polish rapprochement," wrote the Volkischer Beobachter in a sinister mood, "it is desirable that the bust of Copernicus should not appear in the Polish pavillion at the Paris Exposition."

Il Duce Opines.

Daily Herald, London.—On the Italian Labor Day Mussolini presented medals and pensions to a number of aged men and women. In the speech which he delivered on that occasion he said:

"We have long had proof that Italians are the most intelligent people in the world, and now we know that they are the most courageous, too, for they undauntedly resisted 52 nations."

The Duce had a final surprise for the old people. "Fascism," he told them, "is the regime of the workers."

Thomas Paine

Virginian Seconds Regret For Lack Of Honor For Patriot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. A. W. Carter, in this space of your issue of June 5, with reference to the inadequate recognition by memorials of a number of those courageous men of the revolutionary period in the history of our country, reminded me of my often-expressed regret that our national legislators have never seen fit to honor one of the leading (if not leading) characters who played a conspicuous part in bringing about the independence of these United States. I refer to the first man listed by Mr. Carter—Thomas Paine.

This man was beyond all doubt, as Robert Ingersoll often said, "the mover of the Declaration of Independence." Neglect of this obvious duty on the part of our National Government is not only regrettable, it is a shame. Prominent men of the latter half of the eighteenth century were of the opinion that this country should be an independent Nation; thousands echoed the slogan of Patrick Henry, but not one of them did anything toward translating their desires into action. They shook their fists and sent their curses across the ocean for the British tyrant and let it go at that.

As Prof. Rexford Tugwell said in a recent magazine article, "It is certainly a curse of progressivism that its leaders will not organize. What it takes to arouse resentment and revolt they have; what it takes to go forward on a line of action, they have not." And this was the case with the leaders of the American people of that day.

Thomas Paine, a man of vision, noted as a writer of logical arguments on various subjects, commendably diffident, not willing to be too forward in his suggestions as to the course to be taken, being a comparative newcomer to our shores, finally, overcoming his modesty, wrote out his ideas as to what should be done in pamphlet form and published it at his own expense. Someone has said, "This pamphlet became at once the bestseller of that period, creating an unprecedented furor." Its effect upon the people was such that as he says himself, "This paper, Common Sense, was issued in February, and on the following July 4 the Declaration of Independence was read."

Since Paine was also in frequent consultation with Jefferson during the interim, there is hardly a doubt but that he helped frame the great document. Though thousands of the best American minds recognize the great value of the service this patriot rendered his adopted country, those whose duty it is to translate this recognition into suitable action by erecting a memorial worthy of his service to his memory, do nothing. They actually show their cowardice by their subservience to ecclesiastical powers who for nearly a century and three-quarters have heaped the vilest abuse upon the man's head for no other reason than that he unwittingly was the founder of the Unitarian church, as the impartial reading of his "Age of Reason" will reveal.

Dog Teeth And Gold.

The natives of far-off Papua, who wear rings in their noses and grass skirts and whose favorite outdoor sport is whacking each other over the head with stone axes, may soon begin to look with a sympathetic understanding upon the natives of the United States, who wear buttons in their coat lapels, and too much clothing, and who run each other down with motor cars.

The reason is that Papua is threatened with inflation. Some time ago Miss Molnar, a Hungarian missionary, appealed to her supporters to send her dog teeth instead of money. Money, she explained, was a mere curiosity in Papua, while dog teeth passed as currency everywhere. As a result, the Hungarian missionary societies delightedly rushed her the dog teeth. Instead of passing the collection plate, they instituted a search for canine molars. Miss Molnar soon became one of the wealthiest women in Papua.

But the simple Papuans will discover that unless the supply of dog teeth is abated, their money values will fall. Then they may understand how it is with the United States; how, with an excessive gold supply, we are still getting more and paying a high price for it. And that is a factor in price inflation. The Papuan may not realize it, but unless the zeal of the missionary societies is stopped, he may be no better off than we are.

Philippines Debate Independence In '38

Quezon Plan Will Receive Thorough Weighing When Joint Committee Arrives In Manila In July, Island Sentiment Certain.

Manila.

THE visit to the Philippines in July of the joint committee created by Undersecretary of State Sayre to study the economics of Philippine Independence will certainly provoke a showdown on the Quezon plan to advance independence to 1938 or 1939.

Even now there is considerable talk of American and foreign capital fleeing the islands due to the possible shortening of the pre-independence transition. And every time the Manila press has reminded their readers of the Quezon plan, the stock market has taken a deep dive.

Strangely enough, all the existing political groups seem to like the plan. The ruling party, controlled by President Quezon, will of course rally behind the issue of earlier independence. The Popular Front party of Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, both of whom ran against Quezon for president, being more radical on the matter of Philippine liberation from America, has always urged immediate independence.

When President Quezon made his plan public the party had no choice but to indorse it. In fact, there are those who express the opinion that one of the reasons why President Quezon broached such a plan had been to steal the opposition's thunder. The truth, however, is that there has been an all-around theft of thunder, Quezon having held the original patent for the political slogan, "Immediate, complete, and absolute independence."

* * * *

DIVISION of opinion on the Quezon plan, it is becoming more evident, will be along economic lines. Wealthy Filipinos, especially the sugar barons, are observed to frown on the plan. Philippine Americans, with very few exceptions, are against it. Alien business men, including Spaniards with vast land-holdings and important Philippine franchises, are generally for postponing independence.

With respect to this group, the main consideration is self-interest. The wealthy Filipinos, who export sugar to America, know that without the American market they could not continue to live in mansions and ride in limousines. Philippine Americans, most of whom are merchants, are convinced that markets for American products would fall if the Philippines were independent. The Spaniards are just being consistent. When they finally decided to capitulate following the Philippine revolution, they preferred to surrender to the Americans rather than to the Filipinos.

Philippine Americans, since the agitation for independence commenced some three decades ago, have always contended that they have not been given a proper hearing. In Washington, Congressmen have looked upon them with suspicion—they have been branded, for the most part, as self-seeking on the premise that only the Filipinos could speak for themselves. But Philippine Americans have held all along that America, and Washington in particular, has never fully understood the Philippines—particularly the Philippine markets and what they can do for America's export industry—and they intend to make the most of this before the joint committee.

DISINTERESTED opposition to the Quezon plan takes quite a different guise. Many thoughtful people believe that there are at least three more tasks the Filipinos must complete under American guidance before they may cast away. These are (1) the socio-political reorganization; (2) economic preparedness, and (3) military preparedness.

It is the observation of thoughtful students that Philippine political development is incomplete in the sense that the Filipinos have so far failed to develop a party system. Under the regimes of the governors-general, minority parties failed to make any headway, and the reason was that the American chief executive was himself the minority party. It was his job to censor the excesses and shortcomings of the Filipino party in power. When the governor-general was replaced by the American High Commissioner, the parties, instead of developing normally into more or less co-ordinate groups, effected a merger known as the coalition, leaving the opposition field to a handful of non-conformists like Gen. Aguinaldo.

American High Commissioner McNutt has revived the old American Philippine formula: economic independence before political independence. And since the present Quezon mission in America was originally intent on correcting economic inequalities, many people have awakened to the emptiness of freedom without the economic wherewithal to enjoy it.

THE military aspect of the situation is quite obvious in the minds of many people. Since the Quezon-MacArthur defense plan is a 10-year program, it is argued that by 1939 the Philippines will still be helpless in a military sense. The campaign to sell the plan to the people in order to secure the necessary support has convinced them of the urgent need for a military establishment strong enough, as the authors of the plan well put it, to make conquest of the Philippines so costly that it will be unprofitable.

Arguments for the Quezon plan are equally numerous and convincing. President Quezon himself argued for his plan recently in a broadcast across the Pacific to the Philippines. His plan, according to him, is primarily a way out of the anomalies created under the Tydings-McDuffie law, including Congress' propensity to alter the law at will, the incompatibility between the Commonwealth's status as a self-governing country and the wide powers of the American High Commissioner, and the many uncertainties that must beset the islands as long as vital Philippine matters are decided in Washington.

Grant And The Court.

In the early days of the agitation for Mr. Roosevelt's court bill, his apologists said frequently that the President was proposing only that which other Presidents had done before him.

At various times, we have shown how little basis there was for this contention—how the wholesale remaking of the Supreme Court demanded by Mr. Roosevelt is without precedent. This view of the Grant-Supreme Court episode is supported in a notable new book, "The Civil War and Reconstruction," by Prof. James Garfield Randall of the University of Illinois, author of the widely read article on Lincoln in the Dictionary of American Biography. Discussing the legal tender cases, Dr. Randall says:

The reversal had been made possible by the appointment of new members, and it was charged that the Court had been "packed," a thing genuinely shocking to the American judicial sense. The facts do not bear out the charge. Grant did admit to Hamilton Fish (his Secretary of State) his desire that the Legal Tender Act should be sustained, and it is also true that even prior to the Hepburn decision (first case) the attitude of possible Court appointees was studied in relation to the important paper-money question. But as to the constitutional position of Strong and Bradley, as Warren says, it was that of "every prominent Republican lawyer," and nearly all the State courts.

Packing the Court to suit the radicals would have been a thing different from choosing Strong, who was a conservative; and the carpetbag Senators were "ferocious" at the choice of Bradley. To "pack" the Court suggests increasing the statutory number of its membership, but this was not done in 1870. The President was, after all, filling two vacancies in a manner which bore no unworthy political taint, unless one should say that the selection of Republicans was unjustifiably partisan. The juxtaposition of the appointments with the legal tender reversal was a coincidence rather than a matter of intrigue or design.

Pianoforte.

*"By now Arthur was seated at the piano, and Thibaud was tuning his violin. * * * And then it began. Arthur became an orchestra, building with the sound of singing strings, resonant billowing brass, soft clear-blown wood and accurately thudding drums, a structure of needed volume for the single melodic unity of Thibaud's violin."—Muriel Draper, in "Music at Midnight."*

Some whisper their soft melodies, content
To speak their vibrant songs from four taut strings,
But oft constrained, as a young girl who sings
Her rarest raptures with a voice impent.
And some, deep from their brassy necks' extent,
Blow out their basses and low bellowings
Taurine, or with metallic trumpetings
Discharge their herald duties eloquent.

But thou, choice instrument of man's design,
Thou art the victor over all of these,
For all their powers abundantly art thine,
Given a master at thy mystic keys,
And theirs at best thy music can eclipse,
In mad perfection from the fingertips.

A Week-End Review of Current Publications

Unique Biography

By Merlo J. Pusey

IT WAS a happy thought which prompted Burton J. Hendrick to write a biography of the Constitution, retelling the story of our remarkable charter as it passes its 150th milestone. With a charming fluency of style and a keen appreciation of human interests, he has gleaned from our constitutional history a living account of the struggles that have brought the United States to its present stage of political development. Every American seeking to understand the governmental system under which he lives will want to read "Bulwark of the Republic."

Unlike most writers on the Constitution, Mr. Hendrick tackled his problem with the biographer's technique. He tells the story of the Constitution as a living, growing—almost human—instrument of government. The circumstances of its creation, the genius, the foibles and idiosyncracies of its authors, the struggles of its friends and enemies, the success which has been achieved and the failures that have been suffered under it—all these dramatic stories are woven into a thoughtful, yet gripping, narrative.

Mr. Hendrick is especially successful in blending great personalities into his account of constitutional developments. The human element is never lost to sight. The practical idealism of Washington, the political learning of Madison, the driving will of Hamilton, the unfailing good judgment of James Wilson and the homespun wisdom of Roger Sherman are as much a part of his narrative as the Dred Scott decision and the muzzling of the Supreme Court in the dark days of reconstruction.

YET the author was not satisfied to record historical and biographical events. He has a very definite point of view to present. His book is really an appraisal of the Constitution at the end of the first century and a half of its existence. With the attitude of an impartial student, he inquires wherein it has been found wanting and to what extent it has guided our national progress.

The central conclusion resulting from this analysis of events may be found in the Prologue. Since 1787, he points out, the dominant characteristic of the world has been change. Science, religion, literature, social and economic relations have undergone sweeping mutations. Evolution has been especially marked in the field of government.

SIGNING OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U. S.
An artist's conception of the signing in 1787.

Dynasties have been upset, revolution has followed revolution in many parts of the world. All the leading governments of 1877 have given way to new regimes. Only the United States has clung to its original charter during this period of upheaval. Mr. Hendrick attributes this remarkable vitality directly to the Constitution itself. Sometimes that document has failed to save the Nation from disaster, as in the case of the Civil War. But for the most part it has served to restrain rash action, and to open the way for modern growth without sacrifice of personal liberty.

IT is significant to note that our most serious crises have arisen when the Constitution was not functioning as contemplated. In the era just preceding the Civil War the pro-slavery party had gained a majority in Congress and taken control of the White House. When the Supreme Court capitulated to this faction by rendering the Dred Scott decision, the safeguarding checks upon arbitrary power contemplated by the founding fathers ceased to operate. Likewise, in the grim days of reconstruction a Congressional dictatorship over the President and the Supreme Court led to abuses for which the Nation still feels a blush of shame.

In view of this record, ably traced by Mr. Hendrick, it is rather disappointing to have him take a neutral attitude toward President Roosevelt's plan to bring the present court into line with White House thinking. "For good or ill," he admits, "the Rooseveltian measures substitute for the present body politic a new form of the American State * * * Congress, under its (the Administration's) pressure, has passed the laws which revolutionize the entire agricultural, industrial and social world." Yet he raises no protest when such momentous changes are sought, in defiance of the Constitution, through the medium of a subservient court. Surely if the American system of democracy is to persist, such vital decisions will have to be left to the people, and not the White House.

Issue may also be taken with the author's statement in his introduction that "there are many precedents" for "the struggle now taking place between the Executive and the Legislature." The chapters dealing with contests between the court and other agencies of Government are among the most interesting in the book. In each case, however, Mr. Hendrick himself has revealed facts which show a wide gulf between Mr. Roosevelt's reckless attempt to pack the court and the measures adopted by other Presidents. There is no precedent for the 1937 judiciary bill.

THE nearest previous approach to outright packing of the Supreme Court to change its decisions was the appointment of two justices by Grant while that tribunal was handing down a decision declaring the legal tender acts to be unconstitutional. But these positions were not created by Congress for the purpose of influencing judicial opinions. Moreover, the two justices selected by Grant were both second choices for the court vacancies. Most historians are not willing to go as far as Mr. Hendrick does in assuming that Judges Strong and Bradley were appointed to the bench to overturn the legal tender decision.

Mr. Hendrick's discussion of judicial review is especially illuminating. He takes emphatic issue with current suggestions that the courts usurped their power to set aside legislation in conflict with the basic law. "Judicial review," he says, "came into existence at the very moment that written constitutions did; one was necessary if the other was to exist."

The colonies were thoroughly familiar with the principle, for acts contrary to their charters had been set aside by the Privy Council. When that power was relinquished by the London government it was assumed by the State courts. "Thus the questions as to whether the framers of the Federal Constitution intended that the final dictum in constitutionality should be exercised by the courts answers itself. They so expected because that was the only system they had ever known."

• • • •

IN such an excellent "biography" of the Constitution it is unfortunate that even slight inaccuracies must be recorded. In his introduction, Mr. Hendrick speaks of "the Tariff Commission, which enjoys a delegated power to fix tariff rates." Actually, that power can be exercised only by the President, upon findings by the commission in accord with a policy and a formula laid down by Congress. A more serious mistake occurs in his interpretation of recent Supreme Court findings. Having made reference to the I. C. C., the F. T. C. and other independent Federal commissions, he writes: "Their members are appointed by the President and are responsible to him." Of course, these commissioners are not reponsible to the President, as the Humphrey case emphatically proved.

Both of these inaccuracies occur in the introduction, dealing with the 1937 constitutional issue. It is reasonable to suppose that this section was written with less care than the body of the text. Since no stimulus is needed to arouse appreciation for the book, this hasty attempt to bring the story up to the minute might well have been omitted.

"BULWARK OF THE REPUBLIC," by Burton J. Hendrick. (Little, Brown, $3.50.)

Thirty Years After Appomattox

Author Outlines Trials Preceding Union of States.

By Edmond S. Meany.

North and South both suffered while the Civil War progressed, but after Appamattox the South continued to endure the tragedy of the conflict. The North, "arrogant in victory," assumed politically and intellectually an attitude which brooked no pandering toward the defeated rebels. "The South," on the other hand, "lay spent and exhausted, yet ready to offer stolid resistance to the unfriendly gestures of its assailant." Each side seemed unyielding in hatred, and it appeared that the struggle to perpetuate the Union would result only in greater sectional divergence, and that the Union would rest henceforward solely upon force employed by the North.

Paradoxically, however, the keynote of the period 1865-1900 was not sectional hatred, but national integration. Not the divergence of the sections, but "the history of how two bitter foes were reconciled, two rival societies harmonized * * * leads to the core of American life since the Civil War," Dr. Buck writes. In a brilliant manner which defies brief review, he outlines the complicated advances and reverses leading to reconciliation by describing and correlating "the many themes; political, social, economic, cultural and emotional, which figured in the complexity of postwar life."

Politically, the alchemy of reconciliation worked slowly. By 1872 the Democratic Party discarded its policy of resistance for "reconciliation by acceptance," popularly termed the "New Departure." To win campaigns, Republicans relied more and more upon waving the "bloody shirt," a garment tattered from continuous use long before President Hayes withdrew Federal troops from the South. However, by the eighties the Nation grew weary of sectionalism as a political issue. Some wished to be rid of the "bloody shirt," which retarded progress in civil service and revenue reform. A new group of leaders, and a new generation of voters who knew little or nothing of the war itself, promoted the growing spirit of reconciliation which persisted in spite of reverses.

In 1890-1891 debate was held on the Lodge bill, designed to force upon the South a moderate Federal election act to prohibit a return of the Negro to his former innocuous status. After defeat of this bill, men of the nineties were absorbed with the social and economic maladjustments developing from extensive growth of national wealth and power. There was no room for the old war-born political alignment of North vs. South.

• • • •

Economically, the South had to begin its own recovery and advance. The North, preoccupied with its own industrial difficulties and fearful of investing in States which repudiated their reconstruction debts, gave little economic aid at first. The South, disappointed in the expectation that Northern capital would rapidly relieve devastation, was forced to solve its own financial and industrial problems. By 1870 the South had largely recovered her prewar economic position. Tenancy and share-cropping in agriculture, and local support for industry, preceded the influx of Northern capital and mills late in the period. By the close of the century, interlocking interests between the sections led to increasing mutual economic dependence.

In a social and cultural way, North and South became reconciled as the decades passed. Symbolic of growing national brotherhood was the institution of Memorial Day and the sentiment which it produced:

No more shall the war-cry sever;
Or the winding river be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of our dead!
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

In joint sessions of veterans' groups, in the acts granting amnesty, in the celebration of common anniversaries and the exchange of greeting at expositions, in the newspaper reports of the South, in universal sorrow upon the death of President Garfield—in evidences such as these are found inclination toward reconciliation.

• • • •

The literature of the New South was also a force for reconciliation. Local color existed everywhere in Dixie, and the writers exploiting this material no longer defended a sectional system; they described a romantic life which was no more. Strangely enough their wares found market in the North. Following the lead of Scribner's, Northern magazines provided a receptive public with works of Sidney Lanier, George W. Cable, Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Nelson Page, Mary Noailles Murfree and others. Reconciliation itself was frequently the theme adopted by these writers.

The Negro problem weighed heavily upon the public mind in the period before 1900. Political and social discrimination was established in the South as the North reluctantly retreated from reconstruction policies. Gradually, men in the North accepted the Southern defense. They began to uuderstand that the race problem could not be solved immediately.

"Thirty years after Appomattox," writes Dr. Buck, "there remained no fundamental conflict between the aspirations of North and South. The people of the United States constituted at last a Nation integrated in interests and united in sentiment * * * The reunited Nation was a fact." With vigor, yet with sensitivity, Dr. Buck has proved his thesis. "The Road to Reunion" is a scholarly achievement, comprehensively documented, yet praiseworthy from a literary point of view and stimulating for its philosophy as well as its facts.

"THE ROAD TO REUNION, 1865-1900," by Paul H. Buck. (Little, Brown, $3.25.)

"South After Gettysburg"

"SOUTH AFTER GETTYSBURG," edited by Henrietta Stratton Jacquette. (University of Pennsylvania Press, $2.)

The subtitle of this small book is "Letters of Cornelia Hancock from the Army of the Potomac, 1863-1865." Member of the Society of Friends, Miss Hancock left her peaceful New Jersey home as news of Gettysburg stirred the Nation. Three days after the battle she began her nursing career on the bloody field, cluttered with wounded and dead which filled the air for five miles around, she wrote, with "an awful smell of putrefaction."

Thenceforth to the end of the war she followed the troops with hospital units, sometimes far behind the lines, sometimes where shelling was heavy. Even during the busiest days she found time to send to family and friends the letters which have here been collected.

The realism of the war, its suffering and its lesser miseries of smell and sight, are described with vivid simplicity. The mitigation of a woman's touch in camp, the adoration of the wounded soldiers for their comely and efficient nurse, and the mutual admiration growing between the young woman and a surgeon relieve the tragic tone of the account.

To those who know the nearby landmarks of the Civil War, "South After Gettysburg" will give detail of military affairs in the vicinity of Washington. To others, the book provides a welcome addition to the source literature of the War Between the States.

"De L'Esprit"

"DE L'ESPRIT," by Pauline de Brodes. (Oxford University Press.)

"De l'Esprit" is an excellent (conversation) book which has the advantage of presenting the French language in an agreeable and interesting form for which we can congratulate the writer, Miss Pauline de Brodes. Doubtless we have many books of conversation for French classes, but very few of them are going farther than the usual practical sentences such as "How are you today? I had my breakfast at 8 o'clock," or some such inescapable sentences. In de l'Esprit, at least, we have a book which tried to go deeper into conversation and to portray the real French atmosphere. In it the author does not try to adapt the French for the utility of the Americans, but to bring the real spirit of the French conversation with its wit, its charm and its variety. By this method the author escaped the tediousness which inevitably seizes upon our minds when we read the so-called practical manual of conversation.

It pleases me also to notice that by choosing for the first part of her book so great a number of French cartoons and stories of wit, the student will gain from them an understanding and appreciation of the very special form of French humor.

As for the presentation, special mention must be made of the large spaces left under the cartoons where explanations or notes may be put. Such an arrangement will enable the reader to have, on the same page, the material with his personal remarks. Such a little book will be of great value for students as well as for those who take an interest in the study of French.

Sharecroppers

"SON OF HAMAN," by Louis Cochran. (Caxton Printers, $2.50.)

This story by young Lije Smith comprises the first volume of what is to be, we are told, a trilogy by Louis Cochran, author of "Flood Tides" and "Black Earth." The scene is laid in and around Delta City, Miss., in the nineties. There is nothing thought-provoking about this book nor is there any philosophy, underlying or obvious. Perhaps the complete series will give a better picture of the life of sharecroppers in the Yazoo River Delta.

It is a simple narrative, but with capable handling of dialectic, conversation and raw emotions. There is real and satisfactory evidence of imagination. True, the research which the book must have required would produce an amount of detailed background, but it couldn't have worked out, without the assistance of the author, the details of language and movement.

Lije, the illegitimate son of Nancy Smith, has reached the age of working, but after a short period in the general store, he gets the family friend (one of the town's several saloon keepers) to back him in a lumber mill.

Lije works for her father in building his gin mill, during which time he is forbidden the house by Mrs. Fortenberry. Elizabeth avoids him and the strained situation is climaxed by Lije's passionate declaration to which she responds wholeheartedly, or so it seems to Lije. The anticlimax of her marriage to Cronbill immediately afterwards is so painful to Lije that he marries the town prostitute. Thus abruptly does the book end. Its existence may be more justified by the subsequent volumes, but if this is to be published separately it should also be sufficient unto itself in every sense.

Bugles Blow No More

Reviewed by Russell Smith

April, 1865, in Richmond:

"'I thought to the very end we'd break through somehow. I'd rather have hid in the mountains and fought on than to have seen him give up like he did. It was awful to see him come back after the surrender' . . . She laid her hand on his arm.

"'Brose, all your family's waiting to see you. Please, for my sake, don't think of Gen. Lee now. Won't you try to be happy that we—that all of us are together?'

"He nodded, as though he hadn't heard. A faint light glowed in his eyes and the grayness seemed to have lifted from his face. Almost there was a suggestion of the old fierceness.

"'You know,' he said, 'when the Old Man passed us, coming back from the surrender, I touched his stirrup.'"

That is the key pitched by Mr. Clifford Dowdey at the beginning and at the end of his "Bugles Blow No More." In between is a story of the slow disintegration of a society, and of the individuals who make it up, under the alien pressures of civil war. This story is embodied principally in Ambrose Kirby and Mildred Wade, and their kin, although there is a considerable array of minor figures—Milton Duke, the profiteer; Mrs. Fitchett and her son, Joe, representatives of "the lower classes;" Philip Parramore, a weakling who turned traitor to the cause; Government officials and Army officers, and a host of others. The romance of Brose and Mildred, however, sums the substance of the narrative.

But for the war, Brose, a clerk in the tobacco warehouse of the Wades, never would have met Mildred, in all probability. But for the war, she would never have opened herself to his dark passion, nor grown into the womanhood demanded by her new situation. Lastly, the sword between them implicit in the closing passage quoted above could have been placed there only by war.

If it is admitted that upon their love hinges the success of "Bugles Blow No More" as a novel, then it must be termed a failure. This failure springs from Mr. Dowdey's inability to conceive a character from under the skin. His creations are all manufactured. They are, it is true, carefully, even lovingly, manufactured. But rarely is there the revelatory phrase or incident which in a fine novel gives an inner lustre to character and narrative alike. Thus, despite Mr. Dowdey's painstaking "realism" there is a curious romantic light across all his scenes and personages, as if the wrong slide had got into the projector at a theater. Illustrative of this characteristic is the suicide of Virginius Kirby, Confederate zealot, when Richmond falls. His action not only is too reminiscent of history, in Edmund Fuffin's similar suicide and bequeathal to posterity of hatred of Yankees, but it is too pat to Mr. Dowdey's purpose quite to convince us. Life, even in 1865 Richmond, is not like that, we observe, never so apt.

In its careful research, its devotion to detail, and care for all the materials of historical narrative, "Bugles Blow No More," however, is praiseworthy. Nowhere, as an instance, is the Confederate Soldier of the rank and file more authentically, more finally drawn than in Mr. Dowdey's delineations.

In little, it may be said that his book, although a failure as a novel, succeeds admirably as a re-creation of the Civil War days of Richmond.

Dreamer of Hollydene

Lonely and lost to shallow cheer and mirth,
In close communion with the larger earth;

Story of the Crusades

"THE CRUSADES." Hilaire Belloc. (Bruce, $3.)

Hilaire Belloc, as prolific a writer as any now living, usually concentrates on one period or one section of Europe for a series of books on historical subjects. A few years ago he was principally interested in the sixteenth and later the seventeenth century in England. Recently he turned to the Near East, and finally he has produced a book on the Crusades. Such a book from him is not surprising for the subject combines in itself two of his greatest interests, the church and military science. On both he is pre-eminently fitted to write, and from his past work, he has gained wide recognition as an authority on both.

The Crusades, as a magnificent manifestation of religious fervor, have been too often treated to leave much room for new material or new interpretations, but as a military campaign, they have been to some extent neglected. Realizing this, Mr. Belloc's essay deals almost exclusively with the latter phase of the subject. It is not, however, the strategy of the individual battle and sieges that are treated but rather the grand plan of the movement and the essential reasons for its original success and ultimate failure. The whole thing is considered as a unity and with respect to the nearly 100 years that it effectively lasted, and not as a series of separate crusades of equal consequence as many have been led to believe.

There was only one real Crusade; all the other four were either abortive attempts to succor the first, or vain efforts at retaking what the first successful crusade ultimately lost. When the remnants, perhaps a fifth of the huge throng of half a million men that started, at last reached the Holy Land after horrible decimation from disease, famine, thirst and battle, they made the fatal strategical mistake of neglecting to seize Damascus. Such a stroke, if executed at once, would have cut Islam in two and made communication between the two halves impossible. This the Crusaders failed to do, and as a result, the Mohammedan world was finally able to unite under Saladin and push the narrow coastal kingdom of Jerusalem into the sea. Here is found the fundamental cause of the failure to maintain this kingdom so far away from practical communication with Europe. But in addition to this were the contributing reasons of lack of reinforcements, the intermingling of the races and the consequent loss of stamina of the guardians of the holy places.

Hilaire Belloc is one of the most expert exponents of the simple, direct and exact form of writing. Each point is presented so definitely that to mistake it or misinterpret it is out of the question. It is hard to imagine a better model of clear prose than is provided by his work. He may well be imitated by anyone who desires clarity in writing. This is as easy to do with his work as it is impossible to do with Chesterton. But strangely enough, there have been a number of imitators of Chesterton—all miserable failures—and practically none of Belloc. This book is a good example of his habit of stressing a single point—here, the failure of the Crusades because of the neglect to cut Islam in half at the very beginning. If any criticism is to be made of his use of this style here, it is that he bludgeons the point home too insistently and repetitiously. It is done more than is necessary; not that the fact is not important, but because the reader is more intelligent.

Speech at Home And in Public

"WELL-BRED SPEECH," by Anne Tillery Renshaw. (The Standard Press, Washington, D. C., $2.)

"YOU, TOO, CAN BECOME A PUBLIC SPEAKER," by John Hewins Kern. (Governor Publishing Corporation, $1.)

In "Well Bred Speech" Anne Tillery Renshaw cites many common speech faults, such as chronic mispronunciation, limited vocabulary, incorrect usage and a too great reliance on verbal bromides. These seem to be the chief conversational stumbling blocks and the author tells us tersely how to overcome them.

"No matter what you want to attain in life, public speaking . . . will help you acquire it." As Mr. Dooley would say, that covers a lot of territory! In his book, "You, Too, Can Become a Public Speaker," Dr. John H. Kern gives the examples of many of our foremost leaders, past and present, to prove his point. Then he tells us how we, too, can reach the heights of forensic fame.

The formula seems to be a fair amount of courage mixed with some knowledge, the development of that elusive thing known as "it," to which you add a working vocabulary. After that, all that is required is practice. But it would be unfair not to add that the author has prepared many helpful hints for aspiring orators.

A Planned Society

By Charles Thomson

THIS collection of essays merits close attention first, because of the eminence of many of the contributors, and, second, because of the fundamental nature of the subjects under consideration. Mr. Delaisi, in the middle 20s, expressed the need for taking our bearings in the changed and rapidly changing postwar world. The severe economic stresses of the last five years have likewise engendered and exacerbated a whole host of problems and libraries of more or less relevant discussion about them. The need for guidance among both problems and discussions renders welcome a collection of essays which "presents some of the more fundamental factors underlying the problems of control and planning in a changing society, from early times to the present day . . . Without any attempt at final analysis of complete solution, an endeavor is made to classify [clarify?] the basic issues involved in control and planning in a rapidly changing world order."

We do not propose here to ask whether all the factors presented are relevant, or whether all the relevant factors are present. This must be decided by the reader on the basis of his own thinking and intellectual needs. The essays are divided into four major sections. The first treats of economic control in primitive, ancient and medieval societies. The second accomplishes the transition to the modern world with discussions of economic planning and nationalism as represented by mercantilism and its antithesis. The last two sections, which make up the bulk of the volume, examine control and planning in particular areas of economic activity, and control and planning of all economic activity. Within this ample framework, land planning, industrial relations, control of public services, control of prices and credit, the role of the fiscal system and the relation of planning to consumption are considered. The effects of invention, the place of propaganda, political consequences and philosophical implications, are discussed.

IT is not often that the covers of one volume are planned to encompass such a number of contributions on problems so varied and deep-reaching. The book's defects, and its values alike, spring from this fact. On the one hand, no one essay is long enough to include both the factual materials and the analytic structure necessary to an even partial understanding of the issues involved. The reader must not hope for more than a guide to relevant questions and available sources of information from a perusal of this volume by itself. On the other hand, there are values in having opinions on many of the aspects of modern planning gathered together in one place. Ready reference and comparison are facilitated.

Variations in quality and relevance are inevitable in a collation of this sort. Although most of the papers have not appeared elsewhere, several of the contributions from some of the most promising names appearing on the jacket are reprints of former effusions, more or less germane to the discussion. Thus, for Mr. Morgan, of TVA, we find a reprint of his public statement of last January on a proposed Government power policy. Some of the articles are excellent, as for example, the essays of Lois MacDonald and H. D. Lasswell. Some are pedestrian, abstracting or recounting material already available and not too significant anyway. Some are hortatory, resentful, or desirous of vindicating political philosophies or activities challenged by theories or events. There are none, however, which are completely irrelevant or trivial. The editor has made an herculean effort to introduce each essay with short comments designed to pull together the somewhat heterogeneous parts. At times he has succeeded admirably, but often his stuff runs thin.

THE greatest disappointment of the book is on the side of analysis. We were led to believe by the jacket that we had to do with a symposium on social and economic change. We hoped that the symposium would contribute to the analysis of the processes and prospects for social change. A moment's thought about the concept of "planning" shows the centrality of such analysis. In its absence, the symposium is limited to a relatively unprofitable and uninteresting criticism of the world in terms of the social and economic prejudices of the authors, coupled with howlings for a moon we know not how to reach.

The descriptive values are happily greater. The book will do yeoman service as a convenient introduction to the philosophy and literature of planning, providing at the same time enough descriptive material of past, present and proposed planning to orient the neophyte. A rather extensive bibliography and a helpful set of thumbnail sketches of the contributors further this usefulness. Although omissions are inevitable in so ambitious a work, it is regrettable that there is little attention given to the economic councils which proliferated after the war, and that our blue-ribbon regional plan, the TVA, did not receive fuller exposition.

Generalizations about a book so wide in scope and incidence are highly precarious. Certain conclusions, however, stand out. First, planning is nothing new—people have planned ever since the world as known from day to day was reflected upon and judged unsatisfactory. Second, planning is no mere technical or administrative operation. Planning in any meaningful sense is not limited to minor economic, social, or governmental adjustments (whatever that means) or manipulations. It is made abundantly clear that cultural and ethical factors are inseparable from any broadscale remodeling of our world. Third, planning involves at once hope and a challenge to democracy.

IT is noted that the most thoroughgoing planners are able to operate because of common agreement upon, or lack of effective opposition to, certain social policies. It is thus a challenge to democracy to discover and capitalize upon areas of potential agreement which will serve to underlay the kind of a social order in which more people will find what to each of them is a more satisfactory world. Planning in a democracy, if achieved, may tend to stabilize an order in which aspects of freedom deemed valuable, but denied elsewhere, can be preserved for those who would avail themselves of them. It is quite possible that the areas of agreement already in operation will serve as basis for some of the program proposed in the book.

The importance and despair of planners and planning lie in their dealing with ethical materials—man's values and his thoughts about them. Manipulations in this sphere deal with the most precious aspects of man's life—the conditions of his sense of continuing well-being. Yet the postulate of the ultimate conflict of real values, for which there is respectable authority among the philosophers, represents the despair. We therefore cannot claim ultimate ethical justification for our proposals, for there is no such thing. We must content ourselves with purely analytical, contemplative observation and hypothecations about probable future events, criticisms of values in terms of other values, or in the manipulation of men and materials for reasons we do not know and cannot ethically justify. The book's greatest contribution is that of providing case material for the analysis, and precept and example for the manipulation. It was wisely limited to a setting-forth of the issues and an attempt to clarify the factors of the problem. It could not provide the definitive answers, for nobody knows them.

Bounded on the South

"CALL IT FREEDOM," by Marian Sims. (Lippincott, $2.50.)

"Call It Freedom" deals with the problems that confront a young woman with a child who has just divorced her husband and has returned to her Southern home to take up life where she left it off to go to Reno. The writer is also anxious to give a picture of life in a small Southern town and to disabuse her readers of the idea that the South is entirely William Faulknerish.

On the whole the story is pretty grim. With an adequate income, a delightful child, far above average looks, an assured social position, Martha Harvey, the heroine of Mrs. Sims' story, certainly should not be bogged down by life. Her chief trouble is the fact that she has no husband to escort her to the parties given by her clique. The parties, as described, would seem to be of the sort that no normally intelligent person would attend anyway except on a salary basis. "The air," Martha predicts to herself, "would be thick and blue with smoke, Les and Page would drink too much and grow quarrelsome, Jeff would complain about his luck . . . she herself would smoke too much so that her tongue would feel raw and hot; Les would always be short of chips and shying the pot; Ben would put his chips in his pocket and then fumble for them; the talk would be continuous and trivial and occasionally funny."

The lack of a husband was also a handicap in other ways. Martha was, apparently, unacquainted with the approbrium attached to the French word "allumeuse." She permits quite extravagant liberties and then nobly repulses her would-be lover. Ultimately she, again nobly, makes the supreme sacrifice of refusing to elope with the husband of one of her best friends.

While highly moral and "woman's-magazinish" in a way, the author has contrived, possibly in an effort to prove to herself that she has no inhibitions, to insert "sexy" passages in her book that remind one of a certain type of post-war literature. These passages make the book unfit to be left around where there are adolescents.

The characters are well drawn and some of them are sympathetic. The relationship between the mother and her son is a particularly delightful one. Mrs. Sims writes easily and effortlessly. Her principal trouble was that she had nothing to say.

ALEXANDRA BROWN.

"BLACK EARTH," by Louis Cochran. (Bruce Humphries, Inc., $2.50.)

The setting of this share-cropper yarn, laid in the deep South, is well depicted in the first few chapters but the story peters out into a gay ninety "meller-drama" with a Volstead era flavor. The delineation of character, though carefully developed, concerns the usual roles of stern parents, bootlegger, prostitute, the hardened banker and young people tempted to do wrong in order to more quickly achieve advancement in society.

The conflict of generation against generation is portrayed in the well-worn way. The hopelessness of life for the share-cropper is rather intensely pictured. Cochran may be one of our coming writers, but at present he lacks the finesse of artistic restraint. His knowledge of the South is freely shown in the background of a previous book, "Flood Tides," and this present work, "Black Earth" is worth reading, in part, for a study of the problem of the Southern share-cropper.

Washington's Summer Entertaining Devolves Upon Congressional Set

Diplomats Keep Busy With Trips, Entertainments

Soviet Envoy, Wife Guests of Parkers at Dinner in Mayflower.

THE AMBASSADOR OF PERU, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, will leave about June 23 for Eaglesmere, Pa., where he has taken a house for the summer. He spent last summer there also.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky were guests at a dinner dance given last evening at the Mayflower by Mr. and Mrs. George B. Parker in celebration of the latter's silver wedding anniversary.

The company also included Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Richberg, Miss Josephine Roche, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan and Mr. Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William G. Chandler and Mr. and Mrs. John Sorrells, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leech and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morrison, of Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. John Meilink, of Cleveland, and Mr. Westbrook Pegler, the widely known columnist, with Mrs. Pegler.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten Ponthoz, will entertain at dinner on Tuesday evening. He will go to New York later to meet Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, who is returning from Europe on the Normandie on Thursday.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, is spending the week-end in New York. He will return on Monday, but will go back to New York later in the week for the dinner which he will give on Thursday evening in honor of Miss Hope Jackson, whose marriage to Mr. Patrick Garvan will take place on Saturday.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich are in New York, where they went to bid bon voyage to the former's sister, Donna Guiana de Suvich, who is returning to Italy after a visit of several weeks here. She is accompanied by the children of the Ambassador and Donna Matilde. The latter, with the Ambassador, will leave from New York for a trip to California, returning to Washington shortly after July 4.

The Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite, has returned from Chicago, where he went to make the commencement address at Rosary College. This college specializes in the teaching of Gaelic.

The Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila, expects to leave about July 1 for a vacation in Europe.

GARDENS in Washington and its vicinity grow even lovelier and become retreats from the warm weather as the summer progresses. Mrs. Merle Thorpe was photographed in the garden of her home on the Rockville pike, where she and Mr. Thorpe frequently entertain at outdoor garden parties, which have become justly famous.

Garden Party Given By Mr., Mrs. Welles For Hulls, 300 Guests

THE OXON HILL, MD., home of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles was the scene of a large garden party yesterday afternoon. Among the more than 300 guests, there were many high ranking colleagues of Mr. Welles in the State Department, including his "boss," Mr. Cordell Hull, whose appearances at social affairs are rare. The latter was accompanied by Mrs. Hull.

There were also many Maryland neighbors of the hosts among the throng of diplomats, "cave dwellers" and Army and Navy officials. Mr. and Mrs. Welles have a handsome residence on Massachusetts avenue, but prefer to spend most of their time at their Oxon Hill home, which is modeled after an English country house.

A large table, with a silver tea service which glittered in the sun, was set up on the table, and cakes, sandwiches and drinks were served during the afternoon.

White House Season Over, Court Departed

Diplomats Leaving Also, but Capitol Hill to Be Occupied Indefinitely; Senate Wives to Have Picnic Wednesday.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With the White House social season completely closed, with members of the Supreme Court away from Washington until fall, and with the diplomats, one by one, rounding out their plans to spend the summer away from the Capital, it looks as if it's up to Congress and the Cabinet to keep the social calendar filled for the next few weeks.

Ask almost anyone up on the Hill where he will spend his vacation when—and if—Congress finishes business, and he will look at you mournfully, shake his head and say he hasn't made any plans yet. The Speaker and the Vice President, however, haven't let the long session interfere with their vacations. Mr. Bankhead had a ten-day rest not long ago down in Alabama, and the Vice President will leave today to spend a few weeks down in Texas.

Fishing's fine this time of the year around Uvalde, home town of the Garners, and that may be the chief reason the Vice President and Mrs. Garner decided to pack up and go. When they will be back, nobody seems to know. "In two or three weeks," was the answer I got from his office yesterday. But more than likely the weeks will slip into months, and the months will slip into fall before he's seen around the Senate again. Washington summers never have appealed to Mr. Garner, and rumor around the Hill has it that ever since the fishing season opened he has been impatient for school to be out.

Wives of Senators Hostesses at Picnic

If their husbands are going to be here through the sweltering days of June and July, some of the "Senate wives" have decided to make the best of it. On Wednesday of this week members of the Senate Ladies Club, whose husbands are members of the Jefferson Island Club, will be hostesses at a picnic for other wives of Senators and two Cabinet wives—Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, whose husbands were once in the Senate.

Among the hostesses will be Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes and Mrs. John H. Overton. According to plans, the party will meet at 10 o'clock at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, board a Department of Commerce boat there, and cruise on down the Chesapeake Bay to Jefferson Island, where the picnic will be held. Around 4 o'clock, the party will return to Annapolis, on their way back to the Capital.

Cabinet Members and Wives Have Few Summer Plans

In an average summer all members of the Cabinet and their wives are out of the Capital by the latter part of June, but this year they seem to be staying around longer than usual. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull haven't yet divulged their vacation plans, and neither have the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper nor the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson.

Mrs. Morgenthau has gone to New York to spend the summer. The Secretary of the Treasury went with her, but he will return to Washington by plane either today or tomorrow, and has taken a suite at the Carlton for several weeks.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace are still in town and haven't any immediate plans for departure, and the Secretary of the Interior, having recently purchased an 80-acre estate near Olney, Md., will spend most of his leisure time there.

The Attorney General hopes to be able to leave the latter part of this month to join Mrs. Cummins in Europe, where they will spend some time traveling on the Continent before returning to the United States in late summer or early fall.

Attorney General To Entertain Friends

Men and women of the press will be guests of the Attorney General this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at his home, 2700 Tilden street. It seems as if members of the Fourth Estate are having more than our share of entertainment these days. First, there was the dance at the White House on May 29. Then, the past week, there was the garden party honoring officers of the Newspaper Women's Club, given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Tomorrow members of both the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club will be guests of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson at a party at Dower House in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt, and on Wednesday, June 23, the Women's National Press Club will have a dinner at the Washington Golf and Country Club in honor of its new members and the women in Congress.

Former Cuban Envoy To Be Married This Month

From Cuba comes news that Dr. Guillermo Patterson y Jauregui, who had feminine hearts a-flutter all around Washington when he occupied the Cuban Embassy on Sixteenth street, is to be married the latter part of this month. His fiancee is Senora Concha Ernandez, widow of Senor Sanz, of Havana.

Soon after the ceremony, Dr. Patterson and his bride will leave for Mexico, where he has been assigned to a new diplomatic post. Senorita Olga Patterson, who is now in Washington visiting the Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco and his daughters, will go to Mexico in October to join her father. Mme. Ernest Schlatter, wife of the Attache of the Swiss Legation, is another daughter of Dr. Patterson.

MISS DOROTHY RAMSPECK, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, Ga., knows the lush gardens of the South, but also finds those in Washington alluring.

MISS PATRICIA GREEVER, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Paul Greever, of Wyoming, who is seen in the garden of her home in Chevy Chase, has just returned from Missouri, where she attends St. Stephen's College.

MISS SARAH DAVIS, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Thomas F. Davis, shown in a lovely "still" in the garden of her home on Whittier street.

Miss Essary Wed To Mr. Ansell, Jr. At Bride's Home

Mgr. O'Dwyer Officiates; 25 Guests Attend Ceremony.

AN ENGAGEMENT announced on Friday culminated in a wedding yesterday morning at 11:30 when Miss Annabel Forman Essary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, became the bride of Mr. Samuel Tilden Ansell, jr., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Samuel T. Ansell, of Washington. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 3121 Newark street, with Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, of Catholic University, officiating.

It was a family wedding, with the 25 guests limited to relatives of the bride and Mr. Ansell. The former had as her attendants her two sub-debutante sisters, Miss Peggy Essary, who served as maid of honor, and Miss Helene Essary, the bridesmaid. Mr. Burr Tracy Ansell served as his brother's best man.

The drawing room, hall, and dining room were decorated with vases and bowls of white peonies and roses. Palms and ferns flanked the improvised altar in the drawing room, where the ceremony was performed.

Heavy Satin Gown Worn.

As the wedding march began, the bride came down the winding stairs and entered the hall on the arm of her father. She wore a gown of heavy, cream colored satin made with long sleeves full above the elbow and a tunic ending in a long train. Her tulle veil fell from a single cap trimmed with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet

Roosevelt's Son Is Kept Busy Attending Parties

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., who is spending a few days as a guest at the du Pont estate on Owl's Nest road, Greenville, Del., finds this business of getting married includes more pre-nuptial parties than he probably expected.

One of the biggest affairs he and Miss Ethel du Pont have attended recently was the dinner dance given by Mrs. A. Felix du Pont and her daughter, Miss Lydia C. du Pont, in the garden of their home, Elton, on the Kennett pike, near Wilmington, Friday evening.

The party was given in honor of Miss Constance Hoyt, sub-debutante daughter of the late Mrs. Catherine Hoyt, who will be presented to society next season, but word comes from Wilmington that the President's son and fiance got more attention than the honoree.

Miss du Pont wore a gown of light blue chiffon and a short white coat. Her fiance wore a dinner jacket. Their wedding—a highlight of the nuptial season—will take place on June 30, and will be "a strictly private affair," according to parents of the bride-to-be. Mr. Eugene du Pont, the father, has already arranged that the State police, the Secret Service and a corps of social secretaries are to check and re-check all persons who are admitted to the church for the ceremony, and to the house for the reception.

Every effort is being made to keep the list of invited guests as secret as possible, in order to prevent some zealous cameraman from trying to persuade someone to carry a tiny camera to the affair. As for gate crashing at either the wedding or the ceremony—well, if money can prevent it, there won't be any.

FRANCES PARKINSON KEYES.

HAVING A BOOK PUBLISHED and a son married in one week is a large order, but that is the schedule for Francis Parkinson Keyes (Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes) of Haverhill, N. H., and Washington.

Tuesday is the publication date of her new book, "Capital Kaleidoscope," which appears in part in the current issue of a nationally known magazine. Wednesday is the date of the wedding of her son, Mr. Francis Keyes, to Miss Louise Burleigh McNeil, which will take place in Boston.

Mrs. Keyes and her husband, the former Senator from New Hampshire, are now in Boston, where they will be until after the wedding. Later, this month Mrs. Keyes will return to Washington to spend a few days.

A modern woman, whose accomplishments as a writer during the past year, have made her acquaintances sit up and take notice, Mrs. Keyes will be very much a lady of a bygone era when she attends the wedding of her son on Wednesday. She will wear a dress of exquisite black Chantilly lace that has been in her family for four generations, and a circlet of diamonds that belonged to her mother. Also, she will carry a black lace fan that is a priceless heirloom.

The dress, which she wears in the photograph above, belonged to her mother, her grandmother and her great-grandmother. Each owner has worn it to the wedding of her daughter. Mrs. Keyes decided to carry on the tradition despite the fact she has no daughters. So on Wednesday, she will wear it to the wedding of her youngest son.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY, as well as the rest of the world, kept its eyes fixed on the skies last week for news of the heroic bird woman, Amelia Earhart Putnam who is very popular in the National Capital. When she comes to Washington, Miss Earhart finds a refuge from too insistent interviewers in the midst of a group of newspaper women in the cozy headquarters of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club in the Admiral.

Talking one day there in an animated fashion to a group of friends it was not aviation Miss Earhart was discussing so vividly, but dogs. It seems she adores dogs and they like her and no matter where she is temporarily, whether at the Hotel Gotham, New York, where she lives with her husband, the New York publisher, or in flying camps preparing for world flights one of her pet dogs is with her. She confessed that one of the achievements of which she was most proud was her ability to typewrite. She has taught herself that art by the one finger route.

Washington itself first became air-minded back in the days when the Wright brothers were trying out their wings at Fort Myer and genial William Howard Taft was President. One of the most ardent fans was Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who drove her electric runabout to the flying field every time the Wright brothers were scheduled to fly.

Tea and what-have-you were served from thermos bottles in the parked electric cars and horse-drawn carriages about the parade ground flying field at Fort Myer so that their occupants might see Orville Wright make a world record flight to Alexandria.

But for a curious turn of circumstance one of the Poe sisters might have been the first woman in the world to fly in an airplane.

Her great interest in these Wright trials convinced one of the brothers that she should be repaid for this belief in his aeronautical prowess by a trial spin with him.

All was set for the high adventure until the other Wright brother objected to the plan. He had promised his fiancee that she should be

Miss Rinaldi, Mr. Leemans Are Married

Bride's Silver Spring Home Is Scene of Ceremony.

Couple, Touring West, Will Reside in New York.

One of the prettiest of the early June weddings took place yesterday in Silver Spring, Md., when Miss Theodora Rinaldi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rinaldi, of Sligo Park Hills, Md., became the bride of Mr. Alphonse Leemans, former George Washington University football star, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leemans, of Superior, Wis.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of ivory duchess satin made on empress lines with a circular train which fell from the skirt. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of Alencon lace fastened at the back with a spray of orange blossoms. She wore a gold bracelet worn by her mother as a gift from her father on Mr. and Mrs. Rinaldi's wedding day.

Jean Fullciniti, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fullciniti, of Washington, and Henry Corvelli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Corvelli, of Washington, were flower girl and ring bearer.

The maid of honor was Miss Lucy Del Gross, of Bangor, Pa., who was attired in a powder blue gown of marquisitte. The bridesmaids were Miss Caroline Leemans, of Superior, Wis., sister of the bridegroom; Miss Virginia Rinaldi, Miss Eleanor Rinaldi, sisters of the bride, and Miss Dolores Perruso, of Washington. They were dressed alike in marquisitte in shades of peach, pink, yellow chartreuse and orchid.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Rinaldi, was in a brown gown of lace. Her large brimmed hat was trimmed with biege ribbon and she wore a corsage of orchids on the tan tone. Mrs. Benjamin Shears, of Superior, grandmother of the bridegroom, was attired in a navy blue esemble.

The best man was Benedict Plotnickie, of South Bend, Ind., while the ushers were Harold Lind, of Superior; Stanley Russell, jr., of Washington; Frank Kavalier, of East St. Louis, Ill., and George Jenkins, of Florida, Okla., all classmates of Mr. Leemans at Washington University.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Rinaldi received with the bridal couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Leemans left last night by motor for the West. Upon their return to Washington the latter part of July they will stay here a few weeks before going to New York. Mrs. Leemans is a member of Delta Tau Delta Sorority and Mr. Leemans belongs to Lamba Sigma Delta. Mr. Leemans received his bachelor of science degree from George Washington University Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Rinaldi gave a dinner party for 20 guests in honor of the bridal party Thursday following the rehearsal in the church.

TOP HATS and TIARAS

by DUDLEY HARMON

WHEN HENRY ADAMS completed his famous "Education," he showed the manuscript to his wife for comment. After reading it carefully, she said "Why, Henry, weren't you ever married?" The diplomat and scholar had completely forgotten to mention Mrs. Adams, to whom he was devoted, and for whom he had erected the beautiful Saint Gaudens memorial which draws so many to Rock Creek Park.

Another much later and much different Capital autobiographer, Maury Maverick, has not made the same oversight in his book "A Maverick American," due to appear June 25 on the bookstands. But he mentions Mrs. Maverick only twice and therefore the public that wants to know what the wife of a widely-known man is like will learn little.

Like her husband, after whose family the unbranded steers of the West were named, Mrs. Maverick comes from a well known Texas ranching family. Besides her two children, a boy, 16, and a younger girl, her chief interest is music. Although she has not played the piano in public for almost two years, she still works at it. Modern composers she likes best, and her favorites are "anything from Debussy up."

"And this will surprise you," said youthful, attractive Mrs. Maverick. "I'm a member of the San Antonio Junior League." In the light of her husband's pronounced liberal views, (some call them radical) people sometimes forget that he came from one of the leading families of the Southwest.

The wife of the Maverick American takes a great interest in politics, although "merely as a wife." She frequently goes to listen to sessions in House and Senate, as well as committee hearings on various new bills.

"But this winter and spring I've been practically living with my husband's book," she said the other day. "I've read every word at least 15 times."

Mrs. Maverick, like most Congressional wives, is going to be brave about a Washington summer and stick it out as long as the House is in session. Then she will return to her home in Texas for a brief stay.

of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Peggy Essary had chosen a pink organdy frock made with a full skirt and short puffed sleeves, and she wore pink roses in her hair and carried pink roses and delphinium. Miss Helene Essary's blue organdy gown was made like that of her sister. She wore blue flowers in her hair and carried a bouquet similar to that of the maid of honor.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast. Mrs. Essary, who is one of Washington's most widely known newspaperwomen, wore a beige chiffon frock and a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Ansell, mother of the bridegroom, had chosen a flowered frock of the same material and a similar corsage.

Leave for Wedding Trip.

After the breakfast Mr. Ansell and his bride left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a gold-colored suit with a long redingote and brown accessories. A corsage of yellow orchids completed her costume. On their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Ansell will reside in Washington, where the former is engaged in the practice of law.

The bride's father is Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun and has been successively president of the National Press Club and of the Gridiron Club. Gen. and Mrs. Ansell are originally from North Carolina. The former is a direct descendant of Samuel Tilden, who helped break up the Tweed ring in New York and was later Governor of that State. As Democratic nominee in 1876 he was almost elected President, receiving the largest popular vote but lacking one necessary electoral vote, thus losing to Rutherford B. Hayes.

The ancestors of the bride were among the settlers of colonial Maryland and several played outstanding roles as generals in the American Revolution.

Wedding Bells Resound In Capital and Vicinity

Numerous Mid-June Ceremonies Include Miss Daniels and Mr. Paulson, Miss Manney and Mr. Fleming, Miss Jones and Mr. Colbert.

"AND ALL WENT merry as a marriage bell."

Lord Byron must have written that in mid-June when the "Wedding March" is the theme song, and everyone seems to be getting married or helping someone else to walk down the aisle.

Anyway, wedding bells were ringing all over Washington and surrounding areas yesterday and last evening, and trains and planes and automobiles leaving the Capital were filled with newlyweds.

Among the weddings yesterday afternoon was that of Miss Emma Louise Danielson, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Wilmot Alfred Danielson, and Lynn Clifford Paulson, son of Mrs. Catherine Behrens Paulson and the late Mr. Joseph Paulson. The ceremony was performed at St. Alban's Church with the Rev Charles T. Warner officiating.

Mr. Walter Nash, organist of the church, gave a recital before the ceremony and played the wedding march and recessional. The altar was decorated with white flowers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a long white marquisette gown combined with Alencon lace. Her headdress was a Mary Stuart bonnet of tulle, with a waist-length veil of tulle covering the face. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Wilson, of Washington, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of turquoise starched chiffon with white shasta daisies scattered on the bouffant skirt, and carried a bouquet of daisies. Mr. Joseph Wright, of Washington, was best man, and Mr. Carl Friend and Mr. Arthur Rogers were ushers.

Only the bride's family and a few intimate friends of the couple witnessed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Danielson, mother of the bride, assisted in receiving the guests. She wore a powder blue-chiffon gown with a corsage of shell pink roses and lilies of the valley.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Paulson left by motor for a trip to Canada, the bride wearing an aqua sheer ensemble with black accessories. After July 15, Mr. and Mrs. Paulson will be at home at 3600 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Manney Marries Mr. Warner Lewis Fleming

Of interest from here to Richmond was the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Altje Alida Vanderburgh Manney, daughter of Mrs. Henry Newman Manney, of Washington, and the late Rear Admiral Manney, to Mr. Warner Lewis Fleming, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hampton Fleming, of Richmond. The ceremony took place at 5:15 at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector, officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Richard Pardee Williams. She wore a beige crepe frock, street length, with a coat and a brown hat, and carried talisman roses. Mrs. Joseph Marsh Ruffin, sister of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant. Mr. Hampton Fleming, jr., of Lynchburg, served as his brother's best man and the ushers were Mr. Joseph Marsh Ruffin, of Richmond, and Mr. H. Ewing Wall, of Quantico.

Following the ceremony there was a small reception at the bride's home. After a wedding trip to Maine, the couple will reside in Washington.

Mr. Fleming, a graduate of Hampden-Sydney College and the University of Virginia, was formerly head of the department of French at Episcopal High School near Alexandria.

Miss Helen Hull Jones Weds Mr. Clifford Colbert.

The marriage of Miss Helen Hull Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marvin Jones, of Washington, to Mr. Clifford Jackson Colbert, son of Mrs. Effie I. Colbert, of Alhambra, Calif., took place yesterday afternoon at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiated at the ceremony. Palms and vases of white, pink and blue snapdragons were used in decorating the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an empire gown of cream lace over satin, with puffed shoulders ending in long, close fitting sleeves pointed at the wrist. Her long tulle veil, of the same shade as the gown, was held by a coronet of seed pearls, and she wore a short face veil until after the ceremony. She carried an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Mrs. Richard L. Tuve was matron of honor, and wore pink mousseline de soie, a large leghorn hat trimmed with intertwined pink and periwinkle blue ribbon, which hung in long streamers down her back. She carried pink roses and delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Crosser and Mrs. George W. Cooper, whose frocks of periwinkle mousseline de soie were made like that of the matron of honor. Their hats were leghorns and they carried arm bouquets of roses and delphinium. Little Elizabeth Ann Stubbs, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl, wearing pink mousseline, made on old-fashioned lines and a wreath of flowers in her hair. She carried a basket of pink and blue flowers.

The bridegroom had as his best man Mr. Maurice L. Gillfillan and the ushers were Mr. Lawrence Tarbett, Mr. George W. Cooper, Mr. Richard L. Tuve, and Mr. Benjamin J. Shelton.

A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony and the couple was assisted in receiving by the bride's mother, who wore a blue and white flowered chiffon, white horsehair hat, and a corsage of red roses, and the sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Mary C. Waldron, whose dress was of aquamarine chantilly lace with matching accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Colbert left for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a jacket suit of brown and white dotted sheer, and white hat and shoes. Upon their return, they will make their home at 4831 Thirty-sixth street.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. W. E. Stubbs, of Cleveland, Ohio, Miss Rosa Poling, of Ottumwa, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. McCartan, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Mrs. Clyde Martin, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Miss Evans Becomes Bride of Mr. Thomas Maholm.

Transfiguration Episcopal Church yesterday afternoon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Zenobia Elaine Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Louis Evans, of Washington, to Mr. Thomas A. Maholm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl K. Maholm, of Indianapolis and Washington.

Rev. John J. Queally, pastor of the church, officiated, and Mr. Jesse Heitmuller, organist of the church, played the wedding music and accompanied Miss Mae Harding, soloist for the event.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white net fashioned with a long train and trimmed at the diamond shaped neckline with pearl clips. Her shower bouquet was of brides' roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Frances Evans, the maid of honor, wore a frock of delphinium blue starched lace, with pink ribbon trimming, and a matching blue horsehair hat. Little Joan Evans, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Mr. Joseph A. Moss, of Memphis, Tenn., was best man. Ushers were David S. Evans, Arthur L. Evans, jr., brothers of the bride, and Russell Peters and Herbert B. Hulse. A reception followed the ceremony, and the mother of the bride, wearing a moonlight beige lace gown, fashioned with a short jacket, received the guests. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Maholm left for a motor trip. They will reside in Washington.

Miss Carolyn Walter Weds Mr. Harvey S. Marmaduke.

In a setting of spring flowers, palms, and candelabra, Miss Carolyn Barbara Walter, daughter of Mrs. Arba M. Earp, of Washington, was married last evening to Mr. Harvey Stanley Marmaduke, of this city, son of Mrs. Joseph Hennage, of Westmoreland County, Va. The ceremony took place at the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. William F. Locke officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, wore a gown of white lace over satin with a long train and a veil of illusion held in place by a halo trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Orton, the maid of honor, wore aquamarine marquisette with a matching hat of tulle and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Myron A. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 934 Kearney street. Mr. and Mrs. Marmaduke left later for a motor trip through New England. After August 1 they will be at home at Colonial Village.

Able Hostess Is Miss Yoeh Wang, Daughter of the Chinese Envoy

MISS YOEH WANG.

By Helen von Ebbighausen.

A SLIGHT MOVEMENT and Miss Yoeh Wing, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, appeared at the center of the drawing room of the Embassy to receive the press. Movement ended there, for throughout this interview she rested poised and serene in a gilded chair.

Miss Wang, however, guaranteed a great deal of activity soon, as she will supervise the change of residence on June 20 from the Embassy to Twin Oaks, the estate of Mrs. Charles J. Bell. After that there will be traveling and escape from the Washington heat.

There is efficiency in the absence of overt gestures in this young woman, and a happiness unknown to the taut-nerved American. There is also an impenetrable reserve and an ability for face-value judgment to make her a sincere, capable and successful hostess for her father.

She does not blanch before such an imposing chart for seating arrangement at official or diplomatic parties as is found in "Mrs. Copeland"s Guest Book." The Chinese solution of seating guests is found not in a book but in a direction. Homes like that of the Wangs in Shankhai face the south "for coolness." At the table ("our tables are round"), she said, it is customary for the honor guest to sit facing the south or the entrance of the house. Opposite him are the host and hostess. Other guests, according to rank, are seated from the number one guest. Since her father's career is identified with the government, official parties in the Wang home have been predominant.

Her father's positino, too, has brought her contact with persons who have been so extensively portrayed as mythical and unreal as to make them seem non-existent to the westerner. Such is Mme. Sun Yat-Sen, the gentle and courageous wife of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, who formed the principles for the Chinese republic and the Nationalist party. Miss Wang recalls meeting her on several occasions before her first trip to America to attend Chevy Chase School from which she graduated in 1932. Also, her interest in "The Good Earth" may have sprung from her meeting with Pearl Buck's first husband, Prof. John L. Buck, of the University of Nanking.

Returning to social practices, the debut of the Chinese girl, unlike a seating chart, is a clean-cut adoption of the western system. Flowers and lovely gowns appear at the debut made at a tea, dance or reception, at home or hotel. Although Miss Wang declined to say so, the purpose of the debut is undeniably universal.

A daughter of a Chinese family usually will bow to others of her set at about the age of 18 or 20. She will not often go on to college.

If she does, she may enter a profession, and it is Miss Wang's conclusion that the proportion of professional women to men in China is about the same as that in the United States. She made an exception, however, of newspaperwomen, who are rarely found on anything but society and women's pages. She is accustomed to facing the camera of the society photographer for the China News who sets off his flash bulb at the larger functions or at weekly meetings of women"s clubs.

Even though the society woman of Shanghai was once enthusiastic about American cosmetics and permanent waves, she has changed her mind and has reverted to the simple coiffure. Miss Wang's black hair is smoothed to the back of her head, ending in several soft rolls behind the ears and along the necklin. "But a number of my friends," she said, "comb back their naturally straight hair and knot it at the nape of the neck."

Simple as the coiffure of the Chinese woman is the mode of dress to which she clings far more than her neighbor, the Japanese women. The high collared, short sleeved, slitted skirt gown is worn both for day and evening with the use of a more elaborate material for evening.

Miss Wang, who on this day wore a sheath of wine colored ribbed silk, spoke of stopping in Japan enroute to the United States this last trip. There in the industrialized cities of Kobi and Yokohama she saw nothing but western dress.

On only one occasion, and that for but "two minutes," has Miss Wang ever worn anything but her native dress. Then it was upon the persuasion of Miss Isobel Farrington, of the Chevy Chase School, that she slipped on a western style evening gown.

And if one romanticizes, her setting should be a garden with ponds and graceful trees. Twin Oaks, which the Wangs have taken for a year, will supply the lawns and gardens which Miss Wang admitted she has missed. Soon after they move, Miss Wang with her sister, Miss An-Fu Wang, and the Ambassador plan a trip. The itinerary is as yet indefinite, but it will probably include a visit with relatives on Long Island where there will be swimming and other sport.

Thoughts of Miss Wang and of active sport are incompatible. But that is a trick of the western mind which insists upon wide differentiations abetween America nd the China of today.

That does not mean that all the mystery of the Orient has vanished. Miss Wang's eyes expressed that. They have a trick of turning fathomless on the occasion, perhaps, of a politically shaded question. Otherwise they smile, and only her face is active as she sits and walks with little movement. She is rested and serene. And Yoeh, her name, means "happiness."

FORMER PUPILS of Mrs. Samuel Middleton and the late Samuel Middleton, of Gunston Farms School, Centerville, Md., felt a personal interest in the birth of triplet girls to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Middleton last week. Many of them had known "Bob" Middleton at the school. He is now an instructor at St. Albans, the National Cathedral School for Boys. The news of the birth of the triplets was an exciting moment in Commencement Week at the school and students and faculty now refer to the three tiny girls as "our triplets" with much the same pride as the Canadian community holds for the Dionne quintuplets, which have brought fame and fortune to their country.

There is a general feeling of pride at St. Albans at the present time, too, over the fact that out of all the distinguished graduates of the class of 1902 at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., the Rev. James Henderson, chaplain of St. Albans School, has been chosen to deliver the baccalaureate address. Furthermore, James Henderson, jr., only son of Chaplain and Mrs. Henderson, is graduating with high honors accorded himself by his fellow classmates in that he is president of the Senior Senate and of his class.

Young Jim grew up on the St. Albans campus and when he returns to Washington he is popular in the younger set here, for he dances well and is quick of wit and of a friendly nature.

THE EARLY BIRD of Congress is certainly Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts. Five o'clock is not at all an unseemly hour for her to arise; and while most of Congress is settling down for another forty winks she is walking to the Capitol to get a start on her mail before an early committee hearing.

Last Tuesday morning Representative Rogers was up at five in the morning and, looking like a summer morning herself in a cool print gown, she walked to the Capitol and was entertaining 100 delegates to the W. C. T. U. convention at breakfast in the House Restaurant by 8 o'clock. She found a fellow member up and about at the time, Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and coaxed him in to address her delegates, adding to their enjoyment greatly thereby.

The delegates found flowers on the table, too. When Mrs. Rogers arrived ahead of them they were lacking. But she sent attaches scurrying off to the nearest market and by the time her guests arrived the blooms were contributing their share to the morning festivities.

ments between foreign countries are apt to be followed by much mutual wining and dining among their envoys stationed here, and in case of political disagreement, there is often a significant avoidance of one another's social affairs.

Take the Italian-British controversy over the coronation for instance. Mussolini's Ambassador in Washington was conspicuous by his absence at the huge garden party given by Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay at the crowning of King George. On the other hand, the British were everywhere at the dance given by Ambassador Fulvio Suvich at the Italian Embassy three evenings later.

The luncheon that the Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich gave last week for the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff closely followed the agreements reached between Mussolini and Gen. von Blomberg, Minister of War for Hitler.

D. C. Woman Attorney Teaches Girl Pipers

Making and Playing of Ancient Instruments Taught by Miss Margaret Lambie to Girls' Groups at Church and Y. W. C. A.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The shepherd's pipe, an instrument older than the Psalms, is having a vogue in Washington and a woman attorney is largely responsible for it. There are no legal technicalities involved and no patent rights to be considered however, it is just that Miss Margaret Lambie, is teaching the making and playing of the pipes to a group of girls at the Y. W. C. A., and to another group at All Souls Unitarian Church.

Two years ago, in Baltimore, Miss Lambie went to the Y. W. C. A. and there learned to make the pipes, taking it up as a simple and interesting recreation. A short time later she went to her summer cottage on the Thousand Islands and there, from a bamboo fishing pole, made more pipes. Friends wanted them so, following the code of the pipers, she taught them to make their own, rather than giving them one of hers.

All summer the plaintive, penetrating note of the little bamboo pipes could be heard through the woods and over the water.

On her return to Washington, Miss Lambie volunteered to teach a group at Y. W. C. A., so the girls, could instruct the Y camps. There are many things to be learned from the making of the simple little instruments aside from music lessons, says Miss Lambie. It requires care and patience to make smooth the inside of the bamboo pole, file down the cork for the mouthpiece and place the little holes where they should go. Careless workmanship means a rough tone.

Pipe Tells Tale Of Owner's Work.

Each piper makes her own, and, if she has done a poor job, she is constantly reminded of it. The making of the pipes also revives ancient craftsmanship in a modern age, it gives opportunity for the development of artistic talent, for they may be painted and elaborately decorated if the maker desires, and, in tuning, the ear is trained to hear half tones and quarter tones, such as are familiar only in the notes of birds.

There is music written especially for the shepherd's pipe and, in England and Wales, there are pipers guilds which maintain high standards for membership. There are also many professional groups in England, Italy, France and Germany.

Last summer Miss Lambie went to Europe to attend the international law conference in Paris, and those who know her fondness for her little pipes, suspect the opportunity to study with a member of the English guild, also had something to do with her trip abroad. She went to Boston not so long ago and there talked with Verne Powell, flautist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who used a pipe he had made from a fishing pole when he played in a rendition of "The Messiah."

When Mrs. Richard Sallet, wife of the Attache of the German Embassy, heard about Miss Lambie's work she and her young son, Karl, both came to her to learn the pipes and now mother and son play together and the younger children are beginning to learn, too. The instrument is popular with the younger people of Germany, Mrs. Sallet says.

Groups Will Play During Summer.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Peacock, in Takoma Park, will be a center for the activities of the group from the Unitarian Church this summer. Four of the five children in the Peacock family play. Mrs. Peacock, who is a musician, will be qualified as soon as she has made her pipe—so far she is not, in this respect, a member in good standing. Her daughter, Jean, who has just received the golden eaglet of the Girl Scouts, will be in charge of the pipers during the summer, under the general supervision of Miss Lambie.

Among the girls who have been active at the Y. W. C. A. are the Misses Bertha Hays, Mabel Holgate, Catherine Richardson, Harriet Kusenberg, Louise Danforth, Nancy Kerber, Virginia Brown, Nancy Childs, Virginia Grove and Doris Bruyninck. Several of them will be at Kamp Kahlert during part of the summer and there will be music in the air when the pipers gather there.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

TAKE the "me" out of membership and the—well the first three letters—out of helper and you have the slogan Phyllis Fergus Hoyt has given the National League of American Pen Women for the period of her administration as its president.

Her visit here during the past week marked the conclusion of the season's program for the national organization. Her service to the league in the first year has exemplified the unselfishness suggested in her original little slogan. She has been a devoted president. Every month she has come from her home in Chicago for the national board meeting here on the first Monday. She has visited 60 branches of the league in 30 states, traveling 30,000 miles to do it.

In Bismark, N. D., it was the first time anyone from the national board had visited the branch and there was literally a band out in her honor—a band of Indians. A pow wow was in progress with five tribes participating when she arrived in Bismarck, and the Indians were brought to the hotel to present an entertainment in her honor. They were there in full regalia, from papoose to chief.

MRS. HOYT was one of three women from outside the State of Minnesota selected for the recent program of the Minneapolis Tribune conference. One of the fruits of her visit there was the acceptance by Carol Brink, winner of the John Newberry prize for juvenile books, of the chairmanship of the league's branch for writers of juvenile stories.

During the past year the National League has added 230 new members and four new branches, located in Detroit, Gulfport, Miss., Asheville, N. C., and Palm Springs, Calif. They will all be functioning by fall. Other new branches which are under way include one to be formed in Portland, Oreg., one in a city in New Jersey, not yet decided; Brooklyn, Erie, Pa., the Canal Zone, Lincoln, Nebr., South Bend, Ind., and Holyoke, Mass., where Mrs. Edith Scott Magna, past president general of the D. A. R., is the moving spirit in its organization.

THE LEAGUE will not meet again until the first Monday in October when the national board will convene at the headquarters in the Willard Hotel. The biennial convention here is set for April 23, with delegates expected from 88 branches over the country.

Mrs. Hoyt, who has been the guest of Mrs. Lewis Bartlett during the last few days of her stay in the Capital, goes from here to visit branches in Connecticut, Maine and New Hampshire, then to an alumnae reunion at Smith College, her alma mater, and finally to Bristol, Vt., for the remainder of the summer. She will be there for the authors' breakfast of the Bristol branch of the league, which she was responsible for organizing and considers particularly her home group. It has just 18 members, but they are all active ones. Dorothy Canfield Fisher and Robert Frost have been invited as guests of honor for the breakfast.

PHYLLIS FERGUS HOYT.

Thallis—one of Mrs. Hoyt's children, has been with her on this trip. The name, Thallis, incidentally, is formed of the first letters of that of her late father, Thatcher Hoyt, and the last four of that of her mother, Phyllis.

* * * *

MRS. CHARLES H. BAIR, new president of the Sunshine and Community Society—yes, you're right, I mean Esther Bair, and that's just the point. She is so well known as Esther Bair, the charming dramatic reader, that when she uses her husband's name, friends who know her by her professional one have to stop and think who it is.

The society has another member of wide reputation as a gifted singer, Marie Deal, and when someone speaks of her as Mrs. W. W. Deal there is always a puzzled moment before she is identified as the same Marie.

Not only are these two talented women in the society's membership but the one is president this year and the other vice president. The club work is just another branch of activity in which they are cooperating, for they have frequently given programs together in past seasons.

Your Shopping Reporter

A Reporter, a Columnist or an Artist has every right if he believes in the overwhelming importance of his ego to contemplate and express it as much as he likes without becoming a public nuisance; but I suppose he has no right to expect, and less right to demand, that other folks be, in any way, sympathetic or interested. In regard to this column, however, I have reason to believe that "youse" readers are interested in what your old Reporter, Columnist or Artist (there's a bit of controversy over just what I really am) has to tell you about grand Apparel Shops, Beauty Salons, Gift Shops, Play Gardens and in-and-about-town Dining Places . . . and so I continue to expound weekly. But the fact that I'm so thoroughly sold on my contributors makes, what I write below, a sincere and truthful account of the "wares" they sell.

Crisp Dresses, Light Make-up, Neat Coiffure, Manicured Nails Contribute to Coolness

Bath a Day Is Sure Way To Stay Cool

Eau de Cologne Applied Often Keeps the Skin Fresh.

Ice Rubs, Using Cotton, Also Considered Aid for Hot Day.

By Carolyn Abbott.

THE GIRL who wants to be attractive on a hot summer day when the thermometer reads 95 degrees should remember that the cooler she looks the cooler she will be.

How to be attractive under such circumstances is the problem. A clean, crisp dress, fresh, light make-up, a neat coiffure and carefully manicured fingers will make those who look at her forget the uncomfortable heat.

The foundation for a cool, clean person is a warm, soapy bath each evening and a cool shower in the morning. You can't let even a day slide by without an all-over bath, if for no other reason than to keep yourself acceptable to others. Nothing handicaps a woman's charm or social acceptability more than even the faint odor of perspiration and a certain amount of this is necessary for a healthy body. Besides soap and water, a good deodorant should be used frequently.

Dusting Is Refreshing.

Follow your bath or shower with plenty of fresh powder, dusting it all over your body. It will absorb moisture, give the skin a cool freshness and make swollen feet comfortable.

Have an entire change of clothing after your bath or shower, especially underclothing and hose, if you would be the essence of freshness.

Stay fresh during the day by thoroughly cleansing your face, neck and arms several times and putting on new make-up. Never apply fresh powder and rouge over old make-up. If you have trouble keeping your face powdered, try liquid powder. This is especially good for oily skin and comes in several different shades, suitable for different complexions.

Use Skin Freshener.

Eau de cologne is convenient to have in your desk drawer or on your bathroom shelf. Soak cotton with it and use this to freshen up your neck and arms when they feel hot and sticky. If you are traveling, even in dust-proof air-conditioned trains, it is not easy to keep spick and span and on long motor trips it is a major problem. Wise travelers depend on the generous use of fresh-smelling skin tonics and eau de cologne.

Put your skin tonics in the refrigerator now and keep them there until fall. When the nights are hot, ice cold skin tonic will do you and your skin more good than a lukewarm one.

Give yourself a weekly mask treatment and finish this with an ice rub. Do not put ice directly on your skin. Rinse off the mask, cover face and throat with a piece of moist clean cotton, then rub the ice over the cotton. Do not rub for more than 30 seconds.

Simple Coiffure.

Decide on a simple coiffure for summer. One that is always calling for attention gets to be a bore and a bother for you and your friends too. Don't comb curls and fluff down around your neck for they look hot and are hot. A good permanent with short, upturned curls is more practical for summer, if it is becoming, and may be easily arranged after a quick swim or ride in an open car.

There are many types of sunburn preventatives and oils for quicker sunburn, but there is no really successful freckle preventative. If you find yourself with an unbecoming crop of these little brown dots, use a freckle bleach, such as lemon juice, hydrogen peroxide or specially prepared cream.

Teen-Age Etiquette

NEVER are manners more important than when you're in your teens. You may be labeled for life by your behavior then.

Thoughtful gestures like saying good-night to the sponsors at the school dance put you on the nicest guest lists in town.

But see that boorish young couple racing out without speaking to the sponsors! They'll be a long time living down their reputation for bad manners.

How does the assured young man act at a formal dance? If his allowance can stand a corsage for his partner, he tactfully asks the color of her dress, has the florist choose harmonizing flowers.

He sees that she meets the stags. If there are no programs he swaps dances for her. He dances with other girls he meets if his date is taken care of.

The girl who knows just what to do or say goes on to the dressing room while her partner checks their wraps. When she returns she introduces him to any of her friends he does not know. She pays little compliments, "How well you dance!" whenever she sincerely can. When others pay her compliments she graciously says, "Thank you. I'm glad you think so."

She waits at the door while he brings his car around—which he does without yelling at some bungling driver: "Where d'ya think you're going, flathead!"

Our new 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens," is an up-to-the-minute guide. 1937 manners for dates, movies, restaurants, cars, drug-store snacks as well as formal dinners. Separate sections for boys and girls.

GINGER ROGERS is an example of summer loveliness in her fresh tennis outfit of pastel silk and her cool tennis shoes that have no tops or tongues. Freshness and cleanliness are essential for all women whether shopping, dancing, relaxing or playing.

Careful Planning Suggested For Preparing Outdoor Meals

Servantless Housewife Must Use Care in Selecting Her Foods and in Saving Steps for Outdoor Meals.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT'S MIGHTY EASY to talk about the romantic allure of eating in an orchard, but what about the lady who had to do the work? Of course, in the novels, there's always a maid or man in uniform at beck and call. But life for most of us is without benefit of servants and so turns out to be as pleasant and attractive as we make it by our own personal efforts.

So, unless careful planning in advance is done, outdoor dining is likely to be a lot of extra work. The first thing, of course, is to have family co-operation in fetching and carrying, but if you're a clever lady, you have that already.

The careful planning makes all the difference. A delicious but simple menu that can be served easily is only half the story. The other half is in the selection of accessories that will be gracious but yet uncomplicating. For we think that it's as important to serve beauty as vitamins, and the picture of the home we create depends on just such details as the setting of a table. But that can be done in one or two trips from the kitchen just as well as in 20.

This season the blues seem to be taking all honors in styles for outdoor table settings. And Mexico is supplying the brightest ideas for open-air dining. These two style currents get together in many a smart scene we've seen. For there's a good deal of blue and white Mexican pottery about now—it's striking against a solid blue cloth with a centerpiece featuring yellow and that goes for anything from lemons to snapdragons!

Blue Pottery.

We've found blue notes in other pottery besides Mexican. A very deep solid blue in a dull mat glaze ware is news in heavy provincial French pottery. This should influence informal ware in seasons to come. It is perfectly swell on a bare white wood table, or on plaid or raffia mats.

Watch also for square plates in heavy peasant type of pottery, because they're appearing in important exhibitions and promise to make their way in the informal world.

California modern influences are gaining in table fashions—the clear Pacific colors and very fine shapes are responsible, plus the amiable serenity that these pieces seem to have. In short they manage to be modern without being jittery.

Pottery plates with fruits or vegetables for their designs are quite something too for a table out of doors. And don't forget how cool and crisp glass plates are for the outdoors, especially sea green or ice blue.

Your Sunday silver is too nice for the yard, and the kitchen silver is entirely too much a part of the daily grind. Most decidedly something gay is in order for outdoor dining—even if you can only efford very cheap red handled knives and forks, get them for your ensemble. But if you're feeling a little flusher, consider that new plastic handled cutlery, the kind with transparent handles. Very swish and new looking for an informal occasion and practical too.

Informal Linens.

As for linen, just about anything goes except white damask. And we'd suggest thinking more than twice about your laundering facilities before you commit yourself to a full sized cloth when there are so many lovely doilie sets that are all set for good times, so gay and starched looking are they.

For all over cloths, fish net is popular because it washes so easily and looks so cool and fresh. And it's fun to use sheer-easy-to-launder dress fabrics for summer table cloths too—the south sea florals, for instance, as well as the pleasant sprigged cottons. Better weight the hems to keep the wind from flipping them up inopportunely.

Or you can do without a tablecloth entirely if the table top is good enough to be seen. Then use very bright solid color napkins fringed all around.

Harmonizing Furniture.

We think the table should be on speaking terms with the house. That's why we like a white painted table with a white house, though white furniture goes equally well with certain other types of houses, too. The stores have perfectly lovely white tables in both wood and metal, round ones with umbrellas up their middles, oblong ones without umbrellas but with glass tops. Or if you can't finance anything so fancy as that, maybe the man of the house can make a table with plain boards and a pair of sawhorses . . . why couldn't they go stylish with a coat of white paint? Chairs add a lot of comfort to the occasion, and we advise them if they're at all possible. But we warn you—those marvelously spring metal chairs will keep the gang sitting around the table till midnight if you don't show them in. If you can't afford chairs, benches will do.

If you're a modern soul, no doubt nothing but chromium and fabricoid make you happy. There's plenty of it to choose from . . . all very, very comfortable and smart-looking. Or maybe you like the substantial heartiness of rattan—that, too, comes in dining tables and chairs.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Asks What Sort of Letter to Write Girl He Met Once Four Years Ago and Can't Forget.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About four years ago I was introduced to a girl in my home town, which is about 200 miles away. I liked her very much but before I had a chance to tell her so, I was offered a job here and I have been here ever since. Since then I have never met a girl I liked more than her, and for that reason I have always thought of her.

* * * *

A couple of weeks ago I went home to see my family and while there my brother told me she always inquires about me and told him to tell me to write to her. I wanted to see her but had no good excuse to call on her, so I didn't. I'm not much on letter-writing and I wouldn't know how to compose a letter of that kind. I would like to write her a nice, friendly letter but I don't want to flatter her or make a fool of myself. And yet I would like to give her a hint that I do care for her. Can you please suggest what I could say in a letter to her? Thanking you kindly, I am,

BASHFUL.

DEAR BASHFUL: You say you "had no good excuse" for calling on the girl, even though you wanted to—and so you didn't. Don't you know that the best, the finest, the most impressive reason in the world that a man can have for calling on a girl is the fact that he is attracted by her and wishes to know her better? What you should have done while visiting the old home town was to telephone the girl and ask permission to call. Once in her company you should have told her quite candidly that during your four years in Washington you hadn't met a single girl to compare with her. You might have said, "It's a funny thing but I never think of Blankville without thinking of you—though we met only once before I left. I would like to know you better and I want you to let me write to you after I go back. If I do, will you answer my letters?"

It's a man's pleasant prerogative to take the initiative in cultivating a woman's acquaintanceship. Nothing is more becoming to a man than the courage to show marked interest in a woman who happens really to interest him. It is a gallant and manly gesture; not in the least compromising or foolish. To show sincere interest is not to flatter; although there is no reason why you shouldn't pay flattering court to a nice girl whose natural charms compel your special attention.

Since overtures toward friendship must be launched in a letter of your own writing, I suggest you phrase it somewhat as follows: "Dear Jane Blank: I feel I know you so well, while really knowing you so little, that I hardly know how to address you. But in my mind—and I have thought of you often since our first (and only) meeting four years ago—you have always been just 'Jane.' So I trust you will forgive my presumption in daring to use the less formal approach. I wanted to telephone you while I was home two weeks ago, and more than once started to the telephone with that idea in mind but I guess I just didn't have the courage to go through with it. You might have been busy, or you might have forgotten me, for I don't think it likely you would have remembered me as well as I remember you, and I couldn't risk the disappointment of being turned down if I asked to see you.

"Anyway, I've always wanted to know you better, so I'm taking the long chance of asking you to write me in the future. How about it? Will you be so kind? Is it a go? You have no idea how much it would mean to a Blankville boy who has been transplanted to Washington, and who can never hear too much news from the old home town. Life in Washington, as you probably guess, is very different from life at home. When I first came here, etc, etc.," then you can launch into a chatty description of your work, your lodgings, your social life and the presumable advantages and disadvantages of living in the Nation's Capital. By building the main body of your letter about such subject matter, you can bring it to a close on a rather impersonal, though sincerely friendly note; again expressing the hope that she will be so kind as to correspond with you.

I think the idea of correspondence is much more easily approached, inasmuch as she is a citizen of your home town and on friendly terms with your family, not to mention the fact that she has already shown some interest in yourself and has even expressed in a roundabout way her desire to hear from you. Indeed, you might have been the best of friends these last four years, if you hadn't been thinking and acting more like a Victorian spinster than a twentieth century young man.

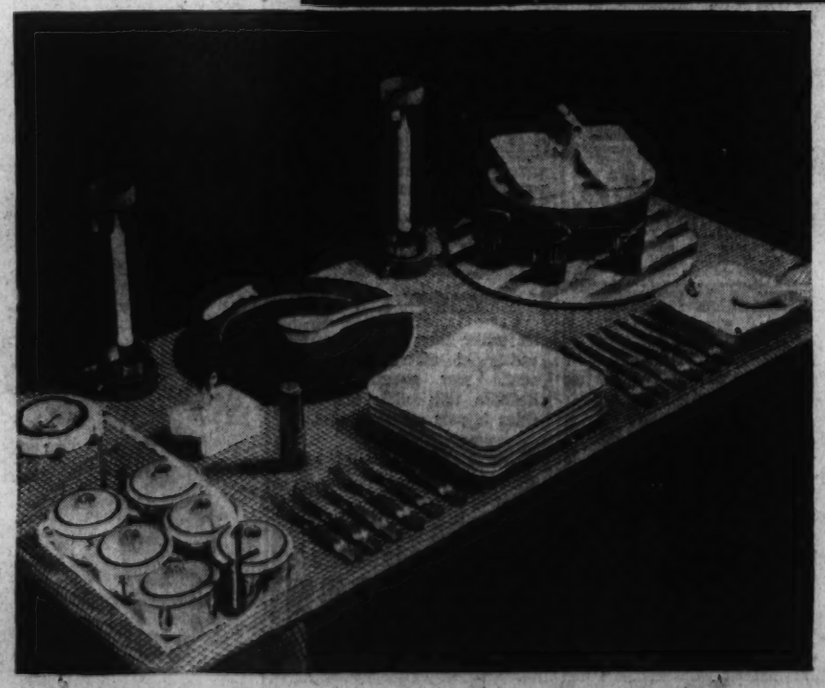
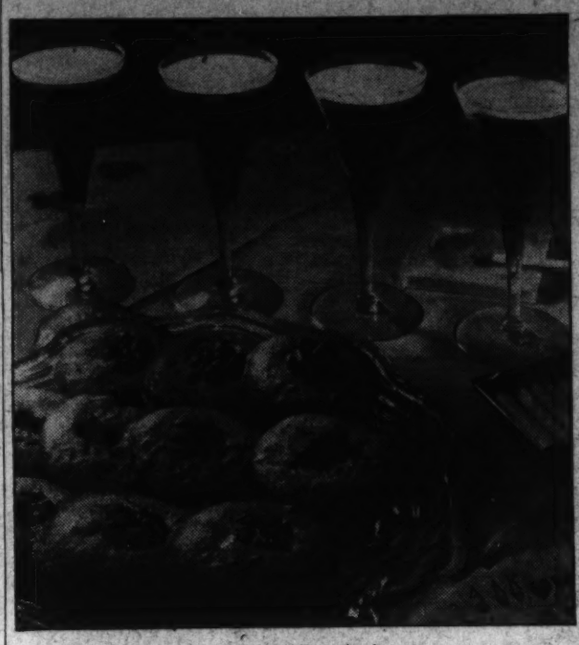
Outdoor Eating Pleasant for Summer



A BRIGHT printed tablecloth in shades of green and covered soup bowls in light green are cool and refreshing looking for a garden table (above) of rattan with chairs to match. Fish net dyed in a crisp deep color for summer use makes a cool looking, practical covering for a table set outdoors. This one (left) has the fish net dyed in deep blue and the settings emphasize blues, reds and whites. Keep your special linens, china ware and flat silver for outdoor eating separate from other accessories so they will be new for meals in your own back yard.



IF YOU have trouble finding light refreshments to serve at your afternoon bridge club or when a few friends drop in to chat—something that has not been served before—try wine cocktails with honey wine drop cakes as an accompaniment. This combination is refreshing as well as appealing. Dough for the cakes may be made in advance and stored in the refrigerator for future use. These may be appropriately served with many beverages and fruits.

Rowing, Collecting Epitaphs, Gathering Maps Good Hobbies

Remember All the Don'ts When Out in a Boat; Country Churchyards Are Fascinating; Old Charts Attractive on Walls.

By Rae Lewis.

NOW IS THE TIME:

To row, row, row your boat. Either rowing or canoeing is excellent exercise and grand fun, but there are several do's and don't to bear in mind. Don't think that, because it looks easy and, perhaps, you know how to swim, you should venture out alone at first. True, rowing and paddling are easy and quickly learned, but they do need some experienced instruction at first. This applies just as much to adults as to children, and especially in the waters around here. The Potomac has tricky currents that are not to be toyed with, but foolhardy bravery is just as much out of place on the Tidal Basin as on the bay or the ocean.

Taking for granted, however, that you will be sensible, the rest is simple. The big DON'T from here on is not to be too enthusiastic or you will have painfully definite remembrances of your fun for some time afterwards. Rowing and paddling seem to call on muscles that have hibernated since birth and while this is the reason they are such good exercise, it is also a reason to be cautious at first. Don't forget the possibility of sunburning, either, and if you don't want to get into trouble with yourself on this score, take your fun in the early morning and late afternoon. Hips, back, stomach, legs, shoulders—all tighten up and the benefit is general and pleasant from these summertime activities.

To haunt country burying grounds. Call them cemeteries or graveyards or churchyards, as you will, but they are still the happy hunting grounds of epitaph hunters. This quiet and harmless hobby engages many people, including some famous names, and it is not unusual to see a friend unexpectedly head for the nearest cemetery, only to wander about examining stones. In olden days, frankness among the bereaved seems to have been a universal trait and one indulged quite freely.

Epitaphs go back to ancient times, for someone wrote concerning the heroes of Thermopylae:

"Go tell the Spartans, thou that passest by,
That here, obedient to their laws, we lie."

Before that, inscriptions had been written by the Egyptians on their coffins and sarcophagi. Cemeteries in this country, however, yield many inimitable verses of praise or of opprobrium, warnings, sorrowings, and many which seem to be only a flowery outpouring of literature. Since it is impossible to ascertain the authorship of the majority of epitaphs, in entering them in notebooks about the only usable designation is that of geographical location.

There is some specializing in epitaph collecting, though. Principally, the two kinds consist of those of famous people or ones which are curious, unusual, or humorous. On Shakespeare's tomb at Stratford-on-Avon, are these lines, properly falling in either classification, for they denounce anyone who violates his burying place:

"Good frend, for Jesus' sake forbeare
To digg the dust enclosed heare;
Blest be ye man yt spares thes stones,
And curst be he yt moves my bones."

* * * *

To mop up on maps. Or, at least to make a start, for almost anywhere you go you will find maps for sale in bookstores, novelty shops, department stores and elsewhere. Antique shops are sometimes gold mines for old maps of all kinds—other countries, the United States, States or Territories or particular sections—as well as navigation charts.

Some people lean in their tastes more to road maps beginning from early trails. A favorite kind is the pictorial map showing in tiny pictures or drawings something indicative of each place. These may be of scenic wonders, agricultural products, industries, etc. Most of the national parks have maps which are a combination of relief, road and pictorial features. Genealogical maps are popular, showing the original seats of families or the origins of names.

Navigation charts, both old and modern, are beloved by men the world over, possibly because they seem to tell of far horizons always beckoning to the adventure-minded. John Maloney, of the Red Cross, has the walls of his study papered with obsolete navigation charts. These are principally of Chesapeake Bay and Far Eastern waters around Hong Kong and Shanghai, for these are ones he has sailed. No more attractive decoration for study, library, game room or boys' room can be devised than these charts or maps of the continents. They may be cemented on, or mounted on wall board or proper backing if valuable. Shellac or varnish both protect the maps and give a finished appearance.

A choice map of mine is a souvenir of the famous Antoine's in New Orleans. A map of France, it shows the origin of every wine of the country.

Cocktails, Honey Cake For Snacks

Guests Sure to Enjoy This New and Delightful Combination.

Can Be Served Quickly on All Impromptu Occasions.

By Rebekah Blake.

ENTERTAINING your bridge club or a small group of friends on summer afternoons is fun, but what to serve is no joke at all. In fact, hot weather refreshments often present quite a problem. Especially if what you had planned on serving your next turn was the selection of the last hostess, before you had a chance at it.

A hundred and one ideas may come to your head, but when further thought is given to them, the salad or dessert you were considering is stale news, too heavy for only a little snack or too rich for Mary and Jane to eat since they are dieting.

Why don't you serve a summer beverage and little cakes? You think that sounds like old news until you taste, or even hear about, wine cocktails served with honey wine drop cakes. The combination is just right, so prepare plenty, as seconds and even thirds will be called for.

If the occasion for refreshments is an impromptu one, these cocktails and cakes may be prepared in a jiffy, as all of the ingredients are kept nearby on the pantry shelf.

If men are included in the gathering of guests, and they probably will be if you are spending the season at some resort, they, too, will enjoy these "eats" more than any other light afternoon snack that you could quickly concoct.

A wine cocktail affords not only a delicious beverage, but combines ingredients that are healthful, and when served with the appropriate honey wine drop cakes, they make a very complete and delightful afternoon or evening refreshment combination.

The dough for the drop cakes may be stored in a refrigerator and used over a period of time. Thus, you may have, at a moment's notice, freshly baked cakes that are ideal accompaniments for many beverages and fruits.

Wine Cocktail.

2 eggs
2 teaspoons powdered sugar
1 cup domestic Port wine
½ cup brandy

Break eggs into a shaker glass. Add sugar, brandy, wine and cracked ice. Shake well and strain. Serves four.

Honey Wine Drop Cakes.

½ cup butter
½ cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
Grated rind of ½ lemon
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3¼ cups cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ cup chopped walnut meats
¾ cup honey
¼ cup domestic Sherry
Jelly or preserves

Stir the shortening until creamy. Beat in the sugar, the egg yolks and the lemon rind and juice. Sift together the flour, salt, and soda. Stir in the chopped nutmeats. Add alternately to the first mixture with the honey and Sherry. Fold in the egg whites, whipped stiff. Drop by teaspoon onto an oiled cooky sheet or inverted baking pan, keeping the cakes 2 inches apart. Decorate each cake with nutmeats, or a spoonful of jelly or preserves. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 F. for about 12 minutes.

Wine Fruit Cocktail.

1 cup peeled seedless grapes
1 cup scooped cantaloupe
1½ cups diced apples
½ cup sliced bananas
1 cup red wine

Mix fruit together, add wine and let chill for two hours. Serve in cocktail glasses. This serves eight persons.

Dishcloths Plus Ribbon, Elastic Make Sun Suit

A DURABLE SUN SUIT may be made for your child from a dishcloth, ribbon and elastic for about 14 cents and very little sewing. With eight pairs of dishcloths from the 10-cent store, four yards of 1½-inch wide ribbon and a paper of one-half-inch elastic, you may make eight sun suits—total cost, $1.10.

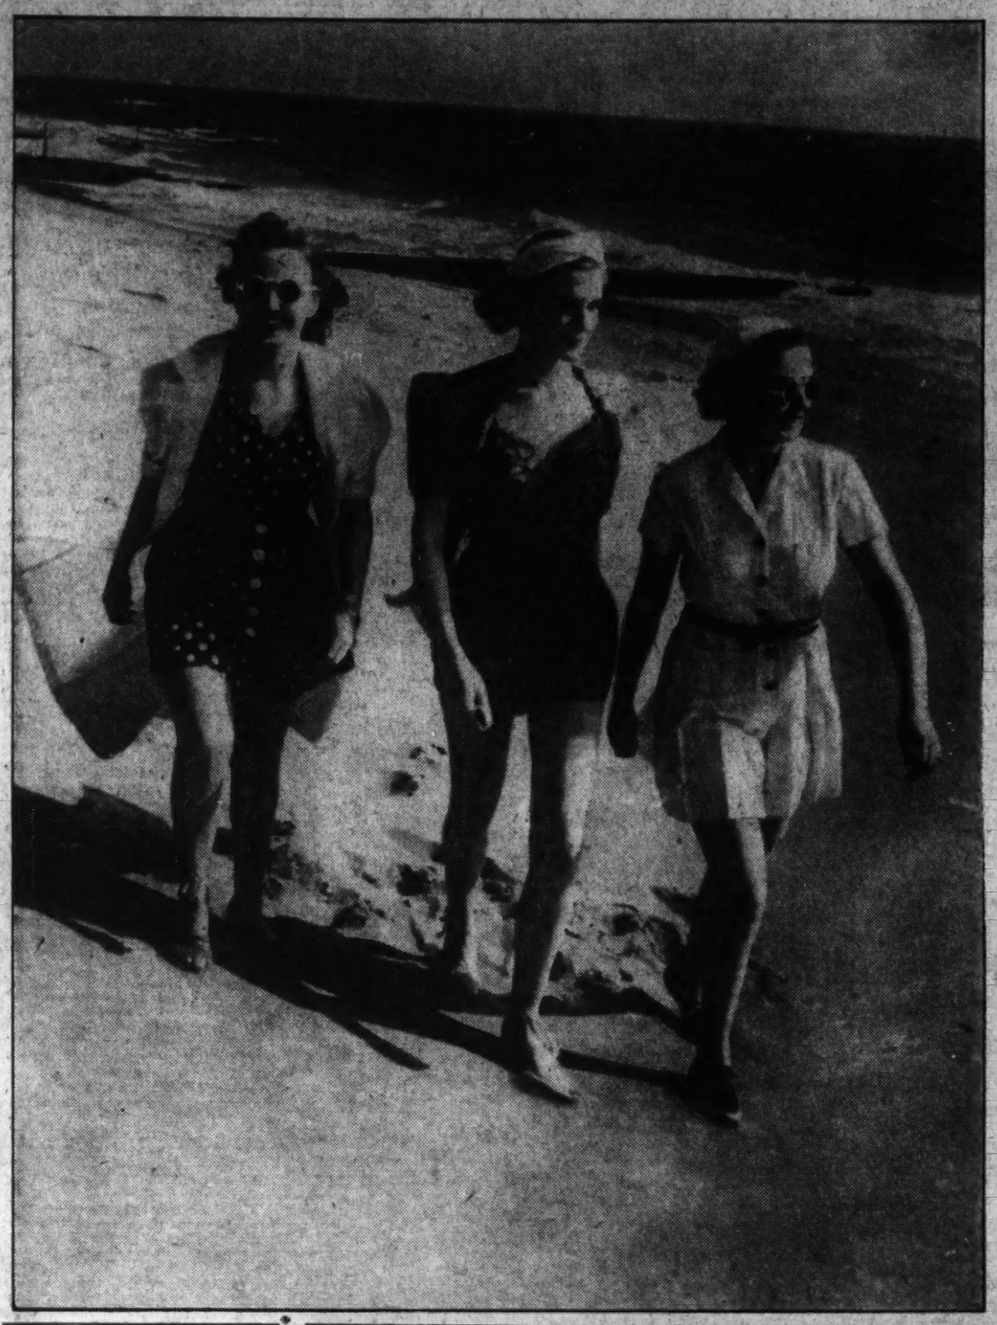
For making one of these suits turn one corner of the dishcloth down 1½ inches. Tack it firmly in the corner with stout thread. This loop will be on the right side of front of the suit to carry the neck ribbon. Now fold over the opposite corner into a three-inch flap, and cut this off across the long edge. This will be the crotch, so to be comfortable it should be at least three inches across.

Hold up the second dishcloth against the child's back and mark the amount the seat will need. Next snip off a three-inch triangle at the lower corner, as with the first cloth and join the two cut edges of the cloths together firmly with a wide double-finish crotch to withstand a lot of wear. No threads should show.

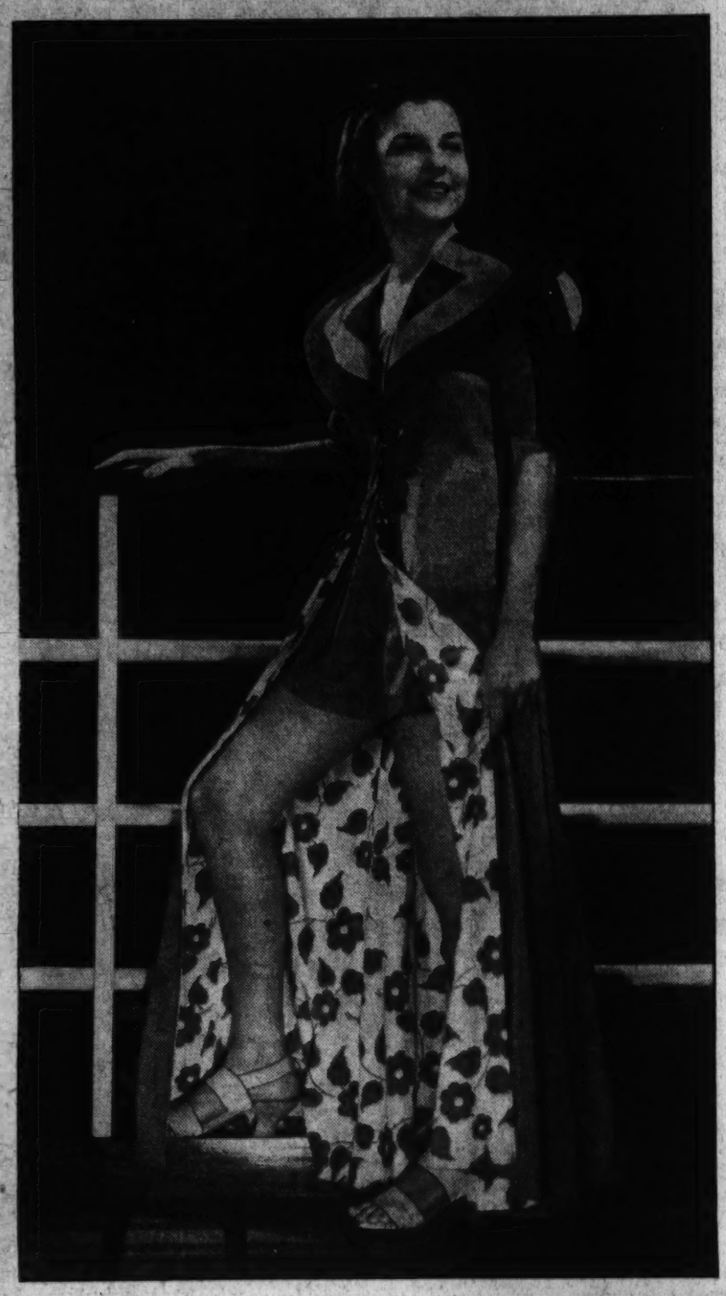
The side corners of the cloths give a chance for graceful little wings at the hips. Run a stitching across these side corners, fastening front and back together about two inches in from the corners. Now cut across the back where you have marked, leaving the top edge of the seat raggedy.

Next weave a foot of strong elastic through the raw edge of the seat about an inch down and pass each end through the front cloth. Knot each end into a one-loop bow on the front of the suit at each hip, to prevent it slipping through the coarse mesh of the cloth. For the neck, take 18 inches of ribbon and run it through the dishcloth under the flap, tying the ends behind the child's neck.

Durability and Versatility Are Stressed in Play and Sports Clothes This Summer



WHETHER you engage in active sports or watch from the sidelines, your clothes are an important part of the game. Smart, comfortable and appropriate costumes share equal honors for contestants and spectators. Striking contrast in shades of green make the long beach coat below, of cotton broadcloth, especially chic. Note the gay printed lining and wide revers.



A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 12.

YOU MAY consider it a heck of a time to talk about furs, but I'm sorry—I can't help it. Furs have been the big news of the week, what with the huge annual fur show raging madly at the Waldorf Astoria, and the fur forecast for next winter being hurled at our devoted if somewhat addled heads.

And the fur news is really interesting. The newest note I saw is the use of skins horizontally rather than vertically. To offset the chance that this will make the wearer look a few pounds over her normal tonnage, shoulders in the new coats have been built out enormously, making the hips look pretty meagre by comparison.

Another new trick is a very small collar—or none at all—and this wrinkle was thought up because hair is expected to be worn longer next autumn, and fur coat collars play merry hob with the back locks, as we all know. Another reason is that the jewelers have persuaded furriers that they should allow neck jewelry to show. The finger-tip length seems the most popular caper at this stage of the game, especially in such furs as baum marten, blue fox and oppossum.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — Who should be sitting together in the Savoy Plaza's cocktail lounge the other afternoon but Loretta Young, of the movies, and Peggy Hopkins Joyce, of everywhere, and a striking light-and-dark pair they made, Peg, who has completely recovered from the tragic sleighing accident in Switzerland, was flashing a large part of her noted gem collection, but La Belle Young confined herself to one modest sapphire ring . . .

Local temperance folk are jumping up and down in anguish these days. Our erudite governor, Mr. Lehman, has just signed a bill permitting the sale of beer from push-carts in New York City this summer, beginning July 1. This is a somewhat strange dido, in a way, since many of our Keep the City Pretty forces have been trying to drive our traditional push-wagons entirely off town highways . . .

Saw Mary Roberts Rinehart, who has written darn near as many books as I have columns, in a book shop the other day picking up some hot-weather reading. A noted writer of thrillers herself, Mary Roberts was choosing detective stories! . . .

Just happened to think that the only girl I know named Maisie is Maisie Collins, wife of one of our best newspapermen. Maisie is very blonde, has bright pink checks, talks in a husky baritone and has for a pet one of the ugliest bulldogs that ever scared an infant. Maisie and said dog form one of the real sights of the old Chelsea district, on the West side.

My cheriest word of the week was that Marlene Dietrich is studying American history at night at the Hollywood High School, preparatory to becoming a citizen. I'll bet that history teacher is the envy of the faculty, and I only hope he can keep his mind on his dates of famous battles!

THE two bathing suit ensembles and smart play suit, worn by the trio in the beach scene above left, are made of cotton, attractive in color, smart in styling and sanforized shrunk for successful tubbing. For summer and sultry days in town or country, Vera Borea designed the nautical version of a two-piece frock (left), in white linen with navy linen bands and belted with navy suede.

Garden Coats Are in Vogue

AS PICTURESQUE and quaint as an old-fashioned print is the tight-waisted, full-skirted garden coat recently added to the wardrobe of Joan Crawford. Fashioned from glazed chintz in Delft blue, the coat is printed in simple, dotted pattern. It has a square neck, trimmed in organdy ruching, and the same organdy borders the short, puffed sleeves. There is a sunbonnet to match, but Miss Crawford prefers to hang hers over her arm, rather than protect her already glorious sun tan from the rays that will make it even darker.

Gold fingernails are the latest things for formal wear, according to Virginia Bruce. With a molded formal of black crepe, trimmed with gold ornaments at the shoulders and waist, Miss Bruce wears her fingernails gilded in a matching tone of gold. With light-colored satin she prefers fingernails of silver color.

For a novel touch on that new golf outfit, take a tip from Madge Evans. Madge replaced the buttons on a new, linen ensemble, with bright colored bone golf tees. They serve the same purpose as buttons, and are twice as chic and novel.

Something new in play suits for summer was worn recently at her Santa Monica home by Florence Rice. Featured from a yellow flowered chintz, the suit consisted of pleated shorts, a bandana blouse, a short bolero and a long full skirt. The skirt, when removed, proved to be of the wrap-around variety; and thus adaptable to use as a cape, tying at the neckline with a large and perky bow.

FOR summer sports, these grege colored plus-fours of corduroy, topped by striped sweater, combining red, green and blue; designed by Carven, Paris. Multicolored printed pique fashions the beach coat and bathing suit (right); note the knee-length flaring princess coat.

Beach Wear Increases In Color and Modesty

Bold Prints Are Popular for Swim and Sun Suits; Shorts and Shirts Favored for Tennis; New Culottes Are Different.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

PLAY CLOTHES should play the game! And it is well to remember when assembling your summer sports costume wardrobe that fun for you is work for the clothes you play in. For active sports, action sleeves, action-back frock tops, full skirts, shorts of good length, and the like, are necessary for comfort; they should also tub well. All of these requisites are as important as smart styling. The more successful the outfit, the oftener you will wear it—consequently discrimination should be used in planning and selection.

To Swim or Suntan.

Beach wear for surf or turf is gay, colorful and interesting this summer. As paradoxical as it may seem, while a minimum of material is utilized in the majority of cases, the result is more modesty than has been the case in past seasons. Coverage is considered smart for seagoing costumes! Knitted bathing suits, those of lastex, cotton and printed silks share honors equally for those who go down to the sea for real swimming. For followers of the sun, brilliant cottons, silks and synthetics are much in evidence, usually in bold, splashy printed designs.

In the realm of dressmaker beach and play fashions Heim has created a number of spectacular models—they are as exciting in color theme as they are in styling, and the fabrics are interesting cottons. He not only is responsible for the brief bathing suit topped by a long coat, but was the first to make use of the large splashy prints as a medium for their smartness. These amphibious cottons, equally at home on land and in water, lent color and swank to beach scenes on the French Riviera and, it is predicted will add gaiety to American beach scenes this summer.

For Tennis Enthusiasts.

For tennis, there is a race for supremacy between pleated shorts and kilted skirt dresses, with the short and shirt ensemble at the present time being the victor. Bicycling which is again a great American pastime influenced no doubt by the bicycle fashions of the gay nineties in modern versions, has brought the culotte back into prominence. The newest culottes are usually one-piece interpretations of daytime frock length. An innovation is the one-piece dress with talon fasteners both fore and aft, so the costume may be transformed into a culotte for bicycling or tennis.

Play ensembles of cotton, silk or the acetates are more popular than ever this summer, not only because they are attractively styled and fashioned of colorful materials, but because they serve for so many occasions. They consist of shirt, shorts and wrap-around skirt; sometimes the shirt and short are in one piece. As a golf costume, enthusiasts of this game acclaim them an ideal outfit. Another interesting feature—they may be worn to the office or for general daytime wear. Designers seem to have this idea in mind when creating a lot of the play clothes this summer, as they never have been so versatile before. Using dress materials for sports clothes does the trick!

Chic Nautical Costumes.

If you sail your own boat, or if you are only a passenger, the correct attire, according to summer, 1937, fashion dictates, is slacks and shirts. Many of these come already matched in smart sets, made of denim or heavy linens. You also may assemble your own idea of an ocean going nautical costume, choosing shirt of material and color in contrast to the slacks, topped by a seaman's coat of a third color, if you so desire.

THE WOMAN'S ANGLE

New Charm Formula Is a Triumph for Intelligence.

By Malvina Lindsay.

THE SUBJECT of how to be fascinating will not down. And one of the best contributions made to this pressing problem so far comes from the Independent Woman, official magazine of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Moreover, the formula is offered by a man.

• • • •

Charm, says F. Fraser Bond, former professor of journalism at Columbia University, in an interview with Dorothy Dayton, is largely "savoir faire." This he defines as "the principal by-product of real education. "Savoir faire" translated literally means "how to do," points out Mr. Bond. This quality, he believes is the foundation of poise, without which personal adequacy is impossible.

• • • •

The bedrock of any effective personality, according to Mr. Bondi is self-confidence. But self-confidence on a sound base, not swank. Then Mr. Bond goes on to say something for which he should be knighted, to wit: "Without a background and well stocked thinking mind, no adult woman is going to interest any mature well developed man after the first half hour. A really educated woman is always interesting and charming."

• • • •

'Manner' and Manners.

Though he insists on an abstract basis for feminine attractiveness, Mr. Bond is specific about the outward manifestations of it. Of these he lists first, manner—the way in which a woman carries herself, walks, wears her clothes. "Manner is intangible," he says, "but it rests on a woman's general assurance that what she is doing is right and acceptable. She has standards—and she has confidence in them. Even the way she holds her head grows out of that inner confidence."

• • • •

The second requirement of Mr. Bond's is good diction and third (Shades of the copybook!) good manners—which he defines as "the imagination to put one's self in the other's place. "Tact is the mother of charm," he declares.

• • • •

This last sounds happily like some of the things girls were told in the good old days when it was not considered a disgrace to be a gentlewoman. In fact, Mr. Bond's entire program for feminine self development strikes down to the fundamentals of mind and spirit culture that became outmoded after Hollywood began to manufacture its synthetic glamour.

• • • •

Circe Loses Ground.

From the dour Puritanical dictum of "Handsome is as handsome does," on which members of the past generation were reared, women in their pursuit of beauty during the last two decades have swung to the other extreme. With naive childishness they have thought charm was a bauble to be bought from the cosmetician or the modiste or copied from the movies.

• • • •

But now there are evidences on all sides that they are discovering they have been sold short on outward glamour—that it is merely light without heat. They are relearning that unless they cherish their intuition, their imagination, their inner intimation of spirituality, which have been their greatest source of magnetism through the ages, they are building houses on the sand. They may be remembering that Tannhauser in Richard Wagner's Opera surrendered temporarily to the revelers in the Bacchanale, but that in the end he was won by the call of the Heavenly pilgrims.

Exposition Influences Fashions

PARIS (AP).—Suits with the "exposition silhouette" are streamlined for smooth sailing through sightseeing crowds. Thanks to practical Paris dressmakers, women may nip in and out of tight places this summer with comparative ease.

These adaptable "tailleurs" are snug at the shoulder, tight at the hip, and straight of line. The formal type is all black. Other models have striking contrasting jackets, a tube-shaped jacket that reaches well below the hip is of light blue, while its skirt is black and its blouse blue. Another model has a slim jacket in apple green shantung, worn with a black wool skirt and a white shantung blouse.

A long tube jacket in cerise wool, of the vivid shade called "shocking," is featured by Schiaparelli with a black wool skirt.

A light blue linen dress is topped with a wine red jacket, and finished off with a sports hat in light blue felt banded with dark red grosgrain.

New linen and wool combinations are noted in checked wool jackets and plain linen skirts, the jackets bound with the skirt material. Stripes and plaids are played up smartly in suits that are closely fitted at the waist.

Swanson Firm Display House To Open Today

Moss-Designed Dwelling Features First-Floor Bed Chamber.

Many modern builders have eliminated from their minds, the conventional, some say "old-fashioned" idea that in planning a home all of its bedrooms should be located on the upper floors. While all are agreed that upper stories of a house are ideal for location of some bed chambers, others say that this should not be a hard and fast rule in floor arrangement and that there is a great deal about first floor sleeping accommodations that recommend them to today's home buyer.

A ground floor bedroom is very valuable in residential planning from several standpoints. Chief among these is its convenience for an invalid in the family who may be unable to climb stairs to upper sections of the house. Such a room again is welcome as a place of repose for the overnight guest without disturbance to the rest of the family.

This up to date feature in home construction has been effectively carried out in the latest Washington Post Display Home, being presented for inspection today at 19 East Woodbine street, Chevy Chase, Md. Here, provision has been made for a charming first-floor room and bath that can fulfill the foregoing requirements, or is suitable as a delightful library, or den.

This home, designed by Louis R. Moss, well-known architect, was built by the M. B. Swanson Construction Co., and features its attractive and successful development of Woodbine for which a program of 23 fine homes was planned and of which number 19 have already been sold. Bounded by Leland and Woodbine streets, Connecticut avenue and Brookville road, this inviting subdivision is close to The Hamlet and other fashionable communities and has all the same advantages, social and architectural restrictions that they enjoy.

The Post's Display House has an excellent location affording a view of the entire smart residential neighborhood. Its site is a gracefully terraced lot adorned with pretty shrubs, evergreens and shaded by numerous trees. The terrace planning has been effectively carried out by brick walls in the front and rough stone borders in the rear. Following the stately Williamsburg Colonial design, the dwelling is of white painted brick with which the variegated slate roof of green and purple tones and black trim contrast most effectively.

Center Hall Type.

A wide, cool and shady porch extends the entire front of the ground floor. The bright basement has plenty of room for servant's toilet, laundry, heating and air-conditioning units and ample space for a recreation, or clubroom, if such is desired, there being a broad open fireplace in one wall of the section. There is an attached garage adjoining the basement.

The first floor is laid out according to the much desired center hall arrangement, with living room extending the entire depth of the structure at the left and dining room, efficient "all electric" kitchen and library, or convertible bedroom, with convenience of arrangement, beauty of design, lasting construction and modernity of equipment of foremost consideration.

These ideas are reflected from

News Notes From The Architects

The annual meeting of the Washington chapter, American Institute of Architects, was held last Thursday at Columbia Country Club in Chevy Chase, Md. F. V. Murphy presided and the meeting began with what Harry Francis Cunningham termed "the finest dinner the chapter has enjoyed in many years." The program included a review of the year's activity and recommendations for future action in the form of reports of all committees as presented by the various committee chairmen. Interesting high lights of the institute convention, held this month at Boston, were recounted by L. M. Leisenring, A. M. Kastner and E. P. Schreider.

To William O'Neill, student of architecture at Catholic University and resident of Washington, Harry Francis Cunningham, on behalf of the American Institute of Architects, presented the institute medal for excellence in student work for the past year. Following the presentation, chapter elections were held. Officers for the coming year will be: Louis Justement, president; Maurice S. May, first vice president; Leon Chatelain, jr., second vice president; Julius Wenig, treasurer; E. P. Schreier, secretary, and Carroll Meigs, assistant secretary

Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury Department, Procurement Division, is receiving the felicitations of his friends and associates on his recent election to fellowship in the institute. The award of fellowship was accompanied by a citation for excellence of work produced under Simon's direction and for his long service in the capacity of supervising architect.

Washington chapter received with regret news of the resignation of Alexander B. Trowbridge, former president and long active in chapter affairs. Trowbridge's professional practice will necessitate his being away from Washington so much as to make impractical further association with the local chapter.

Brick Flat Buildings Will Be Erected Here

To Build Apartment.

A two-story brick apartment will be constructed for Mrs. Dora Poretsky at 1600 Fairlawn avenue southeast costing $40,000. Harry Poretsky is the builder and George T. Santmyers, the architect.

Moderate Payments Less Than Average Rent for Apartment.

George Burns and Gracie Allen are familiar to millions as stars of the screen and radio, and House & Garden shows them in their real life roles as Mr. and Mrs. Burns, in the delightful surroundings of their new Beverly Hills home. Here, they are discovered playing backgammon in the charming eighteenth century living room, while other views give a glimpse into the nursery of their two adopted babies, Sandra and Ronnie; the library; the dining room; a guest room, and Gracie's own dressing room.

The house itself is a modification of old California Monterey architecture. It is of brick and wide pine boards, painted white, and has a balcony that stretches across the entire front, with all the upstairs front rooms opening onto it.

The interiors, decorated by Harold Grieve, reflect Mr. Burns' love for old furniture. In the living room, eighteenth century English mahogany is set against a background of sage green, dusty coral and off-white. The dining room also has its handsome mahogany of the same period, but here the setting is Ming yellow, lacquer red and green. The walls are lime green, the Chinese rug yellow, the curtains of gold brocade with red trimming. And all through these rooms are charming old accessories —Lowestoft china, Bristol glass and old English china.

Fond of Soft Colors.

Other rooms express Mrs. Burns' fondness for soft colors. Her guest room is done in pale pearl gray and yellow. The nursery is delightful in blue and white, with white organdie curtains and a charming chintz valance. And her dressing, with its walls papered in ivory, delicately patterned in gold, shimmers in the reflected light of its mirrored dressing table and mirrored wardrobe doors.

A series of photographs taken in the apartment of Joseph Mullen, noted New York decorator, gives a clue to today's manner of getting a home ready for summer in town. Very different is this hot weather scene from the ghostly shrouds with which our mothers draped every stick of furniture and bric-a-brac! Slip covers in summer fabrics lend an air of grace and comfort. Beige, forest green, mint and other cool colors give a sense of spaciousness. The furniture is arranged in flexible groupings, to give maximum seating for informal gatherings and in each room a special sitting group is so placed that a breeze is always available.

Is Wallpaper Year.

A special feature of this issue of House & Garden is a report of the new trends of the season in cool color and summer decoration. According to the editors of this fashion magazine of the home, this is a wallpaper year. The emphasis is on all-over floral patterns, larger motifs and soft, grayed background colors. Fabrics are important: the new prints feature grayed tones, black and other dark backgrounds and large patterns. And specially to be noted is a revival of the use of chintzes and other fabrics for wall coverings.

In outdoor furniture, color is again of prime importance. White predominates in iron furniture, though some very fresh new pieces are painted apple green, bottle green or pale gray—and dusty pink is an effective new tint. Much of the outdoor furniture is sectional. Tables and sofas come apart to be used as smaller units. And what isn't sectional, is on wheels!

Property Value Is Stabilized By Air-Cooling

Obsolescence of Homes Tends to Depreciation of Communities.

Air-conditioned homes in a community are guarantees of stable land values in years to come. This is the statement made by Leslie G. Estep, of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, to builders, architects and utility and finacnial leaders at a luncheon conference on residential air-conditioning held at Lee House last Friday. The meeting was planned by D. A. Dimitry, local branch manager of the corporation.

"Americans want homes of scientific design, of moderate cost, with thermostatic temperature control, adequate insulation and a modern kitchen," Estep said. "Homes without these advantages and without air-conditioning will shortly become obsolete," he declared, "and their high resulting depreciation will pull down the value of the suburb itself."

Estep, assistant sales manager in charge of residential air conditioning for the corporation, stressed the fact his firm is not entering the home-building field in its Kelvin home program, but is only making available to local architects and builders the results of the experience gained by the corporation in three years' research preliminary to supplying the basic specifications for hundreds of Kelvin homes built throughout the country.

"Building today to satisfy the needs of today and the demands of tomorrow," Estep declared, "means better construction, sounder investment, a modern home for years to come, lower depreciation, higher resale value, healthier living conditions, a cleaner home, a more carefree life, and the possession of a nationally trade-marked home."

The depression period focussed attention on the need of modern living at moderate cost, Estep declared. People were demanding new requirements in design, in lowered cost, in mass production, better construction, standards of evaluation, and incorporation in new homes of the newest scientific advances in home construction and development.

Forbidden Colors.

Green automobiles cannot be sold in India—green is bad luck. In Japan maroon cars are forbidden—that color is for imperial use only.

Market Grows For Low Cost, Small Homes

J. J. Cermak Says Boom Will Help Counteract Summer Lull.

The gain of private residential construction over public building has been characterized by a corresponding increase in the erection of small-cost houses, thereby opening a market that has been dormant during the depression years.

J. J. Cermak, secretary of the Structural Clay Products Institute, predicts that this new construction field will do much to counteract any summer lull in the present construction expansion.

"American families are decreasing in size," Mr. Cermak pointed out, "and the aerial residential rise in large cities in coming down to earth and spreading out, with suburban building showing the greatest advance it has experienced in years.

"The small house is in great demand. The Federal Housing Administration, the banks, architects, building and loan associations, contractors and real estate firms are all faced with a call for small dwellings.

"The attractive Cape Cod type of small home is a popular favorite—the adaptation being that of a colonial design—and it is gaining a definite place in the South and the Middle West. At the same time, brick is becoming a favorite construction with builders of the Cape Cod house; durability is sought and brick is unquestioned for its lasting quality.

"The change in the family size has doubtless resulted from a curb on immigration during the past six years. Quota cuts have eliminated a foreign class that favored large families. In addition, the American birth rate has dropped, especially during the depression period."

Paralleling the small-cost house demand is the growing desire on the part of prospective builders and buyers to escape the compactness of city residence, Cermak stated. "Land hunger has reasserted itself—home owners want room, which means gardens and adjoining landscaped lawns and terraces.

"There isn't any doubt but what the most inexperienced builders, the brides and grooms are alert, smart, clear-thinking people who are putting a new and a lasting evaluation upon a home. Americans, from the building viewpoint, have definitely 'come of age.'"

Roads Containing Ochre Safer for Night Driving

Roads made luminous by ochre are being tested in France as an aid to safe driving at night. Luminosity produced by it was first observed when ochre falling from trucks onto the road caused a noticeable glow at night. The roads now being tested incorporate red or yellow ochre into the road material.

Realty Notes

By

Herbert U. Nelson

Secretary, National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The Home Builders Guild organized in the past few weeks by a group of recognized leaders among the realtor home builders of the country has in it potentialities not only for real usefulness but for serving a function for which we before had no machinery, and which may be very important in the development of a national program of well planned home production in the coming years.

The new guild is an organization of men who build homes for sale, created for the purpose of holding down the cost of homes while maintaining proper standards of construction, design, neighborhood safeguards, and the like. Such an organization is about as close as we can come in the home building field to the organization of the consumer.

The proposal has had a reception that is gratifying and promising.

Costs to the buyer are the consideration that will determine how broad a movement of home building and home buying we shall have. Recently building costs have moved up so rapidly that there has come in many localities a hesitation or even a recession in the building program. Any serious retardation of the volume of new construction would be from every point of view unfortunate. A powerful means to keep costs under control should be opened through effective use of buying power.

The new Home Builders Guild is set up to bring together men who have a direct business interest in getting costs down, since this is the one way they may broaden their market. It is thus an organized group whose interests in this respect are those of the family buying a house for a home. Its usefulness will be measured by the degree to which it can act in this interest.

There are two principal ways in which the new guild may well be helpful to the whole movement toward new home production:

First of all, a Nation-wide group of men of recognized standing as operative builders should certainly be able to set up their own buying arrangements with manufacturers of home building materials. A number of the manufacturers have said that they would welcome a movement of this kind which could attack realistically the factor of distribution costs, which everybody recognizes as one important reason for present costs of home production.

Second, such a group can try to work out with trade unions some fair special conditions and arrangements that would apply to the building of small homes.

The guild has had responsible assurance that such an attempt would be welcomed.

The creation of a small home does not present the same situation as does the creation of a skyscraper. Conditions and arrangements arising from the circumstances, needs, and opportunities peculiar to homebuilding, and particulary arrangements based on the situation with respect to continuity and security of employment, might very helpfully be worked out. Such special conditions are recognized in many phases of industry and business.

Green, White and Sand Good Color Symphony

A bright and cheerful "symphony in colors" is expressed in a living room which has the ceiling finished in sea green flat paint. The walls are flat white and the trim is jade green. Beneath the double windows is a window seat which is finished in emerald green enamel and trimmed in black. The furniture in the room is finished in a sand-colored enamel.

Consider Sewer Depth For Cellar Plumbing

One of the most important things to be checked before starting the construction of a house, and, in fact, before considering the plans complete, is the depth of the sewer in the street. Naturally, if there are to be any plumbing fixtures in the cellar, they must be far enough above the sewer to allow for proper drainage.

220 Employed On Community Development

Buckingham Project Is Providing Better Housing.

Construction of a new large-scale planned community in nearby Virginia has done much to alleviate the problem of unemployment there and has resulted in a favorable increase in value of real estate property in the vicinity. With 220 workmen regularly employed on the project at the present time, it is expected that this number will be greatly increased in the future to permit completion of the development's many buildings by January, 1938.

Buckingham Community, Inc., has announced that the charm of the Georgian colonial architecture prevalent in Williamsburg, Va., will be reflected in its operation in a modern setting, and every effort is being made to make the community blend with the ideals and ideas of the Old Dominion building.

Opportunity Cited.

Allie S. Freed, president of Buckingham Community, Inc., and chairman of the committee for economic and social progress, speaking on the housing and unemployment problem stated:

"The economic opportunity lies mainly in the fact that although the consumer goods industries have advanced greatly, we have allowed millions of our men and billions of our dollars to remain idle because we create such a small amount of capital goods assets. A vast home-building program would take care of the major problem of re-employment. It could, if pursued with proper intelligence, also give gainful employment to millions of our youth who have never been employed privately in any capacity."

Budget Study.

"A study of the family budget gives a clew for the direction that must be followed. A great volume of better shelter and a vast output of food at lower cost to the consumer will provide the major substitution for the present government expenditures."

"The Nation has attained an educational background and a spiritual development that permits the enjoyment of the better and more beautiful things in life. Our people are hungry for them. They plead for better homes in which they may properly develop their educational and spiritual opportunities. But although as a nation we possess almost untold resources in men, money and materials, there has never been set up an integrated industrial and financial mechanism to provide efficiently a new way of living in comfort and happiness that would result from providing proper homes for the neglected 90 per cent. However, this failure in the past is no indication of inability to go forward in the future."

Waterproof Meter Found Convenient

In wiring a new home or rewiring a home already erected, the selection of the most advantageous location for the electric meter is often quite a problem, due to the housekeeper's desire to keep it out of the habitable rooms and yet have it accessible so that the meter-reader may reach it without difficulty.

Electrical manufacturers and the power companies have come to the aid of architects and housewives by introducing waterproof meters which may be exposed to the weather and attached to an outside wall of the house in a nonconspicuous location.

They operate satisfactorily in such a location and are more convenient for the meter reader, saving him time if the occupants are not at home and at the same time relieve the housewife of his periodic journeys through the interior of the house in order that the meter may be read.

Copper, Brass Sales In 1937 Set Record

New York, N. Y.—Sales of copper and brass tubing during the first quarter of 1937 are estimated at 35,000,000 pounds, according to the Journal of Commerce, a record over any preceding year. The fact that building figures as a whole for the same period represent less than the total for 1929 and yet the usage of copper and brass tubing has increased, indicates, the journal believes, that builders are using more permanent materials to meet the new demand for standard construction of houses.

High Backgrounds Bad in Groceries

In modernizing grocery stores it has been found that windows with high backgrounds do not promote favorable displays. It is far more satisfactory if the prospective customer is able to see beyond the merchandise displayed in the window and into the interior of a well-arranged store.

A window completely shut off from the store usually has a detached look and lacks atmosphere. There should be a low background, the top of which is not more than 44 inches from the store floor.

This is one of the ways in which stores may be modernized to contribute to the convenience of customers and employes, to provide satisfactory merchandise display, and to increase profit possibilities.

FHA Mortgage Report Cites Added Safety

Number and Value of New Houses Show Decline.

A gain of 51 per cent in the volume of residential mortgages accepted for insurance by the Federal Housing Administration during the first five months of this year, as compared with similar months of 1936, is reported by Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald.

Mortgages accepted for insurance from January 1 to June 1 amounted to $197,732,626. For the same months of last year these amounted to $130,427,142. May totals of $44,387,426 exceeded May of last year by approximately $8,000,000.

Cumulative totals for the two and a half years of operation show that the administration has accepted for insurance approximately 200,000 residential mortgages amounting to more than $806,000,000.

Foreclosure Listed.

In making public figures on the volume of business transacted, McDonald also reported that as of June 1, debentures have been issued covering insurance on 26 properties which have been foreclosed by mortgages and turned over to the administrator.

"Operations under the insured mortgage system, during the first five months of this year increased rapidly," McDonald said. "While the number and value of mortgages accepted during May declined slightly, as compared to April, this appears to follow the general country-wide fluctuation in residental building during the period.

"Building permit figures for May are not yet available, but every indication points to a slight decline in the number and value of new houses built.

14 Properties Sold.

"On the 26 properties which have been foreclosed and conveyed to the administrator, debentures of $110,489 have been issued to mortgagees. Fourteen of these properties have already been sold, and debentures on five of the properties, in the amount of $20,667, have been retired, leaving debentures outstanding as of June 1 in the amount of $89,822.

"Although we realize that the period through which we have just passed was in no sense a difficult one," said McDonald, "I believe the foreclosure record of the administration demonstrates that it is reducing the hazards in home buying, making it a safer undertaking both for the borrower and the lender.

Colored Glass Is Used For Interior Decoration

The use of glass in interior decoration is growing in popularity, particularly in kitchens and bathrooms. Plate glass is now made in various tints, such as ivory, gray, jade, black, white, burgundy, orange, etc., and blends well with most building materials.

It retains its bright, clear surface even after many years of service. In kitchens, particular housewives choose it for walls and work counters, as it is readily kept clean and does not absorb odors or moisture.

Anchor Essential On Pitched Roof

Too frequently in the construction of houses the matter of tying the roof together is ignored or neglected. A pitched roof exerts a pressure downward and outward. Unless these tendencies are checked the roof will spread, causing the outer walls to bulge and damaging the interior finish.

The best place to tie the sides together is at or near the lower ends of the rafters. If this is not possible, then the two sides of the roof should be tied together at the "knees" by collar beams.

The closer these beams can be placed to the bottom of the rafters, the better the tie will be and the less likelihood there will be of the roof's spreading.

Yellow and White Good Bathroom Color Style

A bright, clean color scheme for the bathroom combines jonquil yellow for the ceiling with the walls in white gloss enamel. Woodwork is finished in black enamel. The floor is black and white tile covered with a dark orange rug. The shower curtain is also dark orange.

Sylvan Setting Features New Display Home

Unique Colony Constructed in Wooded Area Near Rock Creek Park.

Emulating Uncle Sam in preserving the natural beauties of Rock Creek Park, the planners of an unique residential colony in a large wooded area adjoining this tract have succeeded in retaining the sylvan charm in which it abounds.

Tall trees of white oak, beech and hickory have been kept to give their shelter to home-loving folk. Brooks and streams are given free course, some of the larger ones having been spanned by rustic bridges, and here and there a rock garden has been planned.

Boxwood hedges have been used in lieu of fences in the division of the sites, and there are no alleys or detached garages. Cleverly placed indirect lighting has been employed.

Of the 70 dwellings built and sold in this locale, one of the finest examples is The Washington Post Display Home. Located at the intersection of Western avenue and Arcadia place, in Chevy Chase, D. C., this residence is built by Claude G. Johnson and presented by Thomas J. Fisher & Co., Inc. It is a part of Barnaby Woods, long popular as a community for pleasan living.

The home is graceful in its Georgian architecture and sturdy in construction. The first floor is well planned and includes a cozy paneled den, or library, with bookshelves, a model "electric health kitchen" and a spacious living room. Adjoining is a large screened living porch overlooking the lawn.

Upstairs are three large, airy bedrooms and two complete tiled baths. Comprising the entire third floor is a large finished attic, which may be used for a children's playroom, a gameroom or for general storage.

The home is equipped with automatic gas heat and hot-water service, electric range, Westinghouse refrigerator, built-in kitchen cabinets and breakfast bar, and closets with hat and shoe racks. There are linen closets in both baths and a bed-linen closet in the upper hall. The bath off the master bedroom has a water tight shower door.

To inspect this home, go out Connecticut avenue to Chevy Chase Circle, then drive right on Western avenue to Arcadia place.

Strength Needed For Cellar Stairs

Special consideration should be given to cellar stairs. Too frequently these steps are constructed in a careless manner, despite the fact that they probably bear more heavy loads than other stairs in the house.

While cellar stairs need not be as well finished as the main stairs, they should be given as much consideration as far as safety and use are concerned. A railing should be provided, and there should be adequate head room.

RoomFinishing Materials Need To Be Matched

In selecting the wall materials for the new house, the room finishes desired should be given careful consideration. So, start with the inside finish that is to be used and work outward, for some materials work better with one finish and other materials with another.

For instance, if the walls are to be papered, the material on which the paper is to be applied should be smooth. If smooth paint is to be the finish, the same applies. If a rough or textured paint finish is desired, then the field of wall materials is considerably broadened. For a textured-paint base, wallboards may be used with the joints filled and taped.

If no other insulation is to be placed in the walls, an insulating wallboard or an insulating lath is desirable. If insulation is to be placed between the studs or is provided in the sheathing, then other lath may be used.

Many of the insulating wall boards are made with a finish that can be used without any other decoration. They are made in tiles and sheets of various sizes and with a variation of surface texture and shade that makes a very pleasing wall for some types of room, and the joints between the boards are cleverly concealed.

Bathrooms Make Homes Marketable

Our ideas of bathrooms have changed in the last two or three decades, both as to the number required and the finish and equipment of the rooms themselves. Many houses that are otherwise completely livable and structurally sound lack sufficient modern bath conveniences.

Frequently the money spent on adding a bathroom or making over an old one will come back manyfold by making the house more marketable. Many old houses have small rooms or large closets that can be converted or some of the excess hall space may be used to create an additional bathroom.

An ingenious architect can usually find some spot that can be used, and the physical difficulties of installation can be overcome with a little careful planning.

Housing Policy For the Nation Is Taking Form

Real Estate Board Heads Throughout Country Preparing Working Plan.

Los Angeles.—Asserting one of the most promising indications in our national life is that gradually the elements of a truly comprehensive national housing policy are beginning to emerge, Paul E. Stark, Madison, Wis., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, who addressed a Southwest regional conference of the association here, expressed the association's feeling that the work of any Federal housing authority, as proposed in the Wagner housing bill, might best be centered on assisting individual cities to set up housing commissions or authorities to ascertain local needs. From their work would arise an understanding of what is needed in housing throughout the Nation, and of what measures, practically, would best advance this need. The association, he stated, suggests the Wagner bill be modified to emphasize such a plan.

Federal Authority Sought.

The Federal authority proposed in the bill could give the localities a general working plan for examination of their local situation, so what is found in one city could be compared with what is found in others. Local commissions and authorities might then be called together to suggest Federal, State and local action.

A careful examination of local situations is needed as the foundation of sound national action, Mr. Stark emphasized. A true national housing program, he said, must be broad-gauged enough to have as its objective decent housing conditions for all our people and opportunity for every family of reasonably stable income expectation, however small the income, to own its own home.

"To open home ownership to the widest possible sector of the American people we need not only to cut unnecessary costs but also to take measures against the forces that are destroying values in the homes we create," President Stark said. "Greatest such destructive force is that of urban blight, which creeps over once promising areas that should have been home areas, turning them into deficit districts."

He said that to develop some instrument with which to stop urban blight and make possible the reclamation of run-down areas the association has developed a proposed neighborhood protection and improvement act through which States might authorize property owners in a neighborhood to plan cooperatively for its betterment, acting through the present city machinery and in co-ordination with the existing city plan. He asked members of the association in every city to study the possibilities of some such measure for their own city needs.

Broad-Gauged Plan Needed.

John McC. Mowbray, Baltimore, chairman of the association's committee on housing, speaking before the recent annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, evaluating the tentative attack already made from at least four direction toward the creation of a comprehensive national housing, expressed his belief that the people of America themselves are coming to a very considerable unity of feeling as to what its objective must be, and said: "Whatever the policy may come to be in detail, its core must be something positive, not something negative. Slum elimination is not enough. Elimination of substandard housing for low income groups is not enough."

For a broad-gauge program having as its objective decent American housing standards for families of every income level and a widening of the possibility of home ownership to put it within reach of every stable and credit-worth family, he pledged for the association "Not only willing but enthusiastic support for such measures as we may need to help the whose cause."

"I am happy to believe we are on the way to a new security for home ownership," Mr. Mowbray said. "Unless there is that security there is no fair market on any greatly broadened scale for new homes."

Among approaches already made and recognized as tentative he cited: (1) experimental building; (2) mortgage insurance: (3) a reserve system for buliding and loans, which we have in the home loan banks.

As to measures needed, he cited a recent study of the Department of Commerce which found that from 3,500,000 to 5,000,000 more families of moderate income could afford to own a home if we could succeed in doing either of two things: (1) lower the purchase price by 20 per cent; (2) reduce interest rates by 2 per cent and extend the period of amortization ten years.

"How far we should further broaden the market if we were to give homes the tax treatment that a co-ordinated national housing policy would call for, I leave to your estimates," Mr. Mowbray said. "Homes represent more than capital accumulation. Their tax situation is clearly a question of public policy. It can be what we chose to make it. The time has come to find a way to provide for the home sufficient protection so that there is no longer the cat-and-mouse feeling that the tax collector may take it away."

"To the end of giving home ownership its maximum security we need the best mortgage system we can get, a strong, fair, mortgage structure set up to give maximum liquidity to mortgages, maximum stability to mortgage money flow, maximum safety to mortgage investment, minimum interest rates consistent with equity to the lender. A simple outright provision which would take care of the whole need is the proposal for a central mortgage bank made in the Wagner-Pepper bill now before Congress.

"In moving toward the elimination of slums, succeeding legislative steps will, so far as we can see, involve problems of land acquisition where slums are to be destroyed, probably creation in some form of public utility housing companies, and certainly the development of some instrument for neighborhood improvement."

$26,000,000 Spent For Ohio Building

Columbus, Ohio.—A total of $26,470,000 was spent for residential construction in the State of Ohio for the first quarter of 1937, according to a report of the Ohio Building Association League.

This indicates, the league believes, an expenditure for the year of approximately $140,000,000, as compared with $57,921,000 last year. The peak year in Ohio's building industry was 1927 when home-building expenditures totaled $159,490,000.

Employment in the construction industry in Cleveland was 109 per cent higher for the first 3 months of 1937 than the same period last year. Other employment gains over the first quarter of 1936 include Canton, 6 per cent; Cincinnati, 71 per cent; Akron, 31 per cent; Columbus, 52 per cent; Dayton, 69 per cent; Toledo, 45 per cent, and Youngstown, 64 per cent.

Approximately 45 per cent of all construction contracts in Ohio for 1937 are expected to be for residential building.

Westgate Area Keeps Natural Beauty of Sites

Simpson-Peak Co. to Build 100 Homes in Md. Development.

Planned communities are the popular ones. Home buyers seek this kind of development where the natural beauties, such as trees and streams, have been safeguarded and the roadways laid in conformity to the natural contours of the land.

Besides retaining the natural advantages of an area, wise planners keep in mind the conveniences which home owners will look for. They install all necessary utilities such as sewer and water mains, electricty and telephone lines. They go further than this and locate the development site close to stores, schools and churches and assure good neighbors and artistic homes by architectural and social restrictions.

All these matters have been attended to in the planning of Westgate, nearby Maryland community, where the Simpson-Peak Co., has developed a beautiful tract of rolling partially wooded acreage with attractive homes. Approximately 30 dwelling have been built and sold there in the short space of the project's construction and the company plans to build 100 houses. William Boswell is sales agent for the enterprise.

This delightful community, only 5 miles from the White House, is located on Massachusetts avenue extended about a half mile from Westmoreland Circle. Colonial variations have been followed in designing the homes and the handsome Cape Cod, Georgian and Williamsburg type of colonial architecture are observed in the structure in this neighborhood.

The houses are of all-brick construction with slate roofs. They are located on lots ranging in dimensions from 50 by 120 to 80 by 125 feet. Their equipment and constructional features include furred walls, rockwool insulation, copper downspouting and gas heat.

Bostonian Designed Several Structures in Capital and Vicinity.

Charles D. Maginnis, of Boston, has been elected president of the American Institute of Architects for 1937-38. Maginnis, known for his design of ecclesiastical buildings, succeeds Stephen F. Voorhees, of New York. He will direct a Nation-wide program of the institute, which aims to accelerate large-scale, low-rent housing and community planning, as well as to war on rackets and other evils which are believed to exist in the construction industry.

"Our duty to society in the coming years," the institute's announcement said, "is to continue to perform our real duty—the creation of beautiful, practical and soundly constructed housing—for the poor and the rich, not forgetting that beauty in all the arts is the most important and lasting function."

Frederick H. Moyer, of San Francisco, has been elected vice president and director of the institute. Other directors have been chosen as follows: Richmond H. Shreve, New York, New York district; Albert Harkness, Providence, R. I., New England division; John R. Fugard, of Chicago, Illinois-Wisconsin district. Charles T. Ingham, of Pittsburgh, has been re-elected secretary. Edwin Bergstrom, of Los Angeles, continues as treasurer.

Permits Show Decline.

Figures compiled by G. A. Adams, building inspector of Prince Georges County, show a slight decrease in the number of building permits issued for May. A total of 89 permits were issued totaling $284,650, as compared with 105 permits totaling approximately $350,000 for April.

Lenders Place Most Weight On Character

Value of House and Lot Given Less Consideration, Official Says.

Chicago.—Value of the house and lot is the second consideration in mortgage lending instead of the first as present-day lending policies in some quarters tend to infer. The borrower himself is the backbone of the transaction and each is a case calling for separate appraisal as home-owner timbre.

This suggestion from Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, in a recent bulletin to member thrift and home-financing institutions, throws light on the way the old-timers in the home lending business look at today's trends. Bodfish represents an organization which has many men in its ranks as much as 25 and 30 years seasoned in savings, building and loan activity as well as many who have come into it in the past 10 or 12 or even the last 3 years.

"Without trying for a minute to discount the value of accurate appraisals, I do feel that the harping on 'per cent' of loan to property value which seems to be an increasingly popular criterion of mortgage decisions is just a repetition of the middle and late twenties, when some of the most glaring mortgage lending mistakes were made," he said. "Banking troubles were augmented with the increasing attention to collateral and decreasing search into the borrower's character. Home lending agencies are susceptible to the same error.

"The lender's only interest in the value of the property should be as a safeguard in case his judgment of the borrower as a credit risk goes awry through error or though economic emergency. It is always an error to make the thing you fall back on in emergency the only yardstick by which you measure probable outcome of the transaction. This is a sure way to hasten the emergency with regard to a home loan."

He said that every loan is a case to be studied for itself and not to be merely submitted to some arbitrary rule such as a set percentage of loan to value. The correct appraisal of the value of the property, he suggested, should be sought as much to make sure that the borrower is not going into water over his financial head, as to safeguard the loan from the security side of the fence.

"When the family is in earnest about paying for a home and can qualify for the undertaking by its habits, and record of other economic relationships the savings and loan association which lends it money is making a sound investment," he claimed. "On the other hand, a most conservative loan to a family which cannot qualify for a mortgage loan in the opinion of an experienced lender is bound to be a gamble."

The league executive referred to the recent conference on consumer credit at the University of Chicago, when emphasis was placed on the character of the person borrowing money, for all purposes and from all sources, as the surest way to safeguard a credit economy. He pleaded for a realization of this factor in all mortgage lending activities at the present time.

The recent plans of associations involving variable interest rates for different types of loans give as much weight to differences in the borrower's character and habits as to differences between properties submitted as loan security, he indicated.

He said the United States League's committee on trends will give its first attention to recommendations on mortgage loan policies, which recommendations will take into consideration the safety from the point of view of the credit and real estate price structure of the criteria being used in mortgage lending today.

Woodland Scene in Burnt Mills Hills Community

A green valley with its stream and trees on one of the 2½-acre estates at Burnt Mills Hills, being developed by the R. E. Latimer Co., on the Colesville pike, three miles beyond the Silver Spring traffic light.

Silver Spring Shop Center Is Proposed

A large shopping center with parking facilities for nearly 200 automobiles is planned for the southeast corner of Georgia avenue and the Colesville pike, in Silver Spring, according to announcement by the offices of C. H. Hillegeist Co., S. E. Godden and Albert Small, who negotiated purchase of the property and will have charge of leasing the various units.

The site has a frontage of 560 feet on Georgia avenue and Colesville pike, and contains practically three acres. It is planned to erect a group of buildings on this entire frontage, comprising a motion picture theater and shops of various sizes to accommodate a wide range of businesses, making it a most comprehensive development.

Its planners remind that the great growth of the Silver Spring area and along Sixteenth street extended, East-West highway and the Colesville and Georgia avenue pikes has created a need for such a project and its location is calculated to serve these fast expanding communities. The Silver Spring area, they explain, is the center of a population of approximately 30,000 and there are fully as many people in the adjacent territory.

Architecturally, they announce, the development will be one which any section of the city or suburbs would be pleased with. In addition to the theater, it is planned to build from 17 to 20 stores of various sizes to suit requirements of different business activities. Plans have been drawn so that store space will suit individual needs. The theater will have a modernistic elevation and contain seats for approximately 1,100 persons. It will be air-cooled, and of modern construction and equipment. The stores will have most attractive fronts.

The large amount of space available makes it possible to include, in addition to the usual food stores, many other lines such as ladies' and men's wear, shoes and a nationally known 5 and 10 cent store, which, together with various specialty shops, will comprise a complete business center.

The leasing agents have had wide experience in this type of development and state they have met with a fine response from prospective tenants. They report that negotiations ar already in progress with a sufficient number of firms to insure the success of the project. It is expected that the total expenditure for ground and buildings will be approximately $700,000.

New Md. Firm Developing 2 Realty Projects

Medley and Funderburk Incorporate to Build Apartments, Homes.

A new real estate organization has been formed in Silver Spring, Md., by J. Ingram Medley and Walter L. Funderburg. It is to be known as the Maryland Real Estate Co., and has offices at 7906 Georgia avenue.

At present the company is developing two projects. One is an apartment group, known as Maryland Courts, composed of 12 separate buildings, costing approximately $250,000. The project, located at the corner of Spring avenue and Schrider street, near the 150-acre Sligo Valley Park, will be completed in the early fall. There will be 54 units of two and three room apartments.

The second operation is a group of one and two-story brick homes in Country Club Park, a development located between the Argyle and Indian Spring Country Clubs.

The president of the company, Mr. Medley, has been active in local building circles for many years. In 1928 he became associated with the North Washington Realty Co., later becoming vice president, and continuing in that capacity until the summer of 1936. Mr. Medley was graduated in law from Georgtown University in the class of 1917. He is a member of the Washington Board of Trade, Washington Real Estate Board and other civin and trade organizations. During the World War, he was an officer in the Engineer Corps. His home is in Bethesda, Md.

Mr. Funderburk, secretary and treasurer of the company, has been active in Montgomery County and Washington real estate work for several years. He was associated with the North Washington Realty Co. from 1923 until the spring of 1937. Mr. Funderburk is a member of several trade and civic organizations, including the Silver Spring Business Men's Association, Rockville Chamber of Commerce, Manor Country Club, Washington Real Estate Board and the Washington Board of Trade. He was chairman of Greater Montgomery County, Inc., which organization published several thousand copies of a 48-page booklet describing the advantages of the county and was distributed throughout the United States. This work was carried on during the George Washington Bicentenial in Washington in 1932.

Two Patuxent River Sales Are Reported

Fulton Lewis, jr., newspaperman, recently purchased a 75-acre property on St. Cutberts Creek, St. Marys County, Md. The location is at the lower Patuxent River fishing grounds and near Chesapeake Bay.

Theodore F. Menk, local broker, reports the sale of Half Pone Point, on the Patuxent River, a 175-acre waterfront farm, to Irwin C. Murray, of the District Material Supply Co.

Plaster Must Dry Before Finishing

Plaster walls in a new house should not be finished for several months if they are to dry thoroughly. Because the frame of a house settles and shrinks during the first few months, cracks will show up in the best job of plastering, and these will be accentuated if the walls are finished.

Damp spots are likely to appear when the moisture forces itself from the plaster, and if the surface has been finished they will have to be retouched, resulting in splotchy walls. Paper will peel and discolor when the plaster has not been dried thoroughly.

Trade Journal Plans Price Wage Policy

Satisfy Workers, Buyers and Solve Problem Says Magazine.

Chicago. How to satisfy both employes and customers, the one with higher wages and the other with reasonable prices, is the subject of an editorial in the American Builder, which recommends to business men, large and small, what it believes to be the only policy that can remedy the present discontent of the masses which is promoting government and labor union attacks on all business, threatening the destruction of the system of private enterprise.

"Why business men?" this analysis asks. "Because politicians and labor leaders are engaging more and more in competition with business men for the favor of both their employes and customers. In order to survive and succeed business men must meet every kind of competition, including this. Either they will meet it, or politicians and labor leaders will in future run business —and when they run it there won't be any efficiency or profits in it.

Buyers Powerful.

"Business can satisfy its customers—who include everybody—only by providing them increasing amounts of goods and services that they want at prices that they can and willingly will pay. They are the market, and no company or industry can long dictate to its market. Buyers can, and often do, strike, and when they strike there are depressions, unemployment for labor and losses for business.

"Apparently the principal competition to which the management of industry is subject at present is for the favor and co-operation of its employes. Consequently, many advances in hourly wages are being granted. But any advance in hourly wages in excess of the advance in hourly output per employe increases operating costs, and therefore either curtails profits or necessitates advances in prices that customers must pay.

"There is only one means by which, even temporarily, to satisfy both employes and customers. This is to acquire and use improved machinery and adopt improved methods that will increase average output per employe per hour.

Cost Cycle.

Only by this means can production costs be kept down in spite of advances in hourly wages, and only by keeping down production costs can profits be made while charging prices that will satisfy customers.

"For any industry or all industries merely to raise hourly wages will not solve present economic and social problems. The direct and indirect customers of every industry are much more numerous than its wage earners, because a large part of the buying public—farmers, for example—do not work for wages, and, therefore, may be injured, by advances in them.

"Its customers, not its employes, are the most important problem of every industry. Only satisfied customers will provide business that will afford the workers of any industry with good jobs and its owners with good or any profits.

"Labor and its leaders imperatively need to learn this fundamental economic fact. Many managers of business apparently need just now to be reminded of it."

Good Lighting Found Important in Stores

Modern merchants have discovered that the adequate lighting of their establishments is essential for successful merchandising results. Through its means the entire sales area of the store may be utilized and increased sales with consequent profits should result.

U. S. Paint Association Led Commerce Move

Ernest T. Trigg, president of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, in a recent address made in New York, pointed out that the establishment of the U. S. Department of Commerce was one of the association's achievements. In 1891 the association appointed a committee for the organization of a movement to bring about the creation of such a department. After many years of work, the paint industry, with the aid of other manufacturing and commercial organizations, finally succeeded in getting Congress to take action, and the department was created in 1903.

Blue, Green 'Recede.'

Blue and green are called "receding colors" and are so used on the stage. For homes, a wall surface or ceiling finished in a light tint of either of these colors makes the walls appear more distant and gives the impression of greater space.

Cherrydale Home Offered for Sale

Cherrydale, Va., is the location of one of the most unique homes offered recently in the vicinity of Washington. Situated on the edge of a thickly wooded area, surrounded by shrubbery and a picket fence covered with rose bushes, this residence fulfills every requisite of the ideal home.

Equal to the exterior and setting is the interior of this home. Consisting of five rooms, including two bedrooms, there is also a floored and partially finished second floor which is ideal for use as an additional bedroom, or large recreation room. An outstanding feature of the living room is the large stone fireplace. The rustic stone chimney which fronts the residence adds appeal and beaty.

The home is convenient to all urban facilities and is only a 15-minute drive from downtown Washington. Offered for sale by George Rucker, the property may be seen by driving out Lee highway to Kenmore street, in Cherrydale, and left two squares.

Few Luxuries For Plumbing Held Advisable

While the cost of plumbing fixtures should correspond to the general cost range of the house it is one of the places where extras are justifiable if there are to be any at all.

A built-in tub is almost a necessity in any house, no matter how low the cost of the house. As a matter of fact, although there is a difference in price between the built-in tub and the old-fashioned type on legs, it is doubtful if the actual cost installed is much, if any, greater.

With the built-in type, the wall finish back of the tub and the floor finish under it are both omitted, and their cost may well equal or exceed the additional cost of the tub. But even if it costs more, the saving in care and trouble that a built-in tub gives is worth a much greater difference than exists between the costs of the two fixtures.

The toilet may be a wash-down type, which is the least expensive, or it may be a syphon-jet type, which is the most expensive. The difference is almost entirely a matter of quietness of operation. If this means much, the difference in expense will be justified.

Open Up Rooms.

In many old houses a large dining room is used infrequently, and the space would be better added to the living room. Partitions may be knocked out and one large room used for both purposes.

Housing Loans In April Reach Record Figure

$125,386,000 Is 16 Per Cent Over March, League Reports.

Chicago.—A new high for savings, building and loan association home lending for the recovery period was reached in April, when $125,386,000 was paid out, the United States Building and Loan League has reported. Volume was 16.7 per cent higher than March and a 14.3 per cent increase over April a year ago.

Not since 1929 has their total of new construction loans in any one month reached the $37,669,000 which these thrift and home financing associations report for April. About 10,650 homes were built with the aid of these loans, the league points out. Last September came closest to this volume of construction financing, but it was nearly $3,000,000 behind the figure just released.

Meanwhile the steady progress of loans to purchase already built homes evidences the rapidity with which property ownership is becoming a reality for families which were mere renters a few months ago. April financing of this type of transaction by the thrift and home financing institutions amounted to $42,313,000, or 33.7 per cent of all loans disbursed. Thus the first four months of the year have witnessed the release of $127,110,000 by the associations to assist buyers.

Small Loans for Building.

Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president of the league, emphasizes the moderate size of the construction loans which the associations average, pointing to the predominance of the $4,500 to $5,500 home among building and loan mortgage securities. Rising building costs are reflected, however, in the fact that the average association new construction commitment is about $450 larger than a year ago.

"In the main, the same type of home is being built with these thrift and home financing funds, but they just cost more to build," he commented. "Leaders in the savings and loan business hope that the upward trend of these costs can be stemmed before it deals a real blow to our home-building progress."

In an effort to give some idea of what the home-building progress so far has done for the employment situation,the league leader referred to the Bureau of Labor's indices of construction industry jobs. Employment has increased 55 per cent during the past year there, and pay rolls are up 89 per cent. Even the average weekly earnings in the industry have increased about 21 per cent since this time last year.

Employment Boosted.

Employment is also being enhanced by the continued activity in modernizing homes, much of which is being financed by the savings, building and loan associations, Mr. Bodfish said. Since the first of the year and up through April between 5 and 6 per cent of the volume of savings and loan financing has been directed into the home modernization field. The fact that Congress permitted Title I of the national housing act to expire without renewal and thus removed modernization credit from the field of Government protection will have no appreciable effect upon this acivity by the assoications, he said. The bulk of their modernization credit has been extended without the use of insurance, anyway.

As evidence, he showed that a larger volume of such loans were made by the thrift and home financing associations in April than in any month since last October, and the expiration date of this portion of the housing act was April 1.

NHA Completes $3,896,400 Project

A story of the first large-scale housing operation to be completed under the national housing act is told in the Insured Mortgage Portfolio, official organ of the Federal Housing Administration.

It is told by Gustav Ring, contractor, developer and property manager, who conceived the project and heads the limited dividend corporation which owns and operates it. Mr. Ring tells in detail how the original project consisting of 276 apartments, for which 15,000 applications were received, grew into a project that will shortly house 974 families. The total investment, including land, buildings and operating capital represents $3,896,400, of which $3,800,000 was advanced by the New York Life Insurance Co. on the security of three Federal Housing Administration insured mortgages bearing 4½ per cent interest per annum.

Under the amortization provisions, one mortgage will be paid off in 15 years and the others in 20, when the sponsoring corporation will no longer be subject to Federal Housing Administration regulations as regards rentals and certain other details. Mr. Ring in discussing the project since April, 1935, states, "we regard the general purposes of these regulation as so sound that we would continue most of them voluntarily even if we were no longer bound by them."

Home Building Is Increased by Marriage Rise

Figures Show America Still Has 205,501 Delayed Weddings.

While the marriage rate in the United States has advanced beyond pre-depression figure and the increase is being reflected by the dominant role that women are playing in the current building expansion, a comparison of the marriages and divorces for the past 14 years shows that the country still has 205,501 delayed marriages.

As applied to the present dwelling shortage of the country—conservatively estimated as more than 800,000—the postponed honeymoons should occur this year, thereby translating a potential into an active actual market for new homes.

Jordan A. Pugh, of the executive staff of the Structural Clay Products Institute, said of reports reaching the institute on the role women play in home selection or purchase:

"About 87 per cent of the houses built or bought receive final construction or sales approval from wives, prospective brides, sisters, nieces or aunts.

"They are always the managers, always have been, and probably always will be as far as the home goes. They have changed completely the types of basements, kitchens and bathrooms in modern homes.

"Real estate salesmen, builders, architects, contractors, even furniture dealers tell the same story: The women are clamoring for homes, are establishing styles in building and taking a more active part than ever in the actual buying of dwellings.

"Building along the national American front will benefit tremendously when these 205,501 delayed marriages occur. June promises to be the greatest honeymoon month the country has seen in five years; much of the building now going on is devoted to dwellings for young couples planning marriages in June.

"In 1936, the United States had about 1,350,000 marriages and 220,000 divorces. Take the difference and you get 1,150,000 homes established. Private dwelling construction, on the other hand, did not exceed 175,000 homes during 1936, which means that 975,000 married couples did not start life in specially built or purchased homes. That deduction alone would lift the estimated housing shortage of 800,000, a figure which experts have picked after repeated surveys, to almost 1,000,000.

"Five years ago, the census figures on housing reported 14,500,000 families as owning their own homes, and 15,619,000 families as tenants. At that time, the building market contained a potential buying public of at least 5,000,000 families, assuming that one-third of the tenant class was financially able to swing carrying charges on a home.

"Since 1930, the construction expansion has gradually asserted itself, but even now, with building operations attaining new records, the shortage of dwellings will continue for six or eight years unless construction speeds up. From conclusions made by the Structural Clay Products Institute the home shortage in America is well up past the 6,000,000 mark."

Fireplaces Suited To All-Year Use

When planning a new fireplace, consideration should be given to its use for heating in spring and fall and as accessory heating in Wintertime. To further this end, several manufacturers have developed hollow steel units to be bricked in when the fireplace is built and which serve as a warm-air heating chamber.

The steel unit takes cold air from the floor of the room in which the fireplace is located, or from the out-of-doors through a grilled opening, heats the air much as would a warm-air furnace, and discharges the heated air through grilled openings into the room.

The heating of the room air, in addition to the pleasing radiant heat from the open fire, converts the usual fireplace into a heating unit of considerable capacity. Further, the unit being factory fabricated of steel acts as a form for the brickwork of the fireplace and thus aids in the building of a fireplace of good design.

Gravel Keeps Water From Splashing Wall

In cold New England or elsewhere where houses are frequently built without gutter, a bed of gravel or broken stone against the foundation wall to catch the drip will be a great convenience and keep mud from splashing against the woodwork.

Closet Can Be Made In Wall of Bathroom

It is frequently necessary to thicken one wall of a bathroom in order to provide room for the installation of a large soil pipe. In such cases a closet can be included in this space deep enough to hold small bathroom linen.

Wisconsin Girl Wins Vogue's Fashion Prize

Prix de Paris Competition Provides Employment by Magazine.

New York.—For the second successive year, a girl from a Middle Western college has won the Nation-wide Prix de Paris competition sponsored by Vogue, the fashion magazine. Defeating entrants from the graduating classes of 216 colleges, Miss Virginia Van Brunt, of Horicon, Wis., a senior at the University of Wisconsin, is the winner of the first prize—one year's employment in the New York and Paris offices of Vogue.

Second prize, six months' employment in Vogue's New York offices, was awarded to Miss Alice Schultz, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., a senior at Smith College, Northampton. Announcement of the awards has been made by Mrs. Edna Woolman Chase, editor-in-chief of Vogue. Forty-six States and one Territory were represented in the contest which has for its object "the discovery and development of college women who have imagination, a flair for fashion and the ability to write."

Miss Van Brunt, winner of the first prize, is enrolled in the school of journalism at the University of Wisconsin, and will receive her B. A. degree in journalism this month. In addition to her college activities, Miss Van Brunt wrote features and news items for a newspaper during her summer vacations, had a place on an "all-State" news staff, sold books in the University Co-operative and had a part-time job selling women's dresses in a large department store. She also conducted a style column in a daily paper. She is 22 years old.

12 Others Mentioned.

Winner of the second prize, Miss Alice Schultz, who graduates this month from Smith, has been on the Smith honor list for four years and was recently elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

Twelve other seniors received honorable mention in the contest. They are: Muriel Barrie, Radcliffe; Alice Buford, Tulane; Katherine Deering, St. Lawrence; Rosemary Farr, Barnard; Vivienne Harrell, Mississippi State College for Women; Margaret Houck, Bryn Mawr; Marjorie Keller, Rockford; Margaret Marquart, Ohio State; Alma Ranson, Due; Donna Reid, University of California; Davilla St. Clair, Southern Methodist University; Elizabeth Winspear, Women's College of the University of North Carolina.

Clear Style Cited.

Through the efforts of Vogue's editorial staff, these girls will be put in touch with various department stores, advertising agencies and others who have shown great interest in the contest. Last year, 28 young women competing for the Prix de Paris found employment through Vogue's recommendation.

In awarding first prize to Miss Van Brunt, the judges said that she had shown "a keen sense of fashion values, originality and—clarity in her style of writing." In addition to the qualities which brought her the coveted year in New York, and Paris, Miss Van Brunt is an enthusiastic sportswoman. Miss Schultz, winner of the second prize, who comes from Wellesley Hills, Mass., has a sprightly, natural style of writing devoid of affectation or mannerism. "Her work shows a rare combination of sound common sense and youthful enthusiasm," said the judges. The winners are expected to join Vogue's staff in the fall.

Vogue's Prix de Paris was first announced in October, 1935 as an encouragement to college women who wished to make careers in the field of women's fashions. The contest—six quizzes and a final thesis—serves as a preliminary course in fashion training and the winners are chosen on the basis of their records in the course. Edna Woolman Chase and Conde Nast, publisher, and members of the Vogue editorial staff are the judges.

Insulation Urged For Hot-Water Line

Whenever an automatic gas or electric domestic hot-water heater is used it should be remembered that all hot-water plumbing lines are a source of heat loss, and a major one, because of the considerable amount of pipe surface exposed to the air as compared to the volume of heated water in the pipes.

For this reason, just as it is important that the storage tank be insulated, it is also important that, wherever space will permit, the hot-water lines be insulated with any of the several good insulation materials now available on the market. It is probable that the insulation of the hot-water lines will do as much to make the operation of the water heater economical as will the insulation placed around the storage tank by the manufacturer or the installer.

Variety Offered In Floor Covering

A number of manufacturers have recently introduced novel floor coverings of attractive and durable materials which provide for very rapid finishing of floors, either in new houses or those being remodeled. Due to the speed in which they may be laid they offer the owner an economical solution in the selection of the floor finishes.

The variety of these new types of floor coverings is considerable, ranging from linoleum with the glue already applied to ornamental hardwood parquet flooring which comes in rolls and may be applied in a manner similar to linoleum.

There is a wide variety of color and design in these new coverings, and with their attractiveness and speed of installation they are particularly adaptable to remodeling and renovating of homes or business structures.

Boiler Heat Retained By Insulating Jacket

Tailor-made insulating jackets are now available for the common range boiler and at reasonable prices. Engineers conservatively estimate that they will save their cost in less than a year and will, of course, retain the heat in the water for long periods. In addition, a word may be said for the improved appearance of the jacketed range boiler.

Side Openings Solve Problem Of Hall Lights

The problem of how to get sufficient light into a small entrance hall is always a perplexing one. If it is wide enough and the type of architecture permits, side lights can be used on either side of the entrance door. And if the ceiling is high enough, a fanlight or transom over the door may be used.

If the hall is not wide enough for side lights and not high enough for a transom, then what is to be done? Obviously the light can come only through the door itself. Except in modernistic houses or in nondescript houses of the last century a large glass door looks out of place.

The answer depends somewhat on the style of the house. If it comes in that broad classification—from Cape Cod cottage to Southern colonial mansion—it may have lights of glass in the upper panels of the door. This refers only to the small, squarish panels at the top of a six or eight-panel door and not to the long upper panels of a four-panel door, nor to the large upper panel of a two-panel door.

These lights may be of a number of designs and shapes; they may be square or round or arched. The old bull's-eye lights with the thick centers like the bottoms of bottles that were frequently used both in England and colonial America make attractive lights, and the little arched panes seen in Connecticut and Massachusetts either in two, three or four lights also are appropriate.

New Residence Easily Modified To Suit Buyer

North Washington Company Offers Innovation in Housing.

A home planned to suit the buyer, one that can be arranged to suit the buyer's needs at time of purchase, is the novelty in residential construction that is to be presented formally to home buyers of Washington today.

From a charming basic structure including all necessary sections, such as bedrooms, living room, kitchen and bath, its convenience and spaciousness can be increased by the addition of a basement or an upper story. Its sightliness can be enhanced by the addition of porches, dormer windows, picket fences and the like.

This type of house is to introduce two new residential operations in nearby Maryland. They are the Forest Hills and Country Club View subdivisions of the North Washington Housing Corporation, headed by E. Brooke Lee. Fifteen homes of the foregoing type will launch the former development and 16 will comprise the original construction program of the latter.

The Forest Hills tract will have room for 400 homes and is bounded by the Saratoga, Flower and Montgomery avenues of Silver Spring and the beautiful Sligo Valley Park. The Country Club View area has space for 360 homes. All structures in both localities will be known as Park View Cottages, for their locations will afford delightful vistas overlooking the wooded parkway with its many recreational facilities.

All urban utilities are being installed in both regions which will be traversed by wide streets. All of the home sites will be shaded and cooled by abundant trees. The city facilities of progressive Silver Spring are close at hand. The communities will be in the heart of a substantial residential section where building has been going on for 15 years. The Country Club View project is opposite Argyle Country Club and just off Forest Glen road.

The sample house featuring both its novel type of construction and the two planned communities is located on Georgia avenue just one square north of the District line. It is very handsomely furnished by W. & J. Sloane, landscaped by J. H. Small & Sons, and equipped with Bryant gas heating. So popular has this type of home proved that 10,000 persons have visited it during the period of its preliminary showing.

As representatives of the corporation remind, it is a house that answers the appeal of the family of modest income to own a home of its own.

3 Floor Coverings Give Satisfaction

Linoleum, asphalt tile, rubber tile, and cork are popular, durable and satisfactory floor coverings. The first three are commonly used in office and apartment buildings, while the last type is preferred for certain installations where sound-deadening is a factor.

Each of these coverings possesses its own particular advantages, and the choice in many instances is largely one of personal preference, depending upon the space to be covered.

Playroom for Children Needs Careful Planning

Many homes include plans for playrooms in basement or attic. The foresighted mother will plan a room that can grow with the child and become study hall and club-room in later years.

Gentlemen:

You have advised me that a great many people have asked you the price of my home in Fairfax County, Virginia, known as "Twin Oaks".

I wish you to inform anyone concerned that I am now permanently located in Florida and that I am no longer a citizen of Virginia. That is why I want immediate and positive action in disposing of my property and that is why I have placed it in your hands without revocation to sell at Public Auction on Tuesday, June 15th.

The price of the property is an opinion. The value of this opinion is what someone is going to pay. One opinion is what the property might bring. Another opinion is whatever it does bring. One is a hope and the other is a positive fact.

I can only say that I shall make a warranty deed to the successful bidder in accordance with the terms and conditions of the sale and that you have the matter entirely in your hands to act for me.

Very truly yours,
Geo. W. Muller

House Bracing Is Important In Storm Belt

Building Should Be Tied to Resist Thrusts at Rafters.

When a home is being built in a part of the country subject to violent windstorms, the bracing of the house is of particular importance.

Proper bracing of a frame building is most important. If the exterior walls are to be sheathed, they may be braced most effectively by putting the sheathing on diagonally and thoroughly nailing it to the studs. Such placement of the sheathing is two to four times as effective as horizontal sheathing.

Long, continuous braces let into the faces of the studs and thoroughly nailed to them will increase the rigidity of a horizontally sheathed wall to such an extent that it will compare favorably with a diagonally sheathed wall.

Continuous Braces Urged.

Braces cut on a bevel and nailed in between the studs on a line are not so effective as continuous braces.

If used at all corners, however, and made as long as the let-in braces, they will increase the rigidity of a horizontally sheathed wall about 50 per cent. So-called "bridge" or "herringbone" bracing placed at mid-story height does not increase the rigidity of a wall to an extent which would justify the expense of putting it in for this purpose.

Wood lath and plaster is more rigid than many types of sheathing or sheathing and bracing. Under normal conditions plaster may furnish all the rigidity reuired for most purposes. However, as the plaster begins to crack from shrinkage, settlement or other causes the rigidity of the sheathing comes more and more into play.

Thus, in violent winds or earthquakes, it is the sheathing and bracing that become all-important in preventing complete destruction. It is logical, too, that slightly more bracing than is needed to resist ordinary distorting influences will in the long run more than pay for itself through diminishing, if not entirely eliminating maintenance costs that result from the structure getting out of alignment.

It is also important that the building be thoroughly tied to resist the thrust of the rafters. When it is not feasible to tie the building together at the foot of the rafters the thrust may be transferred to the end walls by a system of diagonal bracing on the underside of the rafters. This in reality makes trusses of the two halves of the roof which are nailed together at the peak.

In small buildings this system of bracing may be used to eliminate very objectionable ties across the center of the building. In a garage the end containing the doors will not get out of shape if a proper system of bracing is used on the roof or underneath the ties and if the other three walls are well braced.

Short Circuits Are Fire Hazard

In selecting the type of wiring systems to be used in modernizing a home or in a new home, it is well to remember that short circuits in wiring are a common cause of fire, and that provision should be made for expansion of the wiring system if additions are made to the house at a later date, and also for the increasing use of electrical appliances over a period of time. For safety's sake, the common knob and tube wiring system should be avoided and one of the flexible or rigid metallic or sheathed conduit systems used wherever possible.

In order to take care of future requirements, the use of No. 12 wire is recommended for all branch lighting circuits because it can carry heavier loads than the usual No. 14 wire. In any event, No. 12 wire should be used on branch circuits serving the kitchen, and the basement or utility room.

To insure continued usefulness of the wiring system, an ample number of convenience outlets for each room should be provided and located with an eye to utility. The number, however, shoud be reasonably limited to conform to the standard created by other homes in the neighborhood.

Boss & Phelps Sell Old Home in Md.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Shober, of 4400 Edmunds street northwest, have purchased through Boss & Phelps, realtors, in connection with Buell M. Gardner, of Rockville, Md., the 310-acre farm, Aix La Chapelle, on the old Frederick road, near Beallsville, Montgomery County, Md., from the Brewer estate.

The improvements consist of a large brick colonial dwelling and several outbuildings. The house, which was built in 1812, is now being restored, and Mr. and Mrs. Shober will occupy the property as their home.

Aix La Chapelle is considered one of the finest farms in Montgomery County, and is one of the old landmarks of the State.

Care of Elevators Vitally Important

Elevators, in addition to their utilitarian value, are important in expressing the character of the establishment, to which they may add beauty and artistic value as well.

In the modernization of stores, elevators are important and demand the utmost consideration. First of all they must have safety plus and look it. The confidence of customers is necessary if merchandise on upper floors is to be moved advantageously and bring expected profit. Frequently elevator service is not adequate and shoppers become impatient and go elsewhere to purchase.

The use of valuable space for the installation of additional elevator service may prove a profitable investment.

In stores now equipped with old elevators the shaft may be inclosed in wire glass or the open grill covered with a fire wall and satisfactory effects accomplished at small expense. Modern steel cages can be added to present shafts with no change in machinery in many cases.

Good elevators can pay for themselves in the increased sales value which they give to upper floors.

Modern Kitchens Clean, Beautiful

Columns have been written about the kitchen since that room emerged from the dark, drab cubicle of old and passed the white, uninteresting stage. Today's kitchen combines cleanliness, efficiency and beauty. Tile wainscoting is effective in kitchens and is easily cleaned. Patterned wallpaper affords a variation of the plain wall, and adequate shelves and cupboards may be built in.

An interesting color scheme would be a floor covering of tan, white, black, yellow and blue; yellow tiled walls and woodwork, and a paper above the tiling of blue flowers in yellow baskets on a white background. Curtains could be blue, and other accessories may be bought in corresponding shades.

A light above the sink saves the eyesight and the nerves of the housewife.

Skilled Trim Essential to Modern Home

Work Should Harmonize With Frame of Dwelling.

That part of the woodwork of the house that is known as the trim should be given careful study in designing and skilled workmanship in erecting. This includes the finish pieces that make a frame around door and window openings, baseboards, wood cornices, cabinets, open shelves, etc. The simple house should have a simple trim—narrow, plain in design and unobtrusive.

Heavy trim with elaborate moldings in small rooms has an overpowering effect that makes the rooms seem even smaller and cramped and uncomfortable like a large person in too tight clothes. For some time past good architects have been conscious of this fact, but it is only recently that the contractor-builder who does not employ an architect has begun to feel it.

To erect trim properly and make a clean, true job of it requires a skill beyond the capabilities of the so-called "hatchet-and-saw" carpenter; that is, the man who does the framing and the other rough carpentry in a perfectly capable manner. Too often this distinction is not recognized, and rough work with gaping cracks and seemingly careless joints is the result. The workman is not at fault; it would be just as reasonable to expect a bricklayer to do a beautiful piece of fine mosaic work.

See that the trim of your house is in keeping with its style and character and that the workmen intrusted with its erection are skilled at that baptismal fonts, bells and bell ringers, book racks, chancel fonts, chimes, choir fronts and stalls, communion rails, and auditorium seats.

Water Supply Lines Need Shut-Off Valves

Each hot- and cold-water supply line connecting to a plumbing fixture should have an accessible shut-off valve in addition to the regular faucet. By the inclusion of these shut-off valves, repairs to individual faucets are made easy without disturbing hot- and cold-water service to the other plumbing fixtures within the house.

Lighted Closets Aid.

A light in a large closet is decidedly helpful. There need be no rummaging around for the proper dress or piece of linen.

Skilled Labor Essential for Frame House

The important points in building the frame of a house are: Dry lumber of good quality, adequate bracing, proper distribution of loads, and skilled labor. Lumber that is grade-marked by one of the lumber associations is available nearly everywhere and should be insisted upon, as this will insure the quality. Its dryness is dependent upon care of the stock by the individual lumber yard.

The best bracing is by means of diagonal sheathing nailed up tight. Some wallboards are strong and may be used to good advantage. If they are used, however, or if the sheathing is put on horizontally, then the frames should be corner braced at all corners.

Where door or window openings occur, especially in bearing walls, the weight over the opening must be transferred to the uprights on each side of the opening, and this is done by doubling the studs at each side and, where the openings are large enough to warrant it, by placing a truss over the head.

The question of labor is of paramount importance. It stands to reason that unskilled labor cannot perform skillful work. Therefore, to have a well-built, solid frame, expert carpenters should be employed.

Yellow Tint Sunny.

In painting a room with a cold north light, a tint of yellow compensates for the absence of sunlight. It may be cream or ivory or, better yet, a light clear yellow to contribute to an inviting, warm, and cheerful effect.

FHA Insurance Requires Safety Of Deed Limits

Zoning Ordinances Cover Only Certain Types of Property Abuse.

Districts suitable as sites for properties eligible for insurance by the Federal Housing Administration must be protected against encroachment of undesirable elements by deed restrictions and zoning ordinances.

While zoning ordinances offer a needed and adequate check against certain types of abuse, more complete protection can be gained when deed restrictions are used to supplement existing zoning ordinances, according to Frederick M. Babcock, chief of the administration's underwriting section.

"The majority of zoning ordinances concern themselves principally with establishing necessary standards for use of property, light, air and sanitation for houses and do not set up limitations on lot coverage, lot sizes, set-back lines and side-yard widths.

"For this reason it is necessary that deed restrictions be drawn up for each subdivision to provide for each of the items mentioned. Such restrictions should be filed to cover all the lots in the subdivision.

"Another reason for blanketing a subdivision with deed restrictions is the fact that in many communities zoning ordinances can be changed readily or are in process of change at all times. Therefore, while the neighborhood may be adequately protected against the encroachment of business property at the present time, a change in zoning ordinances might eliminate needed control. Therefore, it is insisted that blanket land restrictions be used."

Mr. Babcock pointed out also that many zoning ordinances dedicate too large a proportion of the land zoned to business and industrial purposes and stated that developers of new subdivisions should guard against any such overestimation of the need for business and industrial property.

While a part of any large subdivision should be set aside for a community shopping center, the size of the shopping area should be gaged according to future needs. Shopping areas should be concentrated and not spread out.

If all areas along the main arteries are designated as business and industrial properties, as is the practice in many cities, the main arteries become blighted areas, unsuited for business purposes.

Mr. Babcock also stated that the Housing Administration has found that it is always desirable for developers or properly constituted committees to control the general type of architectural design to be used in houses in the subdivision.

C. P. Simpson, general sales manager of the Pontiac Motor Co., who was in Washington last Friday, announced the appointment of Joseph L. Johnson as manager of the Washington zone. Johnson succeeds H. H. Grothjan, who resigned to take over a retail operation in New Orleans. Johnson, who has been assistant zone manager, came to Washington as assistant zone manager in May, 1936, from the central office in Pontiac, Mich. His previous Pontiac and General Motors experience goes back many years. From November 1, 1933, until he came to Washington, the new zone manager was in charge of the organization and analysis department for Pontiac, a department which has to do entirely with dealer and sales organizations in the field. The Washington zone includes Baltimore and extends down the East Coast to the boundaries of the Charlotte, N. C., zone.

Ralph de Palma, America's best-known driver, now on a national tour for Cadillac-La Salle, and who, out of 2,889 races, won 1,757, gives some pertinent driving advice, as follows: "To me, knowing your car is a cardinal rule in traffic safety. Find out how much reserve power or acceleration is available at different speeds. A power reserve is important in emergencies. Never push your car all out, no matter how good a driver you are. Know your brakes. Keep them in perfect adjustment and always bear in mind your maximum stopping distances. Know your steering, your headlight range and other factors involved in the safety operation of a vehicle."

Because the Government has exercised its option on its building at Third and B streets southwest, the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has moved their wholesale branch to Baltimore. For the time being they will continue to operate its retail gasoline and tire service station on the first floor of the building. The Firestone service store at Thirteenth and K streets northwest will continue to function as it has in the past.

Forty Washington and Baltimore Lincoln Zephyr dealers will leave Washington this afternoon for Detroit, where they will be entertained tomorrow by factory executives. Tuesday morning they will start home, driving Lincoln Zephyr cars, painted a dawn gray, which are to be used as demonstrators by the various dealers. This method of bringing in demonstrators has a twofold purpose—first the breaking in of the cars by a preliminary road test over and beyond that given at the factory, and second, the fact the regular shipment of customers' cars would not in any way be interrupted.

On the runway of the Washington Airport, Tuesday and Wednesday, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. will hold a series of tests, having a car roar down the runway at top speed and suddenly blow a tire, then come to a full stop without the slightest swerving from the straight course it was following.

The secret of this demonstration is the fact the car will be mounted on Goodyear Life Guard tubes which are really tires within tubes. An outer conventional tube contains an "inner tube," both being joined at the base. A single tiny vent allows air to pass from the outer tube to the inner tube, and when a blowout occurs, air escapes instantly from the outer tube, but can escape from the inner tube only through the vent. This means that the outside casing drops about an inch to ride on the inner tire while the driver brings the car to a safe stop without a swerve.

Railway spikes mounted on a flat plate which is laid in the path of the onrushing car provides one means of blowing out tires. Dynamite caps that rip casings provide another.

Following a week of sporadic labor troubles, plus the Memorial Day holiday, production of cars and trucks in the United States and Canada zoomed back to 128,102 units last week, according to Automotive Daily News, trade newspaper.

This is in striking contrast to the 97,247 units produced during the previous four-day work-week which saw operations curtailed by strikes at Packard, Chevrolet, Chrysler, DeSoto and Pontiac. At the beginning of last week, however, production was back at normal in all plants except Packard, where a serious shortage of materials cut the week's output to one-third of the ordinary pace.

Careful Installation Of Radiator Necessary

The new type of radiator that fits in a 4-inch partition must be carefully installed to prevent possible cracks in the plaster over the inclosure. This is true only when the radiator is so wide that one or more of the studs must be cut to receive it. The opening must be adequately bridged, particularly in a bearing partition.

Corrosion Losses Run Into Millions

According to Real Estate and Building Management, corrosion destroys steel, cast iron, wrought iron, and alloys to the amount of $100,000,000 annually in the United States. Annual replacement exceeds $27,000,000. Moisture, gases, and chemicals hasten corrosion, and electrolysis is a large factor. Buried pipes show largest deterioration, especially where covered by soil. Protective methods are valuable and should be used as extensively as possible.

In constructing homes this important matter should be borne in mind and necessary measures taken to give adequate protection to the piping and other metals used.

Part-Payment Plan Stimulates Building Field

Installment Selling Aids Contractor to Build Low-Cost Homes.

Representatives of the Federal Housing Administration announce that by making popular the application of the principles of installment selling to the home building field, through the amortized mortgage, that agency has enabled the residential building industry to engage in comparatively large-scale operations and to tap, for the first time, the market for small houses, costing less than $5,000.

Because the insured mortgage system does make possible large-scale activities in the subdivision field, they remind, the Federal Housing Administration must limit its approval to those neighborhoods for which there is an immediate and definite demand. Only in this way can it exert a proper influence in preventing overproduction and over-expansion.

Insurance Limited.

The position of the housing administration may seem anomalous to some people, they state, but it must be remembered, however, that the insurance of mortgages is limited, under the terms of the National Housing act, to those projects which are economically sound.

The insurance of loans in neighborhoods which are not ripe for development—for which there is no immediate demand—would not be sound procedure, and such projects are, automatically, eliminated from consideration.

They explain that while some people feel that the housing administration is stifling the natural growth of the building industry by exercising this influence over the development of new subdivisions, the subdivision activities of the administration are, in reality, a definite stimulus to the sound development of home-construction activities.

Aiding Industry.

The administration, they emphasize, is aiding the industry to regain the confidence of the buying public which was destroyed during the 1920s, by the activities of "jerry" builders and land speculators. By proceeding cautiously in its approval of new subdivisions, and withholding its approval until they are ready for orderly development, the administration discourages the type of activities which so nearly destroyed the confidence of the buying public in the integrity of the building industry, they point out.

By the same means it reduces the possibility of unethical competition and aids ethical builders to operate without fear of this type of competition, they continue. For these reasons, they conclude, the administration is holding firmly to its policy of "making haste slowly." It realizes that the building industry must progress carefully if it is to regain the confidence of the buying public.

New Style Boilers Add to Basement

With the universal desire to use basement space for recreation purposes, boiler manufacturers have given special thought to the construction and appearance of boilers.

The modern boiler with its colorful jacket of steel is handsome and attractive, particularly the de luxe models in which everything, including the dampers, controls, oil burner, and gages, are concealed or recessed within the jacket. Underneath the jacket is a thick covering of insulation which provides further assurance that all the heat of combustion will be transferred to the water.

Mirror Glass Used In Solving Problem

Small windows were a great favorite in houses built during an earlier period. They were frequently placed at either side of a fireplace, over bookcases. Many of these houses are of sound construction and have large, airy rooms.

If the curtaining of the various sized windows in these houses presents a problem to the new owner, a suggestion employed in a Jersey home may be of some value. Mirror glass was fitted over the little windows over the bookcases, and the result was a mirrored niche.

Dressing Unit Found In Modern Bedroom

A modern bedroom has a dressing unit, comprising two closets, two chests of drawers, and a dressing table built into one end of the room. A large window is located over the dressing table and mirrors of the same height are set in the corner over the chests, between the window and the edge of the closets. The closet doors have full-length mirrors which may be opened to give a full-length view.

Kitchens Made Modern With New Equipment

The modernization of kitchens in houses built a decade or so ago calls for the installation of kitchen cabinets and other present-day equipment which save space and concentrate work.

The old-fashioned pantry, a necessary adjunct to the former kitchen arrangement, may sometimes be converted into a pleasant breakfast nook with built-in table and benches.

Mirrors Give Stores Appearance of Space

The use of mirrors in small stores and small departments is advised for decorative effects as well as usefulness. Properly used, mirrors suggest spaciousness, and when well designed and installed are both pleasing and practical. The illusion of space is easily obtained by the use of large mirrors installed as part of the side or end walls.

FHA Minimum Rules on Homes Are Established

Lacks Regulatory Power, Seeks Only Security, Director Points Out.

In mortgage insurance on one to four family dwellings the Federal Housing Administration has established certain minimum requirements which it believes serve to assure the economic soundness of the security behind the mortgages and at the same time also to raise the standards of housing provided. These minimum requirements are concerned primarily with neighborhoods and the physical property, according to Howard P. Vermilya, director of the technical division.

Explaining that the housing administration is not a regulatory body, Mr. Vermilya emphasized its primary interest is the economic soundness of the security behind insured mortgages.

"Subdivision standards which have been set up to assure the development of sound neighborhoods are concerned with the planning factors and also those factors which tend to preserve and make stable values within these communities," Mr. Vermilya pointed out. "They likewise tend to reduce the cost of subdivision development.

Minimum Requirements.

"Physical standards of the housing are concerned primarily with the location of the house upon the lot, light, ventilation, sanitation, privacy, convenience in arrangement and durability of construction.

"They are minimum requirements with which property must comply if it is to be acceptable for mortgage insurance. Every effort is made by means of recognition in the appraisal and the terms of the mortgage permitted to encourage building up from, rather than down to, these requirements. We do not regulate the manner in which these improvements above the minimum requirements shall be made. We have no regulatory powers.

Keeps Abreast.

"We have attempted to indicate ways and means whereby neighborhoods and properties could be improved, but no attempt has been made to regulate the manner in which, or the choice of the method by which, it is to be accomplished.

"The administration has always felt that it could not in any way restrict the initiative of those who wish to do a better job. Also, it has provided in its procedure the ways and means of permitting other solutions of compliance with its minimum requirements than those anticipated where the purpose of the requirements is attained.

"It is continually examining new methods of construction and new materials to keep abreast of the trends in construction so as not to deny the facilities of the insured mortgage to sound new developments."

Lots Are Available On Evelyn Place

Robert M. Watkins, president of the College Park Building Corporation, has announced that grading of property on Evelyn place, in Calvert Hills, has been completed and lots are now available. Averaging 60 by 110 feet in size, 22 lots have been made suitable for building, and Watkins has announced also that his corporation will build to suit the owner on any of them. Announcement was made also of the sale of the home at 206 Dartmouth avenue to Mr. and Mrs. J. T. O'Neil; a residence at 169 University road, to C. R. Mulix, and the construction of an eight-room house for Roy Carpenter in College Park.

Lower Ceilings Widen Out Stores

The merchant contemplating store modernization is reminded that there is a distinct trend toward lowered ceilings which tend to make interiors seem longer and broader.

A departure from the high vaulted ceilings that waste space, light, and fuel is being made.

False ceilings constructed either of plaster or wall board may be used in making repairs.

Before making ceiling and wall alterations the merchant should decide definitely the type of overhead and side lighting to be used. If indirect lighting equipment is to be installed, recesses for this purpose should be provided.

Interesting decorative effects may be had by building into plaster or wall board occasional wall niches that are also practical for small display and the spot lighting of small unit specials.

Water Plant Needs Care in Summer

For those who do not use the home heating system for a hot water supply in the summer, it is time to put the heating plant to bed for the season, advises John J. Beatty, jr., of the Iron Fireman Sales Corporation, of Washington.

"Water should be drained from the boiler, and then the fire left burning for several minutes to drive out moisture in the heating system," he states. "All soot and ash in the flue passages should be cleaned out. If left in, these deposits collect moisture and cause rust.

"The automatic burner should be cleaned and adjusted, too. This prolongs the life of the equipment and prevents unnecessary shutdowns during the heating season.

"Coal should be removed from worm housing, retort and, on certain models, from the hopper. The stoker should be cleaned and the inside of the hopper painted. The electric control systems should also be checked and adjusted."

Small Filters Solve Problem Of Hard Water

New System Aids Home Laundry and Saves Plumbing.

Over a large area of the country both public and private water supply contains an amount of mineral content often enough to make the water "hard," as it is commonly called. This water condition is undesirable because of its clogging and corrosive action in plumbing lines, heating plants and cooking utensils. In addition to that, difficulty is experienced in laundering and washing of all types, because it is hard to make soapsuds with such water, and undesirable deposits are formed by the chemical reactions taking place between the soap and the mineral in the water.

As a result of this widespread condition, a number of firms are producing water-softening equipment which, by filtration and chemical action, neutralizes or deposits out the mineral content, leaving the water soft and reducing to a minimum clogging or corrosion in plumbing and heating equipment. Such water-softening equipment is manufactured by a number of firms who will make an analysis of the water to be treated and upon that basis recommend the type and size of equipment which will be most satisfactory.

Most water-softening equipment is designed for connection into the main water-supply line so that all water used within the house is treated.

At times only the domestic hot-water supply is softened, and now small portable softeners are available which can be connected to any individual faucet and provide a sufficient quantity of softened water for washing purposes.

They are (from left): Samuel S. Spruce, Harvey L. Jones and Edward R. Carr. In the right picture, Joseph Carroll (left) slides back into base while Baseman Morris Cafritz (center) and Umpire J. FOUR HUNDRED MEMBERS of the Washington Real Estate Board and guests assembled last week at Congressional Country Club for a day of golf, swimming, tennis, baseball, horseshoe pitching, bowling and foot races. The party, the fourth of its kind to be held by the local realtors, was the largest and most successful in the history of the organization. The day of pleasure opened with a golf tournament in the morning and closed with a dinner at the clubhouse, followed by entertainment and distribution of the prizes. Morris Cafritz, chairman of the board's program committee, was general planner for the enjoyable occasion. In the picture at the left, Morton J. Luchs (center), first vice president of the board, is shown following a drive down the fairway, while Charles A. Jones (left) and Frank J. Luchs, chairman of the souvenirs committee, look on. The right picture shows Louis H. Towbes behind the home plate and Garfield I. Kass getting ready for a home run.

TWO OFFICIALS AT WORK: Charles J. Rush, the board's secretary, sets a horseshoe stake, which President Melvin C. Hazen, of the District Board of Commissioners, prepares to drive in, prior to ringing it. In the rear, Chairman Crumbaugh (left), in charge of the contest, and Richard Tennyson, director, District Playground Department, superintend the task.

THE WASHINGTON POST CUP, first prize in the handicap, major event of the day's golfing program, is presented to W. H. Pardoe (left) assistant real estate officer of the National Savings & Trust Co., by R. C. O'Donnell, real estate advertising manager of the publication. Following presentation of the cup, Mr. O'Donnell distributed the remainder of The Post's prizes to J. G. Pascoe, John H. Davidson, Arthur H. Urban and B. L. Colton, other golf winners.

Shenandoah Valley Throng to Honor Home Town Boy Now Big Leaguer

Caravan Set For Trek to Nats' Park

1,500 Expected to Make Pilgrimage in Honor of Ben Huffman.

One week from today hundreds of baseball fans of the Shenandoah Valley will journey by train and automobiles to Washington to honor a native son who has in less than one year skyrocketed from collegiate baseball to a berth on the St. Louis Brown's team.

The event: The Washington Post—Shenandoah Valley day honoring Benny Huffman.

The time and place: Griffith Stadium 3 p. m. Sunday, June 20.

Each person attending this game should obtain from his chamber of commerce a free ticket which admits him to the special section when accompanied by a general admission ticket to be purchased at the gate. Be sure to save your free ticket as this is your identification for a seat in the section set aside for the visiting fans.

Last Thursday young Huffman chalked up a bit of neat baseball playing by getting a two-base hit against the Nats with the bases full to win the game, 6-3. The game was played at St. Louis.

Time will tell, but at the moment it appears that Clark Griffith's prayer for a youthful and hard-hitting catcher might have been answered last summer had he looked down in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and sized up young Benny Huffman, of the Harrisonburg semipro club which won the penants in both the Valley and Augusta leagues.

Huffman today has caught several games for the St. Louis Browns and is said to be one of the principal reasons why Manager Rogers Hornsby is willing to part with Rollie Hemsley, his star receiver.

No Pro Experience.

This Huffman who lives near Luray, in the shadow of the Shenandoah National Park, had no professional experience until he joined the Browns. Only 20 years old, he has plenty of natural ability and above all listens to the older heads and improves from their advice.

The Griffith scouts who apparently passed up the Harrisonburg Club, which played day and night and won 60 of 88 games in the two leagues, may be excused by the fact that Huffman played rightfield most of the time for Harrisonburg. The playing-manager, Galen Warren, who spent two seasons with the Philadelphia Athletics, caught most of the games, being considered the better catcher. Huffman was kept in the line-up for his vicious hitting. He compiled an average of .375 to rank with the league leaders and was most dependable with men on base.

Played at Bridgewater.

This time last year, Huffman was behind the plate for Bridgewater College, a small Virginia college near Harrisonburg, and he made his batting felt in all the Eagles games although the college record was not impressive. He also played football at the institution and was to have returned to the campus last fall. Instead, he laid off during the fall and winter and, went to Ray Doan's' Baseball School at Hot Springs, Ark., in the spring. Hornsby, one of the instructors at the school, immediately saw the natural ability in Huffman and took him to the St. Louis Browns camp. The Page County lad immediately made good.

Huffman played with New Market and Woodstock, in the Valley League, two seasons ago, and then with the Front Royal All-Stars, boasting of one of the strongest semi-pro clubs in the Old Dominion. He started playing at Luray High School and while a member of that team clouted the first home run ever hit on the spacious Harrisonburg field—to the sorrow of the then host club.

Played Eight Games.

The Harrisonburg Club of last summer averaged eight games a week, frequently playing a game away from home in the afternoon and performing at home a night. Last Fourth of July, the club played morning, afternoon and night games. This experience apparently toughened Huffman to the rigors of every day, if not major league baseball. The youngster gained from his Bridgewater College experience his adeptness at handling wild pitches. He can hit the ball as hard as anyone and with Harrisburg was equally at home against southpaws or righthanders. He is a lefthand hitter.

The Harrisonburg Club was too good to be retained for another year. Hank Mazza, its ace hurler, is under contract with the St. Louis Browns. Lefty Hudson is performing with Knoxville. Eddie Ignasiak and Red McGee, first sacker and outfielder, have been farmed out in Richmond to South Boston in the Class D Bi-State League.

Around the Ring...

By Bill McCormick.

Should it come to pass that a large Irishman named James J. Braddock smacks bulky negro known as Joe Louis into fistic oblivion, Freddie Steele, the middleweight champion, automatically would become the ring's No. 1 performer and drawing card.

McCORMICK.

Which would be a great thing for Washington since Steele is scheduled to tangle with Hobo Williams in Mr. Griffith's apple orchard on the night of July 20.

Had Steele been destined to grow just a bit larger he would right now occupy the place in the ring that is Louis'. Unfortunately, Frederiek finds it difficult to weigh more than 154 or 155 pounds, wringing wet and without a haircut.

The ring being what it is and the public being what it is, whatever that is), a colorful heavyweight always dominates the scene, even though, on occasion, the dominant figure is not a great fighter. That is the reason Steele, at this writing, is considered only the second heat drawing card in the business, even though most observers grant that he is the greatest fighter in the ring today.

So, should Mr. Braddock humble Mr. Louis in their Chicago fuss, Steele automatically would take the place in the spotlight that is rightfully his anyway but for the vagaries of the public fancy. It's a cinch that no other fighter except Louis has the color which so fires the imagination.

Freddie's color in the ring is easy enough to define. It comes from his cold, methodical way of doing business, which is in direct contrast to his actions out of the ring. It comes fro mhis two-fisted punching prowess, his ringmanship. In other words, his ring actions are so well nigh perfect one cannot help but gaze in awe, and come back again every time Steele performs to absorb some more awe.

Out of the ring Steele's appeal is more elusive. He has none of the characteristics of your typical pug but is just a calmly confident young man of the type one usually finds peddling bonds, riding to the hounds or earnestly studying engineering.

Steele's opponent in the Washington war is, to the mind of this column's proprietor, the perfect foil. Perhaps in the story behind the selection of Williams as an opponent for the great champion lies a better explanation of his fitness than we could write.

The Variety Club, that organization of showmen which will stage the bout, has been quietly planning a venture into the realms of sport for many months. Being showmen, with an appreciation of the likes and dislikes of the Washington public gained through long years of bringing you your weekly entertainment, they realized that nothing, but the best would do.

The best was Freddie Steele. An emissary of the club, with a good knowledge of fights and fighters, was sent to scout Freddie while the Tacoma lad was working under the banner of Mike Jacobs, the New York cauliflower impresario.

"There are only two types of fighter that have a chance with Steele," he reported after a careful survey. "A superlatively clever boxer has an outside chance. A rough, tough unorthodox kid with no fear of any living man has a much better chance!"

The only boxers in the middleweight division clever enough to give Freddie a real tussle were engaged in other places. Teddy Yarosz, the Pittsburgher, who once held the championship and is batlintg his way back to another title shot, was holdin out for a bout with Steele in Pittsburgh, where such a contest will draw at least $10,000. en Overlin already had been signed to box Steele in Tacoma, Wash. So it went.

There was developing right under the noses of the club's scouts just the lad called for by their own prescription in the person of young Williams. A legitimate middleweight, he had cleaned up everything in that division tossed at him by the local promoters and had fared forth into the light-heavyweight and heavyweight divisions with more than moderate success.

Never on the floor, Williams had shown an ability to absorb punishment that indicates he will not collapse from a punch thrown even by such a one as Steele. His courage he demonstrated by time and time again wading into formidable opposition without fear of consequences. No one could deny that his whoopla style of swinging punches was confusing enough to bewilder even a master of the ring, nor could they deny his knockout punch.

As further proof of the scout's opinion that an unorthodox, fearless fighter would give Steele a good fight any time, the record showed that Freddie never had been able to decisively whip one Young Stuhley.

Young Stuhley no longer is as young as he once was, but he is just the type of Williams and he gave Freddie fits on two successive occasions.

With that proof of the soundness of the contest, the Variety Club then went ahead with the negotiations which brought Steele from the Coast when everyone said only a Mike Jacobs could lure him East.

German Netters Win.

Berlin, June 12.—The German Davis Cup team advanced to the final round of the European zone competition today when Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Henrich Henkel defeated Andre la Croix and L. de Borman of Belgium, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4. The Germans won the first two singles matches yesterday.

STRICTLY ABOUT THE MIDDLEWEIGHT DIVISION: . . . because FREDDIE STEELE, called the greatest since STANLEY KETCHELL, is coming here July 20 to box CHARLES (HOBO) WILLIAMS . . . the largest gate in the division was drawn by MICKEY WALKER and HARRY GREB, who pulled $375,000 into the box office . . . and then fought each other all over for nothing on the street later in the night . . . it seems that Greb won their scheduled battle by a stirring last-round rally . . . after the fight, Mickey and Harry set out in different directions to celebrate . . . but ran into each other in about the tenth night club they hit . . . and decided to pair up to make a night of it . . . which they did very successfully until about the twentieth night club . . . when they began arguing about their fight . . . started calling each other names . . . and wound up battling again in the street . . . a big Irish cop pulled them apart, slapped them about a bit and sent them to bed with the admonition, "Yez should be ashamed of yourselfs, quarrelin' loike school bhoys, when yez could get paid for it" . . . the great Ketchell was one of the few champions ever to regain lost laurels . . . he dropped his title to BILLY PAPKE on September 8, 1908 . . . then flattened Papke on November 26, the same year . . . That's not hard to believe after seeing some of 'em . . . However, Charley will return to Maryland to graduate in the February class.

From Tee To Green

BY MERRELL WHITTLESEY

WHITTLESEY.

The recent medal performances of Volney Burnett, the smooth-stroking Indian Spring ace, threaten to make the local golfing situation a one-man show. George Voigt, Roland MacKenzie, Harry Pitt and Roger Peacock all monopolized links play here in their respective eras, but not since the consistent high 60-shooting of Voigt has the play of Burnett been equaled.

Volney inaugurated the season with mediocre performances in the Woodmont and Chevy Chase invitations, scoring 78 in each, but since his 71 at Manor in the Invitation Tourney qualifying rounds the third week of May, he's been a sure winner every time he challenged old man par, who's rarely over 72.

In order, including last Thursday's match play rounds at Manor, Burnett has scored, 71, Manor Invitation medal; 71, Baltimore C. C. Invitation medal; 69-70, Inter-Departmental medal winner, at Indian Spring; 71-72, Maryland State medal winner, at Manor, and 68-72, winner of first two matches, Maryland amateur at Manor.

The Manor course is made to order for Volney's game, requiring straight drives and niblick pitches. His niblick is his most accurate club. He exhibited his tee-shooting prowess against Martin McCarthy, who is no slouch with a driver, in the first round match last week by driving on the sixth green 305 yards uphill, reaching the ninth carpet with a drive and five iron, 471 yards uphill, and overdriving the twelfth hole, 329 yards, including running through a trap.

His 71 in the Manor qualifying was fashioned from a sub-par 34 and a 37. At Baltimore, Volney played the first nine in 33, on a course considered good enough for the National Amateur in 1933, slipped over on the thirteenth, birdied the next and stood on the sixteenth tee requiring par in for a 68, but finished 5-3-6 for a 71.

The Government Championship Tournament found Volney on his home course and his 69-70 will probably set a 36-hole record for the Four Corners layout. Seven birdies and an eagle dotted the card over the 36-hole route, and a tough break when his ball settled in a tractor mark on the tenth hole cost him two and possibly three strokes. 36-34-33-36, in order, rattled off his clubs, the total was four strokes lower than the best of the Middle-Atlantic professionals shot in the P. G. A. qualifying rounds, a few weeks previous.

An even par 35, and three 36's in the State qualifying rounds shot Volney's average a trifle over 70, a disastrous two over par 6 on the fifth hole causing most of the damage.

He came right back the next day against Martin McCarthy and was three under par for the duration of the match, completing his round for a medal score for a 68. He skidded over on the par three seventeenth hole.

In the afternoon against Otto Greiner he was 72, paring the last 13 holes in succession.

His club handicap at Indian Spring is exemplary of his medal shooting, the bespectacled ace boasting a scratch handicap.

The happiest man in the Maryland State amateur last week was not the medalist, the winner, but a man that lost his first round match, 4 and 3. It was Gillie Young, whose average game runs between 85 and 92, that shot a 36 against Harry Pitt on the first nine and was one up.

Gillie is a recent devotee to the game of golf but takes it as seriously as though his life depended on every shot. He played in the State amateur, knowing he was not likely to qualify but as luck would have it only 31 entered and his score, an average of 93 for the two qualifying rounds, made the grade.

The chance of the draw pitted him against Harry Pitt, who can play Manor blindfolded in 75 or under, and they were calling Gillie's defeat on the tenth hole. But they failed to reckon with four pars, two birdies and three one over par holes that were posted by George Diffenbaugh's protege on the woods nine for a 36, including a missed 2-footer on the ninth, and Harry Pitt was one down. Gillie slipped on the longer second nine but it was all right. It was his second surprise of the week, as he won a box of golf balls in the pro-amateur at Hillendale last Monday. Watch him go in the Middle-Atlantic.

Calling All Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

Never have I been able to understand why some dogs are crazy to kill rats and why other dogs of the same breeds will pay no more attention to a scurrying rat than to an ant of a cockroach.

"Ratting" has been a popular canine sport—popular with both the dogs themselves and with their owners and backers—for many centuries. A terrier, in England, last year, killed its eight-hundredth rat; and the occasion was celebrated in press and sporting circles. Collies of my own—notably Sunnybank Lochinvar—have piled u gory records of the same kind, tackling rats with uncanny speed and skill, heedless of painful retaliating bites on nose and mouth. Others of my collies have refused to pay the slightest attention to the sinister gray pests.

Irish terriers are supposed to be among the best rat-slayers; and most of them are. But my disreputably lovable Irish terrier, Sunnybank Chips, looked on rats with no interest at all until she decided, mistakenly, that they would form an ideal diet for a litter of fluffy collie pups she had adopted. Since then she has been an inspired and tireless rat-catcher.

More Mercy; Less Law.

Few are the communities, large or small, whose statute books are hot cluttered with dozens of ordinances dealing with dogs. In the main, htese statutes are more or less sensible and necessary. But practically all are planned for the protecting of humans against canine depredations. Which is well, but not complete.

Seldom have I read of any set of muhicipal laws for the benefiting of dogs. rue, the S. P. C. A. has done splendid work toward framing and enforcing the one or two statutes which seek to safeguard them. But the vast bulk of laws are anti-dog: He must be muzzled. He must be kept on the leash. He must not stray from his owner's property. He must be looked on as rabid until he has proved he is not; etc.

How about supplementing them, somewhat as follows?

Provide for the placing of low drinkihg-dishes, at intervals, on the streets; and keeping them filled with fresh cool water. This, to save dogs from wholesale thirst torture and from its results.

Provide occasional shelter sheds as refuge from weather. Insist on merciful types of muzzles. Enclose certain vacant lots and other unused open spaces, as canine exercise grounds. In short, more mercy, less law.

The One-Man Dog.

The one-man dog is not as common as he is supposed to be. Some dogs born with the "one man" tendency, go through life without happening to find the one man to whom they are ready to give their exclusive allegiance. Others adopt some human as their god and will not even bestow common civility on anybody else. But I think these are exceptions.

The average dog is ready and willing to make friends with certain humans, other than his master. Not that he will worship and serve any of them, as he serves and worships the right kind of owner. But he is willing to be on pleasant terms with them.

Remember, there is as much difference in dogs as in people, so far as character is concerned. You will find friendly dogs of some so-called savage breed; and vicious dogs of some of the gentler breeds. For instance: among my Sunnybank collies there are two dogs of the same parentage and of exactly the same upbringing. One of them in devoted to the Mistress and to me, in the order named; but he is fiercely standoffish to all the rest of mankind. The other collie is a sort of canine reception committee; greeting every stranger with effusive affection. Any thief could steal her, if only he would pat her while he was doing so.

Bad Luck!

Newsom Hurls Ball That Breaks Arm of Hayworth.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 12.—Ray Hayworth, catcher of the Detroit Tigers, suffered a broken arm in the fourth inning of the second game against Boston today when hit by a ball pitched by Louis (Buck) Newsom.

Word from the Detroit dugout said the arm was broken between the wrist and the elbow.

Hayworth is the second Tiger catcher to be injured this season.

Manager Mickey Cochrane, hit on the head by a pitched ball May 26 at New York, is in Ford Hospital here with a triple skull fracture.

George (Birdie) Tebbetts, a rookie, the only available catcher on the Detroit roster, replaced Hayworth in the line-up.

Marvin Owens, third baseman, suffered a fracture in his left hand several days ago.

Eastern Shore League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, June 12.—While eight additional batsmen were bombarding their way into the select 300 class of hitters in the Eastern Shore League, last week's three leading hiters dropped back to make way for replacements.

The computation of reports received by the league statistician prior to Thursday night shows Pitko, Centreville; Archer, Dover, and Morris, Federalsburg, last week's leaders who were then well out in front dropped several percentage points and went below .400 for the first time.

Meanwhile, Roetz, former major leaguer and pilot of the Dover Orioles, climbed to .466 to lead all aspirants. Ivanicki, Cambridge first-sacker with .439, and H. Boyce, Federalsburg keystone bag guardian with .406, ranked second and third. They were the only .400 hiters.

Thirty-two shore leaguers made the .30 mark or better. In this class Federalsburg had seven men; Dover, 5; Cambridge, Salisbury and Easton, 4 each; Crisfield and Pocomoke, 3 each, and Centreville, 2.

Petworth First Grade Pupils Stage Thrilling Drama of Peter Rabbit

William Cumberland Scores in Title Role

Farmer MacGregor and Mother Rabbit Are Other Favorite Characters; Whooping Cough Nearly Spoils It All.

By Jay Walz.

Probably the most popular of all story-book personages is Peter Rabbit. And there isn't a youngster in school who wouldn't have liked to be one of the birds to help Peter out of the trap old Farmer MacGregor set in the cabbage patch.

Enthusiasm for this tale ran so high at Petworth School this spring that the first-graders decided to stage the adventure in a thrilling drama.

Luckiest member of the class was young William Cumberland, to whom fell the role of Peter Rabbit. Ready to go on for the first performance of the class' production last week, Billy said he was pretty happy, and considered this part the best that has come his way yet.

"I like acting," he said, "and I suppose I'll go on doing other parts later on. But right now I think the character I am in is tops."

The long muslin rabbit ears clipped to Billy's head did flip flops as he energetically told the story of the play in which he was the hero. He didn't seem to mind being interviewed as the moment for his entrance neared.

Billy and his classmates had to begin with creating a script. It doesn't seem possible that a play about Peter Rabbit hasn't already been written. But if there has been the first grade couldn't get hold of it. Besides, the members felt an urge to go ahead with their own play. Their teacher said it wasn't a hard thing to work out at all. A series of conferences produced not only the scenes but also the words that each of the actors were to say. Appropriate action, known in the profession as "business," was also decided upon. It wasn't long until rehearsals were under way.

How Rehearsals Worked.

The cast was chosen not so much in formal tryout as in actual work during rehearsals. It was reported that some changes were made during the course of rehearsals because some of the actors didn't quite fit the characters. That is the way the play was worked up.

While Billy Cumberland was generally considered to have the "lead" inasmuch as he was in the title role, there was some difference of opinion about who had the biggest job of acting on his hands.

Charles Reed Ward, who was "Farmer MacGregor," had an admirer in the class who said: "Everybody likes Peter Rabbit and we all sympathize with him. So that part isn't so hard to play. Personally, I think Farmer MacGregor has the toughest job. Nobody likes him, nobody sympathizes with him."

Old MacGregor has to do real acting, because even the actor who is portraying him doesn't like him, explained this friend of Actor Ward. In one of the dramatic scenes, Farmer MacGregor has to chase Peter Rabbit out of the cabbage patch with a hoe. The farmer nabs Peter, and yanks off his jacket for the scarecrow. Now no one in real life would want to treat poor, hungry Peter like that. Only an actor, a good one, could possibly do it.

The whole class took as much pride in the scenery as in the acting. The youngsters had painted Farmer MacGregor's garden on a backdrop, and had pasteboarded rows of cabbages and tomatoes out on the stage.

All the problems of play production were overcome neatly in the three weeks the Petworth class spent on their Peter Rabbit play. But one development beyond the control of all nearly wrecked the whole project—in fact, did force an advance in the date of performance. Whooping cough broke out in the school and threatened the cast.

"We were afraid it might get Peter Rabbit or Farmer MacGregor," said the teacher, "when it would be too late to replace them. So we played safe and staged the play a week ahead of time."

Radio, Rides, Rhythm In New Style Three R's

Baseball and Swing to Invade School as Recognized Subjects Next Fall, and the Pupils Are Interested.

By George Wells.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, June 13.—A little more of the golden rule seems to be creeping into New York City's public school days.

The three R's soon will stand for radio, rides and rhythm.

Even the teachers are going to school to learn baseball to the tune of a hickory stick made in Louisville. Such eminent "professors" as Bill Terry, of the Giants, and Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, will swing the sticks at Columbia Teachers College this summer.

And swing itself will invade the school next fall as a recognized subject, not something racing through Willie's mind while teacher is talking about Beethoven. Benny Goodman and Paul Whiteman are among those invited to instruct pupils in the art of stimulating the suzi-Q.

These and other modern educational trends as exemplified today at the Speyer Public School, the city's laboratory in instruction, soon will make school so much a part of the world Willie lives in that he won't even think of playing hookey.

More Golden Rule.

Moreover, according to Benjamin B. Greenberg, assistant superintendent of schools, elementary division, in charge of the Speyer experiment, the pupils are doing unto their teachers as their teachers would do unto them.

"This experiment is doing a great deal for teachers and principals, as well as the children," Greenberg said.

The kids at Speyer—there are 225 of them chosen in February, 1936, to go to school for five years under the same teachers—are learning reading and writing and arithmetic and geography fast via the new three R's of radio, rides and rhythm.

Instead of dozing behind the big geography book, the 8 to 11½-year Speyer class chose to absorb this subject by making musical instruments. How?

The drums—Haiti; the bells—China; reeds—Greece; string instruments—Hawaii; folk songs—United States. Get it, you graduates of the old three R's?

No Multiplication.

The kids at Speyer—150 of the 225 are called slow learners—don't get any multiplication tables or long division in what is comparable to the third grade.

There is Agnes, who was one of those selected to attend the school when it opened. To her, arithmetic was anathema.

"The mere mention of arithmetic," said Miss Ruth Berken, her teacher, "immediately set up a wall between me and the girl. Well, she went to the stores with the children to buy cloth for curtains, reeds for the musical instruments, paid for them herself and counted the change.

"Then she measured everything for her part of the project, figuring out exactly how long the reed must be or the piece of cloth she was seaming for a curtain.

"She's beginning to inquire about arithmetic now."

Ivan hated books. Endless rows of figures on a blackboard terrorized him. The great out of doors called him often. In short, Ivan was an inveterate hookey player.

But not now. Ivan's too interested. He climbs into cockpits of airplanes on excursions to airports; knows virtually every museum and art gallery in town.

The teachers at Speyer have to find out by intelligence tests and repeated visits to homes and neighbors, something about the material they are charged with moulding.

"Then," said Greenberg, "the children select their own program. Only trips, concerts, moving pictures and gallery visits are planned ahead. Gradually the teacher shapes the program within the limits of the children's abilities and tastes."

Army Quartermaster Corps, 162 Years Old Wednesday, Looks Back on Varied Career

Supply Unit Older Than Nation Itself

Formed in 1775 by Order of Second Continental Congress.

First Head Given Salary of Only $80 Per Month.

On Wednesday the Army Quartermaster Corps celebrates its 162d birthday—it is older even than the Nation itself.

The Quartermaster Corps was born June 16, 1775, in the Old State House of Pennsylvania, now Independence Hall at Philadelphia. There the Second Continental Congress, a revolutionary body without legal sanction, appointed George Washington to the supreme command of an army of independence—an army that existed only in the minds of patriots who were members of the Congress.

The same day that Washington was given command, the Quartermaster Corps was born. The Congress passed a resolution authorizing the commanding general to appoint a quartermaster general and an assistant. The Congress also authorized the appointment of a commissary general of stores and provisions and a paymaster general. Out of these enactments, the Quartermaster Corps of today has developed.

From the first, the corps had an erratic career. The first quartermaster general was Col. Thomas Mifflin, whose commission was dated August 14, 1775. His salary was fixed at $80 a month, but he later was allowed a commission of 5 per cent on a quantity of woolen goods.

Troubled Existence.

For the next few years the Quartermaster Corps led a troubled career. Col. Mifflin; though his later career was distinguished by a term in Congress, the presidency of Congress in 1784 and three terms as Governor of Pennsylvania, lacked genius for organizing the corps. Disastrous experiences, particularly those at Valley Forge when both the quartermaster and commissary departments broke down, prefaced a reorganization which came in 1778. The effect on the troops was instantaneous.

Perhaps one reason was the ration provided by the new chief of the commissary department, Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth. It consisted of:

1½ pounds of bread

1 pound of beef, fish or pork and beans

1 gill (a quarter of a pint) of whiskey

In 1785 the Quartermaster Corps, as such, ceased to exist. The Army had been reduced to a few thousand men and the functions of supply were handled directly by the War Department, acting under the Articles of Confederation. But when the new Government was organized, a quartermaster, not a quartermaster general, was authorized by the new Congress. But in 1792 the post was abolished when, at the suggestion of the Alexander Hamilton, all purchasing functions were transferred to the Treasury Department. Four years later the post was recreated, only to be eclipsed for a decade by an act of Congress in 1802.

Jesup Takes Charge.

The imminence of the War of 1812 was responsible for the resurrection of the quartermaster department. For the next six years the department was experimented with, reorganized and various measures prescribed when its unique figure—Brevet Col. Thomas S. Jesup—was appointed quartermaster general by President Monroe on May 8, 1818.

For 42 years he served in that post—more than one-quarter of the total life of the corps. His long career is rivaled only by that of Gen. George Gibson, who served as commissary general for 43 years—from 1818 to 1861.

A native of Virginia, Col. Jesup was appointed a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1808 when only 20 years old. During the War of 1812 he was wounded in action several times, brevetted lieutenant colonel and later colonel for gallantry at the Battles of Chippewa and Niagara and finally taken prisoner when Gen. Hull surrendered to the British.

In 1836 President Jackson detached Gen. Jesup from his supply duties and placed him in command of regulars and militia sent to Georgia to suppress the Indian uprising. He not only defeated the Indians, but captured large numbers of them, including the cunning chief, Osceola. Jesup was severely wounded, but insisted on continuing with his Army. For his heroism and popular reputation Jesup was suggested for President.

Unhampered by Red Tape.

Jesup was never bothered by red tape. He spent large sums of Government funds for supplies without either Congressional or departmental sanction, remarking it was useless to ask for such authority because Congress might impeach the President or the Secretary of War for authorizing expenditures. During the Mexican War he followed the Army into the field to assure himself of the adequacy of the supply facilities.

On one occasion Gen. Winfield Scott complained to the Secretary of War of the lack of quartermaster supplies and the inefficiency of the quartermasters. The complaint was forwarded to Gen. Jesup. He promptly refuted it, quoting reports he had received from one of his captains on the scene. This quartermaster corps captain, Gen. Jesup informed the Secretary, "was better qualified to command a large army than most of your generals in the field."

Under his regime, the department was thoroughly established. Many of his regulations have since been established by law. When he died in office in 1860, the department was established on a firm basis; it was his work that was largely responsible for the department's success during the Civil War.

Following the Civil War, as again 50 years later, the quartermaster department was given the job of identifying and transferring the bodies of those who fell in battle to National cemeteries.

Another post-Civil War responsibility was the construction of public buildings in Washington. Gen. Montgomery C. Meigs was especially proud of the old Pension Building, and once escorted Gen. Sherman through it shortly after its completion.

"An excellent stable for Army mules," was Sherman's judgment.

"It's absolutely fireproof," urged Gen. Meigs.

"What a pity," was Sherman's reply.

During the Spanish-American War, the quartermaster organization had far from an easy time. There was a shortage of tents, a tremendous problem of transporting men and supplies, and considerable criticism was leveled at the Army because of the food given soldiers.

In 1916 Maj. Gen. H. G. Sharpe became quartermaster general, on the verge of the World War. During the next two years, the task of housing, equipping, feeding and transporting the millions of men enrolled during the World War was staggering. The quartermaster corps was tremendously expanded and thousands of experts in the fields of construction, subsistence, clothing manufacture, and rail, water and motor transportation were commissioned as officers in the corps.

Gradually, through its long career, the quartermaster corps had been tremendously changed. In 1912 the three branches—commissary, subsistence and pay departments—were merged. In 1920 the national defense act provided for the reorganization of the quartermaster corps and made some changes in its functions. Fiscal matters, including the payment of troops, were withdrawn from the corps and assigned to a newly created finance department.

Under existing law, the Quartermaster Corps is charged with the procurement for the Army of all supplies of standard manufacture and all supplies common to two or more branches. Special or technical articles, to be used or issued exclusively by departments, are not within its province. The Quartermaster Corps also is given direction of all work pertaining to the construction, maintenance and repair of Army buildings, structures and utilities, other than fortifications.

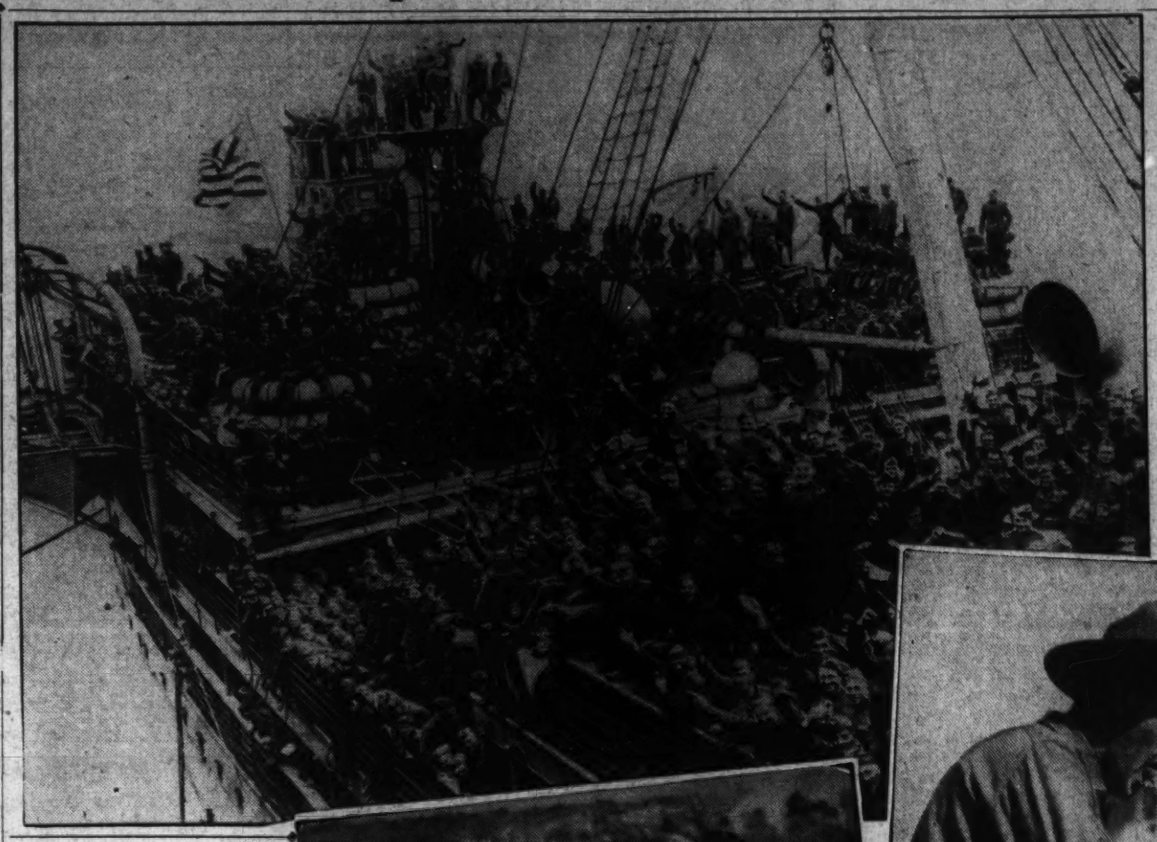
In short, the Quartermaster Corps feeds, clothes, shelters and transports the Army and handles a variety of incidental matters, including some not directly connected with its primary mission.

During the last few years, under its present chief, Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, and his predecessors, Maj. Gens. B. F. Cheatham and John L. DeWitt, fundamental changes have been made in the organization of the Quartermaster Corps. A uniform storage system, perfections in procurement arrangements, and changes in the Office of the Quartermaster General, where the procurement division and the storage and distribution division replaced the supply division, have been organized.

Divided Into Five.

To carry on its functions, the Office of the Quartermaster General has been divided into five sections—administrative, procurement, storage and distribution, transportation and construction. In general, the duties of each division are indicated by its name.

The administrative division has charge of fiscal matters, including estimates of funds required for quartermaster operations and the maintenance of accounts of all quartermaster appropriations. This division supervised pilgrimages by war mothers and widows to cemeteries abroad. The procurement division co-ordinates the standardization of all articles, handles matters dealing with patents and supervises tests and specification work. The transportation division handles all transportation; one important function is the operation of the Army transport service, handling the movement of personnel and cargo from continental United States to overseas possessions and also supervising the operation of harbor boats and other craft. In addition to its obvious duties, the construction division handles such matters as construction of Air Corps flying fields and makes studies in community planning and landscaping.



ON Wednesday the Army Quartermaster Corps will celebrate its 162nd birthday. It is older than the Nation itself. It began as a revolutionary body without legal sanction in the old State House of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. From that time on it had an erratic career, and has since been reorganized and changed so that it would hardly recognize itself. The Quartermaster Corps handles transport problems, food, supervises the operation of harbor boats and other craft, constructs flying fields and makes studies in community planning and landscaping.

THE Quartermaster Corps of the Army is in charge of all the supplies used by the Army. It was this branch of the service which was faced with the job of shipping troops to France and providing for their return. The Army marches on its stomach and that stomach is kept well fed and healthy by the Quartermaster Corps.

D. C. Reservist Ranks First In Tests for Naval Academy

Washington Battalion Also Wins 15 Out of 25 Midshipmen's Appointments; Summer Training Cruise to West Indies.

The First Battalion, United States Naval Reserve, in Washington, for the second year in succession had the distinction of having one of its class of candidates for the Naval Academy via the Naval Reserve win first place in the competitive examinations. David M. Armstrong, son of Lieut. and Mrs. W. B. Armstrong, of Cabin John Park, Md., an apprentice seaman attached to the First Fleet division, made a mark of 3.8 out of a possible 4.0.

In addition to having the number one candidate, the Washington battalion took 15 of the 25 appointments to the Academy, more than any other unit in the United States.

Armstrong, a graduate of Western High School and the Columbian Preparatory School, enlisted in the local battalion in April, 1936, and last summer made the training cruise to the West Indies. With the other appointees from the Washington battalion he will enter the Naval Academy in July as a member of the new fourth class.

Men May Enlist Now.

The Washington battalion is now enlisting men who plan to compete for the 25 Naval Reserve appointments to the Naval Academy for 1938. Candidates for these appointments must enlist in the reserve prior to July 1, 1937. Enlistments are received each Tuesday evening at the Naval Reserve Armory at the Navy Yard.

The drill schedule for the month of June calls for a battalion inspection on the evening of June 22. Since the preview of the naval picture, "Wings Over Honolulu," given at the conclusion of the last inspection, proved so popular it is expected the battalion commander may again arrange for the showing of another film. The last picture was shown at the Receiving Station.

Plans are now being made for the annual summer training cruise of the battalion. Last year the three Washington divisions were embarked on separate destroyers for cruises to the West Indies. This year it is expected the battalion will again cruise on individual ships. Present schedules call for the second fleet division to leave Washington during the middle of August for a cruise to the Virgin Islands. The first and third fleet divisions probably will sail early in September. Liberty ports for this cruise are not definite yet.

In preparation for the cruises, the battalion commander has ordered a number of battle problems for the summer months. These problems which are among the most important drills of the Reserves, simulate actual battle conditions which destroyers would meet in combat when serving with the fleet. The divisions of the Washington battalion are trained primarily to serve as destroyer crews and the training cruises are arranged for this purpose. It is the policy of the Navy Department to vary the schedule from time to time, however, so the citizen sailors may be familiar with other types of fighting vessels. In 1935, for example, the entire battalion was sent out on the battleship Wyoming for two weeks, and it is probable the Washington unit will again have duty on battleships in 1938.

Regular cruises on the little 50-foot motor launch have been scheduled for each week-end from June 1 to October 1. The little boat leaves the Navy Yard each Saturday afternoon with a full crew, sails down the Potomac, usually as far as Colonial Beach, and returns to Washington Sunday evening. Officers of the battalion have been trying for several years to obtain a larger boat since the present vessel is not properly equipped.

Lieuts. J. M. Fewell, E. O. Snyder and J. L. Cardwell, of the battalion, have just returned from an extensive cruise aboard the U. S. S. New York. These Reserve officers were aboard the New York during the naval review held in connection with the coronation of George VI.

Shropshire Plans Youth Hostelries

The Shropshire Highlands, a land of moorlands and deep and remote valleys, will this season enter the itinerary of tourists with the opening of numerous youth hostels. Seven-circle Shrewsbury is the gateway to this entrancing land. Those visiting Shropshire for the first time will discover the town's quaint streets and alleys which contain a wealth of magpie-colored and plaster houses, second only to Ludlow in variety and richness. The Welsh Harp Hostel stands at a height of nearly 1,100 feet on the crest of Long Mountain and is handy for excursions to the Welsh border, the land which hundreds of years ago was the cockpit of opposing Saxon and Celtic hosts. The hostels at Bridges stand at the wild ridges of Stiperstones and Long Mynd. The finest of crags is the Devils Chair, while along the ridge runs the ancient road known as the Port Way, which commands magnificent views. Shropshire has a wealth of old castles and ancient halls. The splendid old Stokesay Castle, some 8 miles north of Ludlow, is considered the oldest preserved fortified manor house in England.

Loot of Pirates Buried On 3 Jamaican Islands

In the three Cayman Islands, which are dependencies of the British colony of Jamaica, there is believed to be several large pirate hoards merely awaiting the attentions of someone energetic enough to look for them with pick and shovel.

Within the last 50 years a substantial amount of old buried treasure has been dug up. In an old wooden casket recently unearthed, 200 English pieces of silver, the size of a crown, dated in the sixteenth century, were found. The Cayman Islands were discovered by Christopher Columbus on May 10, 1503.

Odd Fellows Will Conduct Annual Memorial Pilgrimage

Grand Master Linwood E. Donaldson has directed all branches of the I. O. O. F. in Washington to join in the fourth annual pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier this afternoon in Arlington Cemetery.

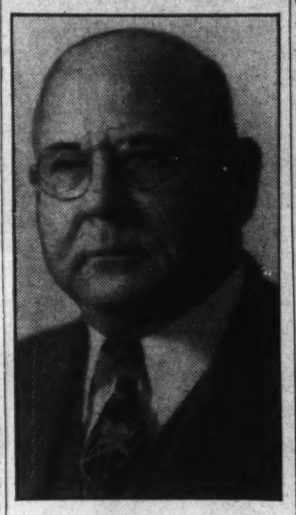
The parade will assemble at 2:30 p. m. at Fort Myer gate. The invocation will be made by Grand Chaplain Rev. Clarence H. Corkran. Grand Master Donaldson will introduce Deputy Grand Sire Thomas G. Andrews, who will give an address and place a wreath on the tomb. Other departments of the Grand Patriarchs Militant branch will then place wreaths. Grand Patriarch Herman F. Heffley will read the names of deceased members and a flower will be placed for each name by Maj. William F. Becker. Mrs. Cora H. Kincer and Sybil Will are to perform the same service for the Pythian Sisters. Department Chaplain Lieut. Col. J. R. Mentzer will read names of deceased Chevaliers of the Department of Pennsylvania and Major E. H. Spengler will place the flowers. Grand High Priest Lewis L. Beazley will conduct the benediction.

Arrangements have been made for a police escort down Seventh street on Constitution avenue and over the Memorial Bridge to Arlington Cemetery.

In view of the fact that so many visitors are coming to Washington for this Pilgrimage, the I. O. O. F. Temple at 419 Seventh street northwest will remain open all day today to accommodate them.

Immediately after the Pilgrimage until 6 p. m., a reception in honor of Deputy Grand Sire Andrews will be held by Grand Representation Guy F. Glossbrenner and Mrs. Glossbrenner, representative to the Associated Rebekah assemblies, at their home, 3836 Fulton street northwest.

On Resolution by the grand lodge of the District of Columbia in session January 27 and 28, 1937, it was adopted that the annual Memorial



THOMAS G. ANDREWS.

Pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery in June of each year be endorsed by the grand lodge and that the department of the District of Columbia, patriarchs militant, assume sponsorship thereof.

Although the order recently celebrated its 118th anniversary the annual pilgrimage was not started until 1934, when it was originated by the then grand master, Charles B. Lampe, as a local Odd Fellow function. It was originated by him as a means of honoring not only the Unknown Soldier and the Country's dead but members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows who perished in the late World War and those of the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia, who passed on during the year.

Odd Fellowship is an organization peculiar to itself. It has a paramount fundamental law embodied in the form of a written constitution emanating from and presided over by the sovereign grand lodge, whose chief executive is called the grand sire and who is chosen by that body.

The Order of Odd Fellows originated in England in the eighteenth century. In the early part of that century, Daniel DeFoe mentions the Society of Odd Fellows and in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1745 the Odd Fellow Lodge is mentioned. These lodges in England were formed for social purposes and for giving aid and employment to its members. Odd Fellowship is a moral and not a religious organization.

'Toonerville' Phase of Flying Passes

Transport Pilots Lose Personal Touch With Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 12.—An era in American aviation, a swift-pased ten years peopled with such figures as Charles A. Lindbergh and Will Rogers, will end next month, and as the bok closes on its accomplishments a man will begin gathering the dust which makes legends.

The man is a composite individual, the transport pilot of yesteyear who knew his passengers' first names and their home towns, and sometimes even about Aunt Kate's arthritis) before the plane was ten minutes away.

Will Rogers knew him well, for he was piloting the late American humorist acros mountain and plain in the days which cemented the close personal relationship between flier and passenger. Even after Col. Lindbergh laid out a transcontinental route from New York to Los Angeles and trimotored transports were born, the man at the helm of a passenger-laden plane in scheduled flight made it his business to see that everybody after was comfortable and easy of mind.

Forte WasSmall Plane.

His forte, of course, was the small airplane, fitted with three or four seats. His Nemesis is the big airplane, that impersonal aggregation of instrivate machinery with a mechanical department up forward where two visored and efficient gentlemen run the thing.

Next month the last of the single-motored gnats which used to thresh the air whrever a tail wind offered help will be discarded. In their stead, arney Air Transport, one of the pioneer companies, now operating between El Pas, Tex., and Pueblo, Colo., will place in operation swift new bimotored equipment.

If yesterdayyears transport pilot, bouncing along at 100 miles an hour, is a composite pilot, Al Cabana may well represent him. Al will have a visaged headgear pretty soon, and he wont be able to pass those notes back to his cabin passengers any more. He liked that. Made everything chummy.

Gets Bored by Scenery.

On these long jumps over the mountains, with nothing but the radio range beacon and airport orders to listen to, it helps pass the time to talk with his passengers. A man gets bored looking at the scenery over the same route for five long years. He knows to the second when he will sight old Fort Union.

His schdule worries him. If the mailman is three minutes late at the airport in Trinidad, Al drums with this fingers on the leather circlet of his cockpit. His schedule reads, "Ar. Pueblo 5:35 p: m:, and that is his obligation to the passengers behind him.

"Over the hump now," he scribbles on a pad and passes it back sengers' compartment bulkhead. "Hold you hat, 11,000 feet."

The pilot-passenger friendship through a small porthole in the pasgrew up back in 1927, in the days when National Air Transport was flying three-seat Travelair machines between Chicago and Dallas, and Northwest Airlines was running four-place Stinsons from Chicago to Minneapolis.

About that time, too, two-passenger Ryan monoplanes were plying between Chicago and St. Louis. Boling biplanes, with a brace of passengers squeezed into a tiny cabin in front of a pilot who rode in the open air, soon were droning between Chicago and the West Coast.

Then the Ford company brought out an all-metal job with three motors, andtors, and men shook their heads over all that speed of 110 miles an hour, and reckoned the millennium had been reached.

The Ford, perhaps, ushered in the divorce between pilot and passenger, and the Boeing low wing, also carrying 10 passengers, but at the fabulous speed of 160 miles an hour, abetted it. Today the passenger in a 14 or 21 passenger air liner seldom knows the men beyond the forward bulkhead except by their uniforms.

"Swell!" says Cabana of the new, great-winged jobs as he pumps down the landing gear and brings down his little puddle-jumper on three points, but it sounds like nostalgia.

'Poor Man's Orchid' Beautifies Countryside Through Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky

Collectors Have Spread New Types Over States

Best Time for Dividing and Resetting Iris Follows Blooming Period; Bichloride of Mercury Rids Plants of Borers.

By Katherine Pozer.

"Poor man's orchid" is a justly deserved title for the iris. It maintains its air of fragility and elegance in spite of the happy faculty of growing almost anywhere and under any condition, and no flower is more universally grown.

In a motor trip from Washington south through Virginia, Tennessee, and Kentucky, during iris time, these "fragments of the rainbow," as F. Marion Shull calls them in the title of his splendid book, brightened every mile of the way: roadside and civic planting; at the entrance gates to great estates; in gardens in cities and towns; every farmhouse had them and there were many seen at the doorsteps of cabins in the Blue Ridge, Allegheny and Smoky mountains. It was surprising to see the newer types growing in the most out of the way places, and to realize that in a few years the descendants of those first roots, bought by a possible collector, had traveled far and that their spread had come about almost entirely by the spirit of neighborly exchange. This thought added to the beauty of the blossoms, which in many cases had deteriorated, for it is that spirit that is found in gardeners which adds to the value of the great garden movement which is sweeping the entire world.

Following the blooming period is the best time for dividing and resetting iris and for passing on to neighbors the extra rhizomes. To new growers always give the advice of leaving the top half of the rhizome uncovered and to take care not to re-cover it when doing other work later in the garden. The iris borer is so often found and amateur gardeners will welcome the following advice in its extermination given by Dr. Cynthia Westcott in her article, "One Hour a Week Is Enough," in the June copy of American Home. She says:

"I see signs of the iris borer, ragged, water-soaked leaves with dried tips. Dig out the clumps and go over carefully, cut out every borer; trim the fans back to 6 inches, and then soak the whole plant for about 20 minutes in a solution of bichloride of mercury, two tablets to a quart of water (1 to 1,000) dilution. Some people roll rhizomes in a material called Cuoro-Jabonite instead. Then, and most important to my mind, in preventing that slimy foul smelling soft rot which so often follows the borer, let the plants dry in the sun for a day or two."

A cool spot in summer is a rock garden and pool tucked into a corner of the garden. Mrs. Roy Wilson's garden, above, is a good example of what may be done with shrubs and water plants. Mrs. Jay W. Johns, left, is photographed in the garden at Ash Lawn, the former home of President Monroe. She is the president of the Capital Division of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association.

Gardens of members of the Potomac Rose Society were opened for members and their friends recently. Mrs. Whitman Cross, who is chairman of the visiting gardens committee, arranged the tour. The gardens seen were those of William Betts, Miss Gladys Visel, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Norfleet, Mrs. F. P. Wilcox, and James B. Bronson. With the roses at the height of their bloom, the tour proved of interest and of value as many of the newer roses were seen for the first time. The garden of Dr. and Mrs. Cross was opened and a fee charged, the proceeds to go toward the rose test gardens of George Washington University, in which the Rose Society is greatly interested.

Nature Walk.

The public has responded to the invitation to participate in the nature walks which have been conducted through the Washington parks this year. These walks are given under the auspices of C. Marshall Finnan, the park superintendent. Tomorrow afternoon there will be a walk for housewives and on the twenty-third the first junior nature walk of the season will be held.

Announcement has been made by Mrs. Felix Schneiderhorn, president of the Potomac Garden Club of Jefferson County, that the yearbook of the club was given first award at the annual meeting of the Garden Club of West Virginia, for being the best decorated book shown at the convention. Mrs. S. J. Hodges, who represented the club, was elected State vice president. Mrs. James Gutsell has been elected into the club membership. Winners at the recent show were Mrs. S. J. Hodges and Mrs. H. S. Schley.

Returning members of the Garden Club of America who attended the recent convention in St. Louis, have much to tell of the beautiful entertainment given there. Among them a trip on the river on a special chartered boat which has been turned into a floating garden. The decks had been transformed with lavender petunias, blue delphinium and lilac hydrangeas. The boat took the members to visit several antebellum gardens which skirt the river banks.

Roses Exhibited Best When Still In Tight Buds

Lasting Qualities Enhanced by the Care Taken in Cutting.

It has often been found that beginner's luck prevails in rose shows as in most things. A novice's first attempt may produce roses any expert would be proud to display. For those who are just beginners in showing the following advice is worth repeating.

To show roses properly, the process should begin when the bud is still tight, barely showing color. It may be lightly tied or bandaged with strands of soft wool, so that it will not blow open too soon; or better still covered with a small paper sack which softens the sun's rays, thus retarding its advance and protecting it from insects and accidents. If the buds open too rapidly for the show, they may be cut two or three days ahead, while tightly closed, plunged in water up to the bloom in a deep container, with wide mouth and kept in a cool cellar or refrigerator.

The lasting quality of a cut rose depends upon the time of day it is cut and the treatment it receives between cutting and exhibiting. Preferably the buds should be cut the day before the show (although very early in the morning may do), put in water up to the bloom, set aside in a cool place until the show. The stem should be saturated with water. Do not harm the foliage.

If the buds have been protected with paper or tied with wool, do not disturb them until reaching the show place; it would be well to wrap each bud carefully with tissue paper to prevent bruises.

In bringing the flowers to the show, use a closed box large enough not to crowd them. Never carry them exposed to morning air. Make sure the petals are kept dry. Even small drops of moisture will quickly discolor and even rot the petals of a partially open flower when packed in a close container. Damp absorbent moss may be wrapped around the stems but should not be allowed to touch the flowers.

It may seem great trouble to follow these rules, but is often that an otherwise perfect bloom is disqualified by some fault in handling on the way to the show.

Growing of Narcissus Gains Favor As Gardeners Increase Knowledge

Narcissus growing, which has been for many years a leading interest with the gardeners of Great Britain, has definitely taken hold in America. The shows are larger, there are many more and finer varieties, and the attendance has greatly increased. The American Horticultural Society has long been a leader on the subject and each year publishes a splendid narcissus year book. In spite of this, officials of the judging course, given by the Federated Garden Clubs of New York State, found that papers coming from garden club members from all over the country showed there was often little understanding of the divisions of so important a group as narcissus. Mrs. Jerome Coombs, horticultural chairman of the National Council Bulletin, comments on this and advises the study of the plan of the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Coombs says: "So few garden club members understand that the narcissus-daffodil group is one. Some are commonly called narcissi and some daffodils but it is time that our gardeners learned the exact terms, if they intend to grow and exhibit these flowers. It is such a fascinating subject and everyone should learn, for instance what the kinds of trumpets are, what distinguishes a barri from an incomparabilis, that the true jonquil is the small narcissus jonquilla and not the trumpet daffodil, etc." Mrs. Coombs recommends the study of the plan of study of the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania, and gives part of the notice sent out by the Pennsylvania Horticultural chairman, Mrs. Walter King Sharpe, of Chambersburg, which is as follows:

Purpose: To assemble in gardens of members as comprehensive a collection as possible to cover types, color range, blooming season, etc.

1. Become familiar with standard classifications, viz., that of the Royal Horticultural Society. (These can be obtained from the National Council of State Garden Clubs, 30 Rockfeller Plaza, New York, for 50 cents a copy.)

2. Secure catalogues from various seedmen, and order as many varieties as possible, comparing the several lists which will enable you to buy advantageously.

3. Decide upon one or two collections of your own choosing to offer members. These should include specimens of each of the various classes. A representative collection of 11 bulbs was offered last year to members of one club for $1.50. A second containing 23 bulbs cost $3.50. These were all fine varieties but the purchasing power of a club order is so great that frequently a bulb which cost singly 40 cents in the club order cost but 17.

4. Keep careful records in your daffodil notebook of date of planting, varieties, culture, blooming dates, advantage or disadvantages of position, rate of increase, etc.

5. Plan to hold a daffodil show next April. Read all you can about daffodils and arrange to visit one of the large shows next spring.

Growers in this section are particularly fortunate in having two outstanding shows nearby, that of the Daffodil Society of Maryland held each year in Baltimore, and the Show of the Garden Club of Virginia in Alexandria. At both these shows the classification of the Royal Horticultural Society is used and the programs contained that classification in a reduced form.

Mrs. R. J. Reid, of Chatham, Va., for two years has won the sweepstakes at the Virginia shows. Mrs. Reid won 21 firsts, the Mrs. Louis N. Dibrell Cup, B. Y. Morrison's bulb of the Narcissus Fortune, the Mrs. Floyd Harris Cup, the Garden Club of Fairfax Cup, the American Horticultural Society's Silver Medal, and the special sweepstakes trophy. Mrs. Reid's achievement was well deserved and demonstrates what an interested collector and grower can do. She has 400 varieties and cares for them with only the aid of an occasional gardener.

Kentucky Roads Lined for Miles With Flowers

Mountain Laurel Grows in Profusion Along Highways.

Laurel-decked highways lead for hundreds of miles through eastern Tennessee and Kentucky to Pineville, which lies in a valley deep in the Cumberland Mountains. Here at the end of May each year, Kentuckians and their visitors, who come from all sections of the United States, gather to do homage to the beauty of the mountain laurel and to honor Dr. Thomas Walker, the first white man to enter into what is now Kentucky. It was here that Dr. Walker made his first camp in Kentucky, in 1750, after crossing the mountains at Cumberland Gap, which he named after the Duke of Cumberland, the son of George II. Later through the Gap came Daniel Boone and his followers.

The laurel festival at Pineville has been held for seven years. Young women, representing Kentucky colleges, are guests of the festival. From this group is selected the queen to reign over the festivities. There are parades and pageants. The high light is the crowning of the Queen in Laurel Cove, situated in Pine Mountain Park. Pine Mountain Park is the oldest of Kentucky's State Parks. Its 2,500 acres were given to the State by citizens of Bell County. Following the trails and roads, the student of botany will see many rare specimens which have survived under the care of the State and are not to be found elsewhere.

Laurel and rhododendron grow in great thickets, the individual trees often reach a height of 30 feet and the trunks will measure 6 or more inches in diameter. Blooming at the same time are the great white cups of the wild magnolia with its foliage of tropical-like foliage.

The amphitheater in which the Laurel Festival is held is a natural one; an incline at the foot of which is a small stream, dammed to form a pool in which the pink and white of the festival costumes are mirrored from the grassy stage.

Garden Queries

Question—Is June a good time to plant the spreading pink phlox that grows so well on walls? A neighbor has offered to give me cuttings which I want to take at the most favorable time.—A. J. H.

Answer—It is easy to start this phlox from cuttings but the more usual way is to take cuttings that are already rooted. This plant spreads rapidly and roots as it spreads, and your neighbor will probably be glad to let you have such divisions which are quite certain to transplant well if given moisture and some artificial shade. This is as good a time as any.

• • • •

Question—I bought an azalea at Easter and after it finished blooming I planted it in the shrub border around the house. It is east of the house and is shaded most of the day. The foliage is not as green as it was and looks a little yellow. What can I do to make it greener?—Miss E. K. S.

Answer—The east exposure should be favorable. Yellowing sometimes indicates that the soil is not acid enough. If the house is comparatively new there may be a lime effect from the foundation. Lack of moisture may cause yellowing of leaves. Try sprinkling the ground lightly with aluminum sulphate to increase acidity. Work into the soil for a foot or more around the plant several handfuls of well rotted oak leaves, and cover the soil to a depth of two or three inches with a mulch of half rotted oak leaves. These are the natural food material for azaleas. Keep the plant well moistened all through the hot weather. Cottonseed meal is a good fertilizer but is best used in early spring.

Attention Needed By Hardy 'Mums

Hardy chrysanthemums should be pinched back at least twice to force the development of side shoots. Left alone, the average plant will send up a main stem with relatively little side growth, and the result will be only relatively few fall flowers. Pinch the leader back and side shoots will develop into new leaders, perhaps a half dozen of them. Pinch these back, too, and a bushy growth will develop. Such a plant may have from five to ten times as many leaves as an untended plant. Then supply water and plant food and the chrysanthemum will develop a remarkable yield of flowers for cutting and for garden display.

If the chrysanthemum collection includes late varieties likely to be injured by frosts, it is good planning to lift some of these from the garden now, planting them in good sized pots of rich soil, and returning the pots to the spaces from which the plants came. If frosts hold off they may bloom in the garden; or they may be lifted promptly at the first frost warning for satisfactory bloom indoors.

Crowding May Spoil Pretty Garden Plot

Advance Planning Difficult; Expert Suggests Checking Carefully During Peak of Summer Growing Season.

By Crowell Baynes.

Too much of our garden planning is done in cool weather—in advance of spring planting. That seemed to be the explanation of unsatisfactory results in one garden I visited recently. The gardener was a skillful and successful plant grower, and she had dabbled in landscape architecture, and had some sound ideas as to harmonious balance, the "axis of interest," the pleasing vista.

In planning her fairly spacious grounds she had applied these principles most successfully, it seemed when the daffodils and dogwood were blooming. Now there are more blossoms but the general effect is not so pleasing to this gardener. The view was lovely from the porch, but in the garden area the effect was a little too crowded.

Viewed at Long Range.

What we were really getting was a hot weather view of a garden planned in cool weather, of perspective that melted away under summer sun. It is a common fault, and most evident in some of the gardens that are best planned if viewed from near the radiator in the living room, or from the porch that is sheltered from March winds.

Here in Washington we live in our gardens for three months or so. And we do not live according to any preconceived plan of garden design. We seek out the spot that offers the most in shade or in refreshing breezes—whether it is on an axis of interest or not. All through the summer the enjoyment of garden beauty depends on how well the garden is arranged to display its charms to the occupants of what the felicitous phrase makers have christened "the outdoor living room."

Be Critical, Then Plan.

In hot weather, then, it is good gardening to be critical of the garden as it is, and to redesign it with care to make it a pleasing hot weather garden. It is possible to plan the outdoor living room, but only to a certain degree. One can see the need of a tree to provide afternoon shade in a spot that is breezy but too sunny. But several season of garden beauty will have passed before the tree grows to become good shade. In the main the outdoor living room is likely to be determined by the lay of the land, by buildings outside the garden area, and by established trees. There is likely to be one spot best in the morning or afternoon, and another, perhaps, at night. Trial and error in search for comfort is what locates these spots. So the practical thing is to plan the garden from a comfortable chair right on the spot.

Rough Sketches Helpful.

Make rough sketches or notes that will be available when the more formal planning is under way beside the radiator. The desirability of good planning of the garden as it is to be viewed from the summer recreation spot need not interfere with a good design as viewed from the house. Instead it should result in an improvement of both views.

The "cloverleaf" design or a modification of it, is likely to prove helpful in getting good result both for spring and fall and for summer. The cloverleaf has two principal axes. In some good developments the stem axis will be based on a window or door of the house, with the outdoor living room occupying one lobe, the other two lobes being developed, one as a spring and fall garden and the other as a summer garden. Or the main axis may include both the viewpoint from the house and the summer viewpoint with special attention to spring and fall displays near the main axis and with the two side lobes planned particularly for summer beauty.

Sloping Ground Good.

Sloping properties have proved particularly fascinating as subjects for garden planning, but it often turns out that the slope determines the space available for sitting out in the open and that the cold weather plan has placed the dahlias right where the swing ought to be. Maybe the dahlias could go on a terrace half way to the house or perhaps a terrace for evening ease could be built into the plan to avoid conflict with the dahlias. With summer weather as it is in Washington, it is well worth devoting attention to every possibility for making the garden as livable and comfortable as possible as a first objective. Then as a second aim, make the garden as enjoyable and as beautiful as possible when seen from the most comfortable spot within it. That starting point is the place where a chair will catch the breezes.

Some gardens are comfortable without attaining much beauty. Some gardens are beautiful, but enjoyment of cool breezes is cut off because the coolest spots are occupied by flowers. Some few achieve both, and they are worth working for.

Gardener's Calendar

Hot, moist weather favors blackspot and mildew of roses. Spray or dust as a preventive. Bordeaux mixture, lime-sulphur, and dusting sulphur are all good if used in time.

• • • •

Trees and shrubs planted this spring will benefit from special care in watering. A shallow basin around the planting space helps. So, too, does a mulch of coarse grass, straw, or a blanket of peat moss.

• • • •

Most bearded iris may be divided and replanted as soon as the soil can be prepared for them, the sooner the better.

• • • •

Watch the roses, daylilies, true lilies, Japanese iris and other perennials in bloom this month and make note of desirable varieties.

• • • •

Stake delphiniums, foxgloves, hollyhocks (if they need it), and tall ballflowers that are likely to be injured by beating rains and wind.

• • • •

A light top dressing of fertilizer watered in thoroughly is good for the lawn as hot weather comes on.

• • • •

Plant seeds of perennials and biennials, either in seedbeds, coldframes, or pots and flats.

• • • •

Plant dahlias, and late plantings of gladiolus; also seeds of annuals that will bloom after the main display.

• • • •

When delphinium bloom fades, cut off the blooming stalk but leave the part that bears leaves. If delphiniums do not ripen seed they are likely to bloom again in fall.

• • • •

Snip off seed pods on lilacs. The plant can make better use of its strength in developing buds for next year.

Neighborliness Saves Garden When Owner Takes Vacation

Forethought and Careful Cultivation Also Help Reduce Damage; Covering of Mulch Should Be Made Before Leaving.

Vacation days for the gardener often mean neglect for the garden, but there are many ways to reduce the damage. Neighborliness, good cultivation and mulching and forethought all help.

Neighborliness and "changing work" as the farmers phrase it, is probably best of all. Before vacation time the spring work is pretty well out of the way and care of a garden is not so onerous but that a good neighbor can take on the care of two for two weeks or so, with a return of the favor when he goes on vacation. Boy Scouts and school children are likely to be anxious to earn money caring for a vacationist's garden, and with a little advance training do the job well.

But getting the garden ready for a vacation absence will help greatly. This includes two or three extra thorough cultivations in the two or three weeks before leaving. Try to get every weed, either by pulling when moist, or by hoeing and hand cultivation when the soil is dryer.

Just before leaving, apply a covering mulch of granulated peat or leafsoil following a thorough soaking of the garden—not a sprinkling, but a saturation with the flowing hose. In this final make-ready work out a simple irrigation system of shallow furrows that will carry water to all parts of the bed from only a few placements of the hose. Neighborliness should be made as slight a burden as possible.

Forethought and planning can help. If the vacation is scheduled for early in the season, it may be best to plant annuals fairly late, getting them only to a size safe to leave. With a late vacation, extra early planting will bring enjoyment of the annuals in early summer with a comparative blank in the garden during the vacation, followed by an autumn show of plants that can pretty well take care of themselves for a few weeks if once started right — chrysanthemums, hardy asters, gladiolus, anemone japonica, late cosmos, and perhaps dahlias, with some aid from the gardener.

Gladiolus, in particular, is a good flower for vacationers to plant before they leave. It goes into the soil deep enough so that it will not suffer from lack of moisture unless the season is exceptionally rainless. They hardly need any cultivation for the first few weeks after planting, and each variety has a fairly definite period for development, so that planting can be timed nicely for bloom after vacation.

House plants and plants potted for bloom on porches or terraces and the like are more difficult. It is best to "lend" them to a neighbor. But it is also possible to sink the pots nearly full depth in soil in a moist and shady spot in the garden.

There is no vacation treatment for porch and window boxes. They must have regular care and watering. But for a short absence or a long week-end burlap wicks will be helpful in keeping the soil moist.

White Sulphur Springs Arranges Full Summer Program of Sports, Social Activities

Golf, Tennis, Polo Listed On Schedule

Theatrical Events Also to Entertain Resort Visitors.

Hayrides, Corn Roasts, Picnics and Dancing Planned.

White Sulphur Springs.—Plans are being completed here for a summer season full of sports and social activities. Interspersed with such events as polo, golf and tennis and the traditional celebrations of Old White Week and Robert E. Lee Week which climax August, will be exhibitions by leading artists, theatrical productions by the staff and members of the Old White Arts Colony and novel picnic parties to the far corners of the Greenbrier's 7,000-acre estate.

These picnics will be something new in summer entertainment—a reminder of the great picnics that featured life at White Sulphur 100 years ago. There will be barbecue parties, hayrides, corn roasts—leaving from the hotel and going to some spot previously selected, where a staff of servants will have set up the tables, built the fires and done other necessary tasks. Feature of these parties will be the food cooked on the spot over an open fire. Music and singing is planned, with dancing to hillbilly music on a floor built for the purpose. According to present plans, such hayride picnics will take place weekly beginning late this month and lasting through July.

In the field of sports, entries have already been received for the several golf and tennis tournaments to be held here during the summer. Leading in importance is the West Virginia golf championship for men and women, beginning July 5 to 10. Tom Brand and Miss Fritzi Stifel, from Kingwood and Wheeling, W. Va., will both be on hand to defend their titles won last year. Concurrent with that competition, the West Virginia open professional matches will be played at the Greenbrier Club. Sam Snead, sensational pro, who made his first professional appearance in this same match last year, will be too stiffly engaged in other play to defend his crown. Snead will be in England for his debut in European golf circles, playing in the British Open at Carnoustie July 5-9. He will return only in time to compete in the Chicago $10,000 Open the latter part of July. He has made arrangements to travel to England on his first transatlantic trip with Gene Sarazen and other American golfers. On July 19 and for the rest of that week the West Virginia State tennis championship will be played on the five new Greenbrier courts. Last year's singles victor, Wilbur Hess, of Texas, will be on hand to defend his title against what promises to be a large field of amateurs, the largest that has appeared here in the long series of State championship matches.

In the direction of artistic effort, there will be several showings throughout the summer by eminent artists and from well-known collections in the Old White Art Gallery. These exhibitions are always a point of keen interest, not only for Greenbrier guests, but for many visitors who come to the resort especially to view the work that is on display. Among the showings scheduled is a primitive Americana, portraits by early artisans from the Downtown Gallery in New York. Another is a showing by Baroness Hilla Rebay, directress of the Guggenheim Collection; still another is an exhibit, again from the Downtown galleries, of water colors by young American painters. As a special treat for Greenbrier guests, Mme. Gaston Lachaise has arranged an extraordinary showing of her late husband's famous "Lachaise Nudes." The dramatic department of the Old White Arts Colony will present eight productions during the season in the outdoor theater after its opening July 1. Among the plays that are

Steps Are Taken To Aid Guests At Cape May

Trailers Are Banned and Ponies Can't Go on Beach.

Cape May, N. J.—The newly elected commissioners have started a program of making Cape May more attractive than ever.

Four important steps that will tend to improve general conditions at Cape May have been taken by the board.

Trailers are banned from entering the city, while ponies will not be allowed on the beach this summer. In addition bicycle riding is taboo on the boardwalk and carnivals cannot be staged on the esplanade.

Walter W. Giffins has been appointed manager of the Cape May convention hall, and he will direct public dancing during the season.

College parties ruled during the week-end in Cape May. Groups of young society folk from nearby colleges and universities spent a pleasant time here.

The bathing has been exceptionally fine and the sports of the beaches were of the advance summer novelties. Even the boardwalk blossomed out in such futuristic and cubistic colors, shapes and sizes that made promise of a gay and kaleidoscopic harmony for the approaching summer vacation season. Week-end parties were the vogue and many mere summer colony residences were occupied than usual for the first time this year.

Following a survey made this week, by city officials, it was learned that there are more houses occupied today than there were last year.

Utility companies all report increased numbers of connections for electric current, gas and telephone, which Cape May officials declare is an indication that a busy season can be anticipated.

Drum fishing is popular in the lower Delaware Bay near Cape May, with many fish having been caught the past week.

Plans will be formulated next week on dates for the holding of the annual flower show and baby parade, which are two of the most important features during the summer season.

Tourists Flocking to Egypt In Best Season Since 1929

Ancient Land of Pharaohs Draws Thousands From All Parts of United States; Native Quarters Fascinating.

Egypt this year has enjoyed the best tourist season since 1929. More than 47,000 tourists visited the ancient land of the Pharaohs between December 1, 1936, and April 30, 1937.

But this is only part of the story, for Egypt is enjoying the best summer season in many years. Special cruises with Egyptian stopovers are heavily booked, while the customary routes to Egypt are enjoying exceptional summer travel. One popular line running direct from New York to Alexandria is booked through to September with hundreds of advance bookings up to the first of the year.

Several educational tours this summer include both Egypt and Palestine as well as adjacent lands in the historic Near East.

An advance report of the 1937 census gives Cairo a population of almost 1,400,000. Many of the leading hotels of Egypt and practically all the pensions remain open in summer. The great city is now the center of Islamic culture throughout the world. It is the repository of many of Islam's ancient treasures of art most of which have become available to the inspection of visitors and it is the scene of many picturesque religious celebrations. With its more than four hundred mosques and 13 large museums and an entertainment program including grand opera in winter, horse racing in Alexandria in summer and in Cairo in winter, and golf and tennis throughout the year, with the pyramids only 7 miles distant, and Saccara and the Site of Ancient Memphis only 22 miles from Cairo, the traveler can spend many weeks in the big city and still always have something new to see.

For one thing he can walk but a few blocks from fashionable Europeanized Cairo and find himself among the narrow winding streets of the old Arab section with its overhanging balustrades and quaint medieval architecture, one of the most fascinating Oriental marts in the world. Here thousands of merchants and artisans with Oriental suavity urge you to inspect their rugs, artistic carvings in elephant, hippo, and rhinoceros ivory, in gold, silver, brass, leather, mahogany, ebony, jewelry and perfumes. Many of the merchants are in contact with or have come from Syria, Turkey, Persia, Arabia, Afghanistan, India, as well as from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and from remote desert oases whose products are not found in ordinary market places.

Alexandria with its beautiful 7-mile long Corniche drive extending along the Mediterranean shores is the summer watering resort for Egypt and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. With its many bathing beaches, summer cottages and villas, it has all the dash of the most fashionable continental resorts and one sees there the smartest of beach apparel.

The coronation of King Farouk I on July 31 will be the high spot of the summer in Egypt. On that day, according to the Arabic calendar, the King will reach his majority, the eighteenth anniversary of his birth, but according to the Gregorian calendar in use in most countries, he will reach his eighteenth birthday on February 11, 1938.

Valley Caverns' Name Changed; Now 'Melrose'

Harrisonburg, Va.—Maj. E. M. Brown, president of Natural Wonders, Inc., owners of Virginia Caverns on U. S. highway 11, 6 miles north of Harrisonburg, has announced that the name "Virginia Caverns" had been changed to "The Caverns of Melrose."

"The name 'Virginia Caverns' was too general," said Maj. Brown. "Statements made about 'Virginia Caverns' were attributed by many to all the caverns of Virginia.

"'Melrose' is the name of the section of Rockingham County in which the caverns are situated. So the new name, "Caverns of Melrose,' is appropriate and also descriptive as to location.

"These caverns are known as 'a Civil War memorial underground' because they contain hundreds of both Federal and Confederate soldiers' names carved upon the rock walls and formations during the War Between the States, and also as 'the only war memorial in the world carved by the soldiers themselves.' Lowell Thomas thus described them in a coast-to-coast broadcast.

Wildwood Crest Summer Mecca

Hotels, Apartments Open Early; Croakers Have Started Running.

Wildwood Crest, N. J.—With the warm weather that has been prevailing the past week many visitors and vacationers came to Wildwood Crest, and as a result all the hotels and apartment houses are open earlier than usual.

Something new under the sun for vacationists who seek the salt air for their summer days away from the cares and worries of the business world has been prefected on the Wildwood Crest beach. The new attraction is called a Cabana. It is a tent affair, built upon Arabic lines and designed primarily to give hotel guests a special room on the beach during the day, supplementary to their hotel rooms.

The influx of visitors and cottage owners over the week-end gave every indication that Wildwood Crest will experience a successful season in 1937. Business men and real estate operators report doing a flourishing business. Real estate agents received numerous inquires for apartments and summer homes from New York, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia and from other cities in the East.

Fishing is excellent at Wildwood Crest, sportsmen made it known this week, when they reported that croakers are beginning to run. Large catches are also being made off the Crest fishing pier.

Sailing on Sunset Lake is proving to be a popular sport among the early summer residents. An amateur regatta is planned next month, with attractive prizes to be awarded.

Mammoth Cave Delegates See Light System

New Market, Va.—A delegation from the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky recently spent several hours in Endless Caverns examining the subterranean lighting, said to be the first and finest indirect flood lighting system installed in any caverns, with the object of getting ideas which may be carried out at Mammoth Cave.

Members of the delegation were Charles L. Gable, of Washington, chief auditor of the National Park Service and member of the operating committee of the Mammoth Cave properties; W. W. Thompson, general manager of Mammoth Cave, and M. L. Chalet, cave manager.

The Endless Caverns' lighting was installed in 1919 by the late Phinehas V. Stephens, consulting engineer of New York, and later extended and enlarged until 1,100 lights are now the source of the concealed illumination, served by 12 miles of lead-covered caves.

Lake Placid Turns to Summer Sports; Offers Varied Vacation Entertainment

Golf, Tennis Supplant Fun On Ice, Snow

Adirondack Resort Has Indoor and Outdoor Diversions.

Two Skating Gymkhanas Planned; Symphony Orchestra Bigger.

Lake Placid Club, N. Y.—The mountains and valleys of this famous Adirondack resort center which only a short while ago were attracting the devotees of winter sports are now covered with the brilliant green of another spring. Golf, tennis, riding and swimming have taken the place of skiing, skating and bobsledding in the interest of the vanguard of summer vacationists.

Entering upon its forty-third summer season with more advance reservations as of June 1 than were booked last year by mid-July, the club has reason to anticipate the most successful season in several years. The summer program again follows the tradition of providing entertainment for all members of the family both indoors and out.

Considerable advance interest has been shown by summer holiday seekers in the indoor ice-skating season which will be held at the Olympic Arena here from July 3 to August 15, and which is something unique in the Nation's offerings to summer vacationists. In addition to scheduling two ice-gymkhanas for its adult members and guests, Lake Placid Club is contemplating a junior skating camp for young girls who wish to practice the graceful art of figure-skating made popular by such artists as Sonja Heine, of Norway; Melitta Brunner, of Austria, and others.

Music lovers among Lake Placid Club's summer visitors will be pleased to discover that the symphony orchestra has been increased from 9 to 13 pieces. The program calls for several concerts each week throughout the season, with special morning concerts for children. A separate dance orchestra will provide music for the nightly dances.

Outdoors, of course, the traditional summer sports of golf, tennis, swimming, riding and hiking will furnish the principal attractions of the club's program. Although the golf courses have been open since late May, the tournament season does not get under way until July 1 with the start of the club's second annual invitation tournament for men. Each Saturday will see golf tournaments for club guests with a Wednesday tournament exclusively for women guests. Tennis tournaments, water sports on Mirror Lake, riding gymkhanas in the club's new riding ring and trail parties with picnic suppers will complete the outdoor program.

The Lake Placid Club Players will return to Lakeside Theater early in July for their second season of presenting recent Broadway hits. Social activities include a new series of talks by Dr. William Starr Myers, of Princeton; bridge tournaments, concerts, and teas, as well as numerous private parties to be given by residents of the summer colony. Club children will have their own daily program under the supervision of trained leaders.

Chicago Line Offers Schedule For Cruises on Great Lakes

Two Georgian Bay Ships to Sail on Chartered and Public Trips to Shore Cities and Canada; Change to See Quintuplets.

Chicago.—All schedules for preseason cruise trips on the S. S. North American and the S. S. South American of the Georgian Bay Line have been completed, according to E. J. Goebel, passenger traffic manager, who states that, judging from reservations on hand for the preseason cruises, the ships should carry the greatest number of passengers in the last 10 years.

While most of the cruises are chartered, there will be more short cruises open to the public than in the last several years.

The Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce has chartered the ship from June 14 to 16, leaving from South Haven and stopping at Benton Harbor, Frankfort, Charlevoix, Traverse City, Ludington and Muskegon. The Kansas City Shrine has chartered the ship from June 17 to June 26, leaving from Chicago and visiting Mackinac Island, Cleveland, Buffalo, Detroit and back to Chicago. This boat will serve as a floating hotel for the cruisers during the Shrine convention in Detroit.

June 28 Cruise Open.

The Elks Club of Milwaukee will go on a chartered cruise over the week-end of June 26-28 to Mackinac Island. A five-star cruise, open to the public, is scheduled for June 28 to July 3, stopping at Milwaukee, Mackinac Island, Parry Sound, Sault Ste. Marie and Sturgeon Bay.

The Fourth of July cruise, open to the public, leaves Chicago Saturday, July 3, stops at Milwaukee, Mackinac Island, Sturgeon Bay and arrives back at Chicago Tuesday, July 6. A dinner dance is scheduled for the evening of July 9. The regular weekly schedule of sailings begins July 10.

All trips on the S. S. South American have been chartered, with exception of the Fourth of July cruise. The Baltimore-Washington Shrine will leave from Chicago Friday, cruise through Sturgeon Bay and Green Bay, to Mackinac Island and Detroit and will be used as a hotel in Detroit for the convention until Friday, June 25.

July 4 Trip Public.

The Detroit section, Society of Automotive Engineers, has chartered the ship for the week-end of June 25 to 28 for a trip to Charlevoix. The Paul Henry tours has chartered the ship from June 28 to July 1, for a trip to Midland and the Martyrs' shrine just outside of Midland, and Mackinac Island.

The Fourth of July cruise, open to the public, is from Cleveland and Detroit, leaving Cleveland late Friday evening, July 2, leaving Detroit shortly after noon, July 3, and visiting Mackinac Island, Charlevoix before returning to Detroit, July 5, and Cleveland early the morning of July 6.

The Erie Chamber of Commerce goes on a cruise July 6-10, visiting Canada, cruising in Lake Superior and visiting Mackinac Island during the trip. The regular schedule of weekly sailings starts from Buffalo July 10.

Floods No Menace To 'Flat Bridge'

One of the lovely drives which tourists usually take in tropical Jamaica is on the road through Bog Walk, along the Rio Cobre. At one point the car crosses the river on an exceedingly low bridge, known as the "Flat Bridge." The driver explains that, after several higher bridges had been carried away by floods that race through this canyon at intervals of several years, someone had the idea that a policy of "non-resistance" would be the better part of bridge building—hence the new bridge that, when the flood comes, just "takes it," a sort of sit-down striker. On the opposite side of the river, the driver points out marks showing historic flood levels of 20 and 25 feet.

Average for Sunshine Runs High in Kingston

According to a survey made by the Meteorological Magazine of London, the average daily hours of sunshine in Kingston, Jamaica, is 7.3. This refers to clear, brilliant sunshine, devoid of cloudiness.

The six places in the world showing a higher daily average are in Africa, Australia and Malta. Of these, Malta leads with 8.3. London shows only 4 hours average per day. A visit to Jamaica's shores at any time of year will cause the traveler to recall Longfellow's words: "This journey is written in my memory with a sunbeam."

Toenails Painted.

If you go to the London Zoo in Regents Park, London, this summer, you will find that the nails of the elephants have been painted gold like the nails of state elephants in India—a reminder that the coronation is giving Britain an unusually cosmopolitan summer.

Resort Planning Longer Season

"A longer season" is the merchants' slogan at Beach Haven. The yacht clubs are preparing for a busy season and hotels report the earliest reservations for many seasons.

A safety campaign to "keep the roads to Beach Haven safe" is progressing and gathering interest. Walsh Park is about ready for an active sports program. Borough council has made every effort to make this resort most attractive.

New cottages and apartments built over the winter add much to the facilities for early season visitors and vacationists.

Woman Pays Dog's Fare Neglected for 30 Years

One of the strangest cases on record of the belated workings of a conscience is reported by C. M. Turner, general traffic manager of the Associated British and Irish Railways.

Recently a lady called at the station master's office in Grimsby Town. In August, 1916, she had brought a dog from Sutton-on-Sea without paying its fare. To relieve her conscience, she now desired to liquidate the debt. The station master deferred to her request to remain anonymous, and issued an excess fare receipt together with a dog ticket, for which the charge was 1 shilling 3 pence—34 cents!

Japanese Hotels Attract Visitors

The visitor to Japan may now enjoy the novelty of staying at a true Japanese hotel. It is only necessary for him to secure an introduction from the Western style hotel where he may be registered. The high-class Nipponese hotels require such introductions from Japanese guests as well as from foreign visitors.

Meals in the regular Japanese fashion are served, and the bedrooms are furnished in real Japanese style.

Mountain Hotel In Shenandoah Is Motorists' Mecca

The great Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, with its wealth of historic interest, incomparable scenic beauty and roads that are a joy to the motorist, is a place of enchantment always, but in summer it is the traveler's dream come true. Especially when they visit Orkney Springs Hotel, the well-known and much-loved mountain resort, around 2,000 feet above sea level.

From the Shenandoah Valley pike one turns west at Mount Jackson and follows the macadam road directly into the grounds of the hotel. Lovers of golf will enjoy the nine-hole hazardous mountain course. The tennis courts are never idle. A fine stable of riding horses are wating to take you through Happy Valley and on other charming rides. The open-air swimming pool is supplied with water direct from mountain springs. Dancing in the great ballroom, to the music of a nine-piece orchestra, bowling, hiking, croquet under the great trees, bridge and pingpong in the recreation room, all await you at Orkney Springs. Ocean City Expects Record Throngs, Prepares Varied Program of Vacation Attractions

Celebration of July 4 Heads Major Events

Bigger Fireworks Display Planned; Yacht Club to Hold Races; Swimming Meet and Golf Tournament on Schedule.

Ocean City, N. J.—Anticipating a 1937 season that will find thousands of new faces among its visitors and which in point of numbers will far exceed all past record years, Ocean City is preparing to offer for the entertainment of its guests a program of sporting, amusement and social activities that will continue throughout the hot months of summer and well into the late fall.

The first of these major events will be the Fourth of July celebration, plans for which have been completed by the committee having the arrangements in charge under the direction of Mayor Joseph G. Champion. The display of fireworks, which always is made a dazzling feature of the day's entertainment, will be more brilliant, colorful and lavish than ever atttempted in the past. The display will be in the city park between Fifth and Sixth streets, overlooked from the boardwalk, with thousands of seats for spectators. A concert by a band of 75 pieces will be an added attraction.

In the afternoon will be heard a patriotic address by a nationally known speaker, introduced by Mayor Champion, with addresses by Ocean City officials and other speakers. This feature of the day will be in the large auditorium of the Municipal Pier, with a seating capacity of 1,500 inside and accommodations for several thousand others on the open-air deck. An amplification system installed inside and outside the auditorium will enable everyone to enjoy the program.

Yacht Club Races.

Besides these scheduled features, the Ocean City Yacht Club will have open house with a series of races by sail and power boats and music and dancing afternoon and night. Golfing enthusiasts may enjoy their favorite sport at the Ocean City Golf Club, open to visitors to play on its trick and interesting course. Lovers of tennis will find the municipal courts in perfect condition.

Deep sea, inside and surf fishing, surf bathing and salt-water swimming in the lagoon and boardwalk open-air pools, the popular class in calisthenics on the beach, orchestral concerts on the pier and the many other beach and boardwalk amusements will provide a wide diversity of recreational activity for the holiday outing.

Philadelphia day has been tentatively set for the last week in July, with Ocean City as host to Mayor Wilson, the members of his cabinet and other prominent city officials. Throngs of visitors are expected to take advantage of the special occasion to visit the resort.

Swimming, Golf Meets.

Two other notable July events are the Middle Atlantic A. A. A. U. swimming meet in the open-air pools of the Flanders Hotel July 9, and the Atlantic Coast golf tournament on the course of the Ocean City Golf Club Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, July 21-23. The Middle Atlantic swim meet is sponsored by the Ocean City Kiwanis Club and will bring leading swimmers of both sexes from all parts of the Middle Atlantic States.

The juniors' national amateur swimming races will take place Friday, August 20, in the Flanders pools, also under the sponsorship of the Kiwanis Club, and are confidently expected to be contested by an exceptionally large entry list of boys and girls.

The big feature event of August will be the annual baby parade, with every effort being made to have it excel anything yet seen in this or any other of the resort cities. The color, brilliance and beauty of the pageant always attracts many thousands of visitors who throng the entire length of the boardwalk along which it passes. Non-Sectarian day and Lutheran day, both of which are held in August, bring delegations running well into the thousands.

The highlight of September will be the American Legion State convention. Delegates, alternates and members of the women's auxiliary to the number of 7,500 to 8,000 will arrive in the city September 8, with the next two days devoted to the business sessions.

Virginia Beach Proves a Haven For Newlyweds

Resort's Hotels and Cottages Crowded With Bridal Couples.

Virginia Beach, Va.—Virginia Beach this season is the honeymoon headquarters of many hundreds of brides and bridegrooms from all over eastern America, a survey of local hotels and cottages made by the Chamber of Commerce reveals. Throughout all of June, bridal copples are expected to swell early season crowds to new high records, according to advance registrations.

All attendance records for the Memorial Day week-end and the succeeding week were broken at local hotels and clubs, it was reported. Accommodations were at a premium, and the overflow of guests found haven in private homes and cottages along the ocean front. Because of the warm weather now prevailing, the beach clubs are popular meeting places throughout the day and night, with modish bathing togs the fashion by day and smart evening clothes for the nightly dances.

Bathing, boating on inland lakes and bays, riding, cycling and fishing continue to be the most attractive sports at Virginia Beach. The motorized scooter is the latest brand of entertainment to become popular here, and dozens of the vehicles are to be found at all hours chugging along through the historic countryside that surrounds Virginia Beach.

Southern Cross Hides Half Year in Jamaica

That beautiful constellation popularly known as the Southern Cross and noted on star maps as "Crux," is clearly visible to Jamaica during the night time from January to June, but from July to December it rises only during the daylight hours.

The familiar constellation Orion, the finest in the heavens, is seen nearly overhead in Jamaica, where the clear air seems to enhance its natural brilliance.

Where Tell Won Fame.

It was at Altdorf, near the south end of Lake Lucerne, Switzerland, that William Tell shot the apple off his son's head. Tell was born in Burglen, a mile distant from Altdorf.

Rossini composed most of his grand opera, "Guillaume Tell," at Brunnen, Switzerland.

Herb Welsch, aquaplane expert, tries out a new phase of the popular water sport on the "Doodlebug" as the summer season gets under way at Brigantine Beach, N. J. The outfit is an Hawaiian surf board of balsa wood equipped with a 2½-horsepower motor that kicks along at about 9 miles an hour.

Record Vacation Season Due At Resort in New Hampshire

Hampton Beach, N. H.—If weather conditions are normal, Hampton Beach and the entire seacoast region of New Hampshire will enjoy this year, the most prosperous season in history. Early season inquiries have doubled in volume over a year ago. Over 40 new cottages and guest houses have been constructed along the 4-mile stretch of Hampton. Alterations to increase capacity have been made in about one hundred other structures. The floor space in the Chamber of Commerce Building has been doubled to adequately care for the expected increase in business. Even the threat of strikes in the textile centers along the nearby Merrimack Valley has not dimmed the business optimism prevalent in the coast section of the Granite State.

The season at Hampton Beach will be formally opened June 27 with a one-day "music festival" under the leadership of Harry C. Whittemore, of Manchester, State director of the WPA Federal music projects. The season of daily concerts under the direction of Charles H. Leave, the new director of the Hampton Beach Concert Band will begin on Saturday, July 3 and extend through the Sunday which follows Labor Day.

The annual "camporee" of Daniel Webster Council, Boy Scouts of America, will be held for four days beginning Tuesday, July 20, with "Boy Scout Day" on Wednesday, July 21, and the annual precinct "Children's Day" on Thursday, July 22. Officials of Daniel Webster Council have stated that over 1,200 Boy Scouts and Sea Scouts will be encamped for the four-day period on the State recreation area at the south end. The Sea Scout headquarters will be in the new home of the Hampton Harbor Yacht Club, located directly on the harbor basin.

The new State bath house, which is being erected at a cost of $75,000, will be formally opened to the public on some day during the first week in July. Gov. Francis P. Murphy and the members of his executive council are planning to participate in the exercises attendant upon the opening of this modern bath house. These are but a few highlights of the 1937 season at Hampton—a season which promises to be a record breaker from every standpoint.

Queen Victoria Centennial.

June 20 will be the 100th anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne of Great Britain. She was 18 years old when the news was brought to her in Kensington Palace that King William IV was dead and that she would reign in his place. She was queen for 64 years, and her times are generally referred to as the Victorian era.

Busy Summer Is Looked for At Nantucket

Finishing Touches Are Being Put on Hotels and Cottages.

Nantucket Island, Mass.—Rolling moors, balmy breezes and Gulf Stream warmed waters are expected to again lure many to historic old Nantucket.

Workmen are feverishly putting on the finishing touches to hotels, summer homes and cottages for the season which officially opens June 16 when the Nantucket Yacht Club is commissioned.

The information bureau and the Inquirer and Mirror reports that there have been many more inquiries this year and that reservations are exceeding expectations, while many early visitors indicate a highly successful season.

Miles of gleaming white beaches offer a variety of still water, surf and tide swimming and big game fishermen as well as surf-casters are finding conditions good. Bridle paths provide beautiful scenery—from shady pine forests to velvety rolling moors and sand dunes. Golf is a sport which finds a large following, for the Sankaty Golf Course, similar to the natural sea-side courses of Scotland, is one of the finest in New England.

When night falls and the day's fun in the out-of-doors is over, the visitor can turn to the yacht club and the 'Sconset Casino, about which revolves the island's social life. The White Elephant Hotel, the Gordon Folger and the Sea Cliff Inn offer opportunities of select relaxation, the Tavern-on-the-Moors, favorite gathering place of writers, artists and lecturers.

The Intimate Life of an Irish Statesman Is Revealed on Screen This Week

'Parnell' Is Story of Patriot Who Won Home Rule for Erin

Charles Stewart Parnell, Champion of Home Rule for Ireland, Was a Capital Visitor in 1880; Other Notable Pictures on View.

By Nelson B. Bell.

IT is, of course, needless to say that the screen version of "Parnell" possesses a visual scope, a sweep and a technical completeness that the so-called "legitimate" theater never could have achieved.

It brings into bold and intimate relief both the public and the private life of an Irish patriot who devoted his efforts to securing home rule for Ireland and lightening the heavy burdens borne by the tenant farmers of his country. There is power in the story and there also is weakness, but the picture has so obviously been contrived at the expense of so vast an amount of time, effort and money that it deserves consideration as one of the more impressive of recent feature releases.

Running almost to the length of a "road-show" attraction—one hour and 52 minutes, if it was correctly timed at the preview—"Parnell" reveals the minuteness with which the producing companies approach this sort of semi-historical, biographical drama. I am not at all sure, even with his sideburns and queerly cut clothes of the '80s that Clark Gable bears any striking resemblance to the Irish idol whom he impersonates. But he does impress upon the spectator the sore trials and travail through which an ardent advocate of a just cause was forced to pass to gain his ends—and he did gain them finally, despite seemingly insuperable political and romantic obstacles.

As has been stated in these columns on one previous occasion, the story divides itself into two integral parts—the political and the romantic life of "the uncrowned king of Ireland." The political aspects of the drama, it seems to me, are more interesting and less vapid than those devoted to the love affair between Parnell and Katie O'Shea, the wife of a parasitic, small-time politician, whose divorce all but wrecked the career of the man she loved.

My test of the value of dialogue when viewing a picture, at times, is to close my eyes and merely listen. In the love scenes between Charles Stewart Parnell and Katie O'Shea there were occasions when there was not a great deal to which to listen with any great refreshment of the soul. It sounded, too often, just a little inane and out of character for a man of such importance to his country and a woman of such gentle breeding as Katie O'Shea. "Sweet nothings," I believe, is the usual description of this sort of "impassioned" speech.

THIS seems an odd circumstance. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is based on the stage play by Elsie T. Schauffler and was adapted to the screen by John van Druten and S. N. Behrman, two able playwrights on their own accounts. They should have looked a little more closely to their dialogue.

However, there are many other qualities to be found in the film that are eloquent in their excellence. One is to be found in the skill of the casting. Edna May Oliver was a happy choice for the role of Aunt Ben—much happier, in fact, than for the role of the nurse in "Romeo and Juliet," with Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard. Then there is Montagu Love in the role of Gladstone, Parnell's chief adversary in everything he attempted to do from the floor of the British Parliament. Mr. Love is perhaps the last actor I should have thought of for this part, yet he discharges his duties with a degree of conviction that is little less than amazing.

Also in the cast are Edmund Gwenn, who made so decidedly favorable an impression here when he appeared in Priestley's "Laburnum Grove," on the stage of the National, a few seasons back, and Billie Burke, who evidently has discovered the fountain that Ponce de Leon could not find.

Mr. Gwenn is cast in the comparatively minor role of Parnell's secretary, but elevates the part to one of major importance. Miss Burke looks about as she did when she made her Washington debut, also at the National, years ago as leading lady with John Drew in "My Wife." She is cast as a young and flittery girl, who talks too much and makes herself a general nuisance, and assumes the role with a youthful enthusiasm that completely belies the number of years she has been before the public. She never has been lovelier.

• • • •

IN scanning the photostatic reproduction of the first page of The Washington Post of the morning of February 3, 1880, the day after Charles Stewart Parnell had made his speech before the Congress, it is interesting to note with what vigor he laid stress on the necessity of home rule for Ireland and emancipation of its tenant farmers.

Tht entire first page of the paper that day was packed tight with type telling of Mr. Parnell's dynamic crusade on behalf of his countrymen.

On the strength of that plea he was enabled to raise $200,000 in this country for the relief of the suffering in his home land. In 1880, $200,000 was a considerable sum of money. It still is.

IT is no part of my intention to give the impression that "Parnell" is the only worthy picture in town this week.

At the Palace will be found "Make Way For Tomorrow," a domestic drama of intense human interest in which the principal roles are played by Beulah Bondi and Victor Moore, veterans of the stage, who now soar to comparable heights as subjects for the cameras and microphones.

The Earle will be found a little jauntier in the quality of its entertainment, with Claudette Colbert and Melvyn Douglas having a very gay and enjoyable time in "I Met Him in Paris." This seems a thoroughly as they appear, respectively, in the title role and as Katie O'Shea in the screen version of "Parnell," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offers currently as chief feature for the week at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is a minutely intimate study of the political and romantic life of the great Irish statesman who visited the United States and addressed the American Congress in 1880. The co-stars are supported by a list of cinema celebrities second to none that has been brought to a local silver sheet in recent months. Foremost in the supporting cast is Edna May Oliver, who turns in one of her most effective performances. The others are too numerous to mention.

Dozen Temptations Make Scribes Dizzy as Fiske Is Being 'Shot'

'The Toast of New York' Will Include All of These When Life of Jim Fiske Is Disclosed in Film Starring Robust Edward Arnold.

By Melrose Gower.

Hollywood, June 12.

Sin and the cinema have never been sisters, except perhaps under the skin, which makes the fact that Hollywood has just collected all the temptations in creation and placed them in one motion picture a matter of major import.

It was this colossal millenium which last week brought all the clan of correspondents and critics in the film capital to a great sound-proof stage on the RKO-Radio lot to watch the filming of the temptations.

Twelve in number, the temptations range from desire to death, the critics were informed, and the round dozen of them will be incorporated in a production entitled "The Toast of New York." Portly Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Cary Grant and Jack Okie co-star in the film.

Wondering and curious, the correspondents strolled down the broad avenues to stage 3, where, upon entering, they were greeted by Miss Farmer, her hyacinthine locks a shimmering shower of fine spun gold and her Grecian garb a sight more pleasing than a weekly pay check doubled.

"I," she said, "am going to play the girl in the picturization of each of the twelve temptations."

It was the correspondent from a French paper who inquired of Miss Farmer exactly what the twelve temptations were, at this point, and when all had been seated the actress explained.

"According to the script of 'The Toast of New York,'" she began, "there are twelve temptations and in their respective order they are, vanity, flirtation, love, gold, fame, desire, revelry, wine, luxury, vice, jealousy and finally, death."

The correspondents jotted down swiftly the list Miss Farmer recited and this time it was your correspondent who asked if this listing of temptations represented Hollywood's viewpoint in the matter.

"Yes," was Miss Farmer's swift response. "Hollywood considers vanity the first and the greatest of all the temptations. RKO-Radio took a poll to establish the order in which the temptations should be listed and vanity was the easy winner. Truthfully, I'm convinced this world would be a pretty grand place if vanity were nonexistant."

Representatives of the Associated and United Press must have been of one mind, for simultaneously they asked: "Miss Farmer, why does love rate only third place and desire sixth place in the temptation poll?"

"Perhaps," answered the young lady, "because that's where most people think they belong."

Now the cameras were ready to begin filming, and when Director Rowland V. Lee called Miss Farmer, she rose quickly and took her place on the "luxury" set. This temptation scene was to be filmed first, although it comes ninth on the Hollywood temptation poll, because a special make-up was utilized for Miss Farmer in photographing it.

Draped on a divan, the blonde actress gazed at Marc Anthony (Ralph Byrd), while four Nubian slaves waved peacock feather fans with measured rhythm. Mr. Anthony promised the lovely lady the material things of the world were hers for the asking.

He made his proposition sound pleasing enough and withal your correspondent wishes to report that luxury, as developed by Miss Farmer, is really quite a temptation.

In rapid order Director Lee photographed the 11 other temptations. Vanity, the winner, found Miss Farmer in a room completely surrounded by mirrors while six maids stood by to comply with her smallest wish. Typifying the ego gone mad, it was not difficult to understand why vanity, when reduced to its essentials, is the greatest temptation of all.

Love as a temptation assumed a pastoral nuance with Miss Farmer, as a shepherd maiden, and John Ellis, a singing wanderer, who tempts her with limpid love songs to flee with him.

Flirtation found Miss Farmer in the court of Louis XV of France when flirtation was really in flower, to judge from the temptation suggested by a mere wink of the eye. This writer concluded flirting is a lost art as practiced today in comparison with what he saw expounded by sprightly Miss Farmer.

The temptation of gold found the star with an insatiable lust for money in her eye as she won at games of chance, and the temptation of fame found her seated on a golden throne side by side with Napoleon Bonaparte. Napoleon, it should be pointed out, promised Miss Farmer that all the world would bow before her, so great would be her fame as his queen.

Desire made itself apparent in the guise of a handsome Spaniard strumming his guitar, all the while telling in his lilting love song that it was love and love alone that mattered. Your correspondent wishes he could understand Spanish better, for in that event, the entire soliloquy of desire would herewith be reported.

Revelry took Miss Farmer back several hundred years to the Renaissance period when revelry was an art, and the temptation of wine went back several centuries further to ancient Rome when imbibing evidently was a life study.

The temptation of vice took Miss Farmer to a dim and drab cafe in Paris; jealousy found two handsome young men killing themselves in a duel for love of her, and the final temptation, death, finds the blonde actress plunging a dagger into her heart while the bells of Notre Dame Cathedral chime their sad requiem.

The 12 temptations will be incorporated in "The Toast of New York" along about the middle of the picture when Jim Fisk (Edward Arnold) presents Josie Mansfield (Frances Farmer) to the elite of Manhattan as a brilliant dramatic actress, we were informed by Director Lee.

Since "The Toast of New York" is a dramatization of the life of Jim Fisk, lothario and robber baron of America's '60s, the 12 temptations round out what your correspondent believes will be a Hollywood picture he will be strongly tempted to see.

Granting that newspapermen "lead such interesting lives," the group of persons who certainly live in close proximity to the Utopian existence is the brigade of Hollywood correspondents.

While there are some who undoubtedly will oppose this thought, both the pudding and the proof seem to be evident when the ever-increasing parade of film-stargazers who arrive daily in the citadel of the cinema is observed.

Like pilgrims arriving at a shrine, the avid devotees of the cinema arrive in Hollywood expecting Clark Gable, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and perhaps a bevy of sun-kissed beauties (sic) to be the welcoming committee who will present the keys to the city.

Being brutally frank, this does not happen, unless perhaps M. G. M. or R. K. O. by chance is having an international convention of motion-picture exhibitors at the time and the stars have been brought to the depot to greet the arriving delegates.

If such an event does not happen, the chances of the visitor to Hollywood seeing any of the stars of the film firmament in person are, to be frank, about as good as Hallie Selaisse's chances of returning in triumph to Ethiopia.

So it's pretty normal when the Hollywood visitor reads in a corre-

The Roadsiders Tune Up 'Waves' For Tomorrow

Final Touches Being Given Melodrama for Fourth Season's Inaugural.

Tonight the Roadside Theater adds the finishing touches to "The Wizard of the Wave." Lines, action, costumes, make-up, scenery, props—all will be checked by director Anton Hardt, designer-technician Henry Pearson, stage manager Eldred Wilson and other members of the board, in preparation for the opening on Monday night, June 14, of the barn theater's fourth summer season.

Even the pop-stand, where thirsty patrons imbibe soft drinks between the acts, will share the dress rehearsal. For actors, crew and staff, toiling from early morning till far into the night, are hungrier and thirstier than any audience could be!

"The Wizard of the Wave" promises to be as rollicking and exciting entertainment as any of Roadside's past melodramas. Nobility at its best, represented by a gallant English naval officer and his faithful crew, battles to the death with villiany at its worst in the persons of a ruthless pirate and his henchmen. There is a lovely heroine, daughter of the Spanish governor, who faces death at the hands of the pirates; there is an old woman who possesses the secret of the pirate leader's parentage, and there are sailors, marines, pirates, Spanish ladies and gentlemen, all involved in the titanic struggle.

In the cast will be Ralph Fowler, in the dual role of British captain and pirate chieftain; Virginia True, as the beautiful Isabinda; Denis E. Connell, as her father, governor of the island; Betty Rice, Jerry Hess, Mildred Baitz, Lawrence Beckerman, Frank Gaunt, Clarence Ruebsam, Rachel Sewell, Paul Messink, Miriamne Berkowich, Frieda Levy, R. H. Patton, Richard Walsh, Fred Kirby, Sidney Rogers, Frank Howard, Helen Myers, John McKnight, Hamilton Coit and John Rappolt.

A special feature will be a quadrille, danced by members of the cast and staged by Elizabeth Giles, who did the choreography for last year's "Around the World in 80 Days." Betty Gray will be at the piano.

Roland Is Guarded While Making Film

A bodyguard to conduct Gilbert Roland to and from the studio and accompany him whenever he goes out in public has been assigned the actor by G. A. Arthur, producing Roland's current film, "Last Train From Madrid," following threats addressed to Roland.

Reporters' Lives Good Screen Fare

As long as there are motion pictures, there will be newspaper screenplays, according to Benjamin Glazer, producer of "Exclusive," screen-newspaper drama, featuring Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan, a former newspaperman himself.

Style of Kisses On the Screen Is Now Relaxed

Embraces Assume New Ardor as Depression Ends and Romance Rides High.

Next year's kisses will be gentle and just a little more lingering than they have been in the past few years.

The styles are being set now on the sound stages of Hollywood, where the picture romances between stars and featured players are in the process of being manufactured and photographed.

"The depression seems to be over," says the rotund Archie Mayo, who is directing Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland in "It's Love I'm After," and that will most certainly be reflected in screened love, as in real romance.

"With financial security just around the corner, the world can find time to make love convincingly and unhurriedly. The four-foot kiss of the past three years can be lengthened now to occupy at least six feet of film."

Almost all the directors on the Warner Bros. lot agree with this theory and are putting it into practice. Lloyd Bacon's cryptic directions to kissers generally, which have always been "Make it short and snappy," has been changed to a more leisurely "Keep it sweet and gentle. Take your time."

Officially Hollywood is doing just that. The love scene between Kay Francis and Ian Hunter in their new pictures called "Confession," is one of the longest filmed in recent months, if not years. It is the kiss that is supposed to seal their betrothal and it will occupy all the time and space permitted now under the Hays office code.

Love scenes between Bette Davis and Henry Fonda, now being made under the direction of Edmund Goulding for "That Certain Woman," are also unusually prolonged and tender, photographically speaking.

In fact, it begins to look as though a rosy hue has encompassed Hollywood's love scenes. Knowing their value to a finished product, directors and players welcome the increasing attention being paid to kisses for the late summer and early winter product, not before the cameras.

As Hollywood pictures the kiss, so kiss the new young lovers the world around. And next year's kisses are already destined to be less violent but more tender. And they will be held longer.

WENDY BARRIE,

who appears in the principal feminine role, opposite Ray Milland, in "Wings Over Honolulu," the aviation picture now occupying the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater. William Gargan is importantly cast.

VICTOR MOORE AND BARBARA READ, the veteran stage actor and the new screen ingenue as they appear in "Make Way for Tomorrow," major attraction for the present week at Loew's Palace Theater. Beulah Bondi is cast as the wife.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT,

appearing on a local screen after a considerable absence in the stellar role of "I Met Him in Paris," this week's screen feature at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Melvyn Douglas is cast as her leading man.

Parks, Pictures and Personalities Concerned in Amusement World's Current Panorama

Glen Echo Park Hits Top Speed As Fun Center

Amusement Resort Offers Many Attractions, Now in Full Operation.

Glen Echo Park, the National Capital's playland, in an out-door recreation and amusement center, is jumping into mid-summer operation, having thousands visiting the more than 50 features daily.

During these hot days people seek the comfort of the country, beaches and rivers and many are finding just that at Glen Echo, with its 40 acres, situated in beautiful timber land, being swept by the river breezes and also having the seashore right there in the park, the large sand beach that adjoins the Crystal swimming pool.

During the week those wishing to dance can do so in perfect comfort in the spacious Spanish garden ballroom, to the strains of David McWilliams' orchestra, week nights, from 9 until midnight. The ballroom is open on three sides. During the intermissions those that wish to can go into the grounds, where many are finding the motor boats—U-Run-Em-Yourself—an extremely pleasant ride.

Schedule Big Pictures for Fall Release

Motion picture screens will have to be twice as high and as much broader to make way for the unusually large number of "big pictures" soon to be released by the Hollywood film studios.

After months of filming, Paramount's spectacular maritime drama "Souls at Sea," will have its world premiere at the Astor Theater, New York, and in other cities within a few weeks, and it is expected that Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee, Olympe Bradna and possibly others in the huge cast will go East for the opening.

The elaborate Irene Dunne starring picture, "High, Wide and Handsome," which Rouben Mamoulian is directing with Randolph Scott and Dorothy Lamour featured, will be ready for release a short time later. A romantic and dramatic musical by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein, it is a fast-moving panorama of the development of one of America's greatest and most colorful industries.

Later in the fall will come the eye-and-ear-filling "Artists and Models," in which Jack Benny is starred against a background of hundreds of supporting comedy stars, models and musicians. By that time the long-awaited Ernst Lubitsch picture, "Angel," in which Marlene Dietrich is starred, will be ready for the screen. It is the first picture that the great director has made in more than two years.

Two other pictures, as pretentious, will be put before the cameras within the week; Frank Lloyd's epic, "An Empire Is Born," and the first Technicolor picture to be filmed entirely at sea, "Ebb Tide," in which the great English screen favorite, Oscar Homolka, will make his American debut. "Ebb Tide" will be directed by James Hogan, with Frances Farmer and Ray Milland in the supporting cast.

Other pictures, almost ready, and into which an extraordinary amount of time and money have been invested, include the topical drama, "Last Train From Madrid." "Mountain Music," co-starring Bob Burns and Martha Raye; the Bing Crosby picture, "Double or Nothing" and the Jean Arthur-Edward Arnold comedy classic, "Easy Living," from a screen play by Preston Sturges, directed by Mitchell Leisen.

"Big pictures are coming back in a big way," William LeBaron, managing director of production, declared. "The public is tired of drawing room comedies as a steady diet."

Bad Actor Good.

Paul Guilfoyle, menace of "You Can't Beat Love," co-starring Preston Foster and Joan Fontaine, can't get away from "rat" roles. Since coming to Hollywood he has played in 10 bad men roles in 11 pictures.

GLADYS GEORGE,

who made a personal triumph out of her appearance in "Valiant Is the Word For Carrie," and now is to be seen on the screen at the Columbia, with Spencer Tracy and Franchot Tone in a repeat engagement of "They Gave Him a Gun."

Broadway's Latest News Told Crisply by a Lively Go-Getter

All of the Chatter of New York and Its Environs Comes First-Hand From One of Gotham's Most Alert and Competent Commentators.

By Leonard Lyons.

New York, June 12.

Garson Kanin, George Abbott's assistant, will arrive in Hollywood today. Sam Goldwyn sent for him to discuss final terms for his employment there . . . Kanin received the message Friday night at the Tavern here. "And remember," Goldwyn's representative warned him, "please don't go Hollywood" . . . "I won't." Kanin promised, collected his papers, walked outside, called a cab, and told the driver: "The Beverly-Wilshire, please!"

Jackie Osterman revealed this last night . . . Two hours after the premiere of "Night in Paris," Jackie read the critics' reviews—all of them laudations of his talents. He sought out Lee Shubert at the Astor and suggested that his $550 salary be increased . . . The critics say I'm great in the show, so I want more money," he demanded . . . Shubert meditated a while and then asked: "Jackie, how old are you?" . . . The comic confessed that he was 23. "Well, you're so young yet," Shubert argued. "Twenty-three years old, and already making $550 a week. What more could you want?" . . . "More dough," Osterman replied. "After all, Jackie Coogan is only 10 years old—and already he's retired!"

Ann Pennington: Beatrice Lillie saw your name in lights at Broadway and Forty-ninth and so went inside the Trans-Lux Theater to see you. She sat through two hours of newsreels and movie shorts, in none of which did you appear . . . Miss Lillie exited, somewhat puzzled, until she suddenly realized that the electric sign advertised your appearance at the cafe located above the Trans-Lux . . . the Paradise!

George Roosevelt: Your son, G. R. jr., whom you barred from the night clubs last year, is on the rampage again. He danced last night with a cocktail in each hand and wearing a cowboy hat. Besides, he had almost 20 girls at his table drinking wine . . . Ford Frick: Dizzy Dean took a bow at Leon & Eddie's last night, rushed to the mike and told the patrons: "I won't apologize to Umpire Quigley or to Frick. Quigley is a sub-stooge for Frick" . . . Dentists Association: Noel Coward had his teeth cleaned by a dentist and was told: "Expectorate, please" . . . "What?" Coward replied. 'ME spit?" . . . Lic. Com. Paul Moss: Janice Andre, who did the Lady Godiva number at the Paradise, was released from her employment by Nicky Blair. "After I've been here a year," she complained, "and you give me only 3 days' notice" . . . "You're wrong," Blair reminded. "After you were here 3 days I gave you a year's notice!"

Lloyds: That $30,000 violin of Jules Lande's, on which you'd issue only $10,000 insurance for its transportation to the exhibit in Italy, now is in the museum there. The Italian government itself insured the $20,000 difference . . . Walter Wanger: "Baron" Jack Kriendler, of "21," probably will accept your invitation to appear in the movie "Fifty-second Street." Leon & Eddie's have cut their demands from $40,000 to $25,000 . . . Joseph Gedeon: The Broadway squad now is at work on an involved job. They're checking up on every one of the 2,000 names and addresses discovered in the book they found in Robert Irwin's apartment.

Harvard Univ.: Gregory Ratoff, who writes exactly as he talks, wrote to his lawyer, Abe Berman: "See 'Cafe Matropole.' I wrutt it mine-salff. I'm de bastt hector in it. ent ess furr the finish—huh boy!" . . . Buddy Rogers: Your fiancee, Mary Pickford, was in Jack & Charlie's last night, with Elsa Maxwell's party. A tall, distinguished man, who also was one of Miss Maxwell's guests, kissed Mary goodnight—and America's Sweetheart blushed.

PERSONALS: Joseph Israel O'Hara, brother of Novelist John O'Hara, will be married July 3 to Rosemary White. . . . The principals are very much excited now preparing for each detail of the wedding ceremony. After four visits to the priest, who will perform the ceremony, he finally assured them: "Please, please. It's all very simple. Let Emily Post take care of you till the church door—and from then on you're in our hands."

TRAVEL DEPT.: C. B. Cochrane, the British producer, visited backstage and was introduced to some luminaries visiting the dressing rooms. . . . "You know Fannie Brice here," Cochrane was told. . . . "Of course, of course," he gushed. "I met you in Paris" . . . and extended his hand to Frances—Fannie's 17-year-old daughter.

SOCIETY NOTES: Erskine Gwynne was at El Morocco last night, nursing an old wound in his arm. "I got it in the war," he explained, "and every time it's about to rain the wound bothers me." . . . The three ladies at the table were most solicitous and consoling about this war hero. . . . As a matter of truth, Gwynne sustained the wound at Bordeaux during the war — a thousand miles away from the front. He got it by being kicked by a mule!

TRUTH: Sam Harris denied, last night, that henceforth he will produce only those plays written by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. "No, that story isn't true," Harris insisted. . . . "I'll produce any plays I like," he explained. "Of course, it is true, that the only plays I seem to like are those written by Kaufman and Hart!"

REVENGE: Robert Coleman, the drama critic, has never been invited to join the Drama Critics Circle. This year, for the first time, his reviews were included in Variety's Box Score for Critics—a tabulation which proved Coleman the season's most accurate predictor of a play's success or failure. . . . Mr. Coleman is having his sweet revenge. For if the Critics Circle should decide to invite him to join—he'll decline!

CLYDE LUCAS,

Filmland Hops To Town in This Cheerful News

Our Studio Correspondent Misses Very Few Tricks of Any Value.

By Jimmy Fidler.

Hollywood, June 12.

The film industry is rapidly storing up legends. Garbo's "Ay tank ay go home" is traditional, for instance. And Lupe Velez's wild-hair escapades. And John Barrymore's profile. You can think of others.

But few legends are as amusing as those about independent producers who make movies on shoe strings. There was the time, for example, when such a producer needed scenes of a fire company enroute to a blaze. A camera crew was hidden in a vacant building, and a false alarm was rung. That way the company obtained the required scenes.

The newest gag to save money was thought up by this same cheap picture-maker. He needed a scene of his star stepping from a train. So he ordered his camera crew set up—and for 50 cents, bought his actor a ticket. Thus, the camera crew obtained the scene for an actual outlay of four bits.

Frances Dee McCrea was telling me about the change in Joel, jr., since his first grown-up haircut. "He's a big man now,'" she laughed, "and the first person he insisted on showing it to was Marie, our cook." The old story; a man's heart is reached through his stomach.

Overheard a "yes man," trying to ace himself into the good graces of a minor studio official with: "You're too big to be a small cog in the wheel. You ought to go out for yourself. Produce on your own. Be a one-man organization. Then, when things get going good, you could put on a man." The producer studied for a moment, then said: "And if things don't go so good, I could take off a man, eh?"

When I heard Marlene Dietrich say: "Acting has always been difficult for me because mother taught me that any display of emotion was improper," I had to hold myself to keep from saying: "My, what a good girl you've been all these years!"

My old friend Gregory Ratoff, who has always pined to trade his grease-paint for a megaphone, has been made a director. I watched him working today and asked how he liked directing. "It's stupendous," he assured me. "One thousand dollars I spent last year on a diet. I ate all my meals in a hospital. But I couldn't get thin. One week ago I started this picture and already I've worried off from myself 15 pounds of fat. It's colossal! It's marvelous!"

Preston Foster told me this yarn about his old stock company days. They were doing a meller-drama of the "East Lynn" ilk. For the climax, lights were doused after a shot from the villain's pistol, and the hero was to groan: "My God! He got me!" One night the pistol refused to fire. When it had clicked three times the hero arose to the occasion: "My God!" he groaned. "He got me—with a knife!"

Joan Bennett was laughing about the trouble her former husband, Gene Markey, used to encounter while trying to work at home. Seems that Melinda, their 3-year-old, had a terrific crush on him and made a bee line for his study whenever she heard his typewriter clicking.

"One day," said Joan, "he put her out three times. The last time, he very sternly told her not to bother him again. A few minutes later the door opened and Melinda peeked cautiously in.

"'Don't you love me any more, daddy?" she asked."

While I'm on the kiddie subject, here is a story that shows how strong the Simone Simon influence must be around Movie Magnate Darryl Zanuck's home. Recently, Mrs. Zanuck took tiny Darrylin out to the studio to see Sonja Henie skate. Before they reached the sound stage, the scene was finished, but Darrylin, who seems to have inherited her father's persistence, said: "I came to see Henie Henie skate and I won't go 'til I do!"

On the "Born Reckless" set, I encountered Brian Donlevy who plays a hard-boiled taxi driver. He was nursing a bandaged finger—one of those balloon-bodied hospital wrappings that can't go unseen. Early in the production of the picture, it seems, he staged a too realistic fight with Barton MacLane. During the melee, a bottle broke and Brian's finger was nearly amputated. "You've gotta hand it to these directors—they're smart," he told me. "I figured on at least two weeks' vacation, the first in over a year. But nothing doing! They wrote in a new situation to account for the bandages and kept right on shooting!"

Which reminds me of Ronald Colman, who also has a grievance. Granted a month vacation, Ronnie bought a boat and spent two solid weeks trolling for Marlin swordfish without getting a single bite. Giving up in disgust, he loaned the boat to a friend who had never fished—and went to the desert. Two days later, he saw a picture of his friend in the paper. You guessed it: The friend had hooked a record Marlin!

Morning mail note: "Hollywood treats its crooks well. Just yesterday I read where they gave a "scene stealer" five years—at $2,000 a week!"

Star Has Famous Seven Dollar Bill

A headline in a newspaper that the feminine owner of an American seven-dollar bill, issue of 1775, is seeking to determine its value reminded Gilbert Roland recently that he has one of the same denomination and year.

Roland, who received it from his father, Don Francisco de Alonso, noted Spanish matador, has kept the bill framed as a wall decoration in his home for years.

No discreet amusement-seeker who never has seen it, or wishes to see it again, should overlook the vital fact that Paul Muni and Josephine Hutchinson are back on the screen at the Metropolitan in "The Story of Louis Pasteur." This is the picture which brought its star the Academy award for the best acting of the year and is a realistic study of a remarkable and an heroic career.

If you care to see and hear airplanes zooming around through the skies, RKO-Keith's is the place for you and "Wings Over Honolulu" the picture.

WITH the opening of the Roadside Theater tomorrow night for its fourth season of summer theater in the "old red barn," it may confidently be taken for granted that the "heated term" practically is here.

I don't know where the Roadsiders exhume all of these ancient melodramas that they put on, but they are coming along with another one tomorrow night in "The Wizard of the Waves." This item is said to coincide perfectly with the company's policy of mixing chills, thrills and laughter.

The play was a hit back about the time grandpa was a boy and is said to have had excessively long runs in a number of large Eastern cities. We shall see what we shall see.

Next on the roster of summer amusements to get under way will be Stephen E. Cochran's University of Maryland Summer Theater Company, for which subscriptions already are being taken. It will be operated on the same policy as Mr. Cochran's National Theater Players that operated so successfully in the Capital for 11 successive summers.

These casual Sabbath observations only serve to earmark Washington as the best theater town in America outside of New York. Try to find another like it.

Wilson Line Is Cooling Crowds

Thousands of Washingtonians have learned the secret of keeping cool as indicated by the capacity crowds riding the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington.

The conveniently arranged schedule on which the City of Washington sails daily at 10 a. m., 2, 5:30 and 8:30 p. m., makes it possible for everyone to find a departure time best suited to his wishes.

A sail on the river aboard the comfortable steamer is like a good summer tonic. Plenty of deck space, easy chairs and courteous attendants, all make for the maximum enjoyment of guests of the Wilson Line.

Steamer Potomac Resumes Cruises

The steamer Potomac is making its regular moonlight cruises every night with large crowds and will make its regular trip next Sunday to Colonial Beach.

Those on board the Potomac last Sunday, when the steamer broke a "bucket" just below Quantico and the captain elected to wait for help instead of proceeding, had a fine time dancing to good swing music and listening to the baseblal game being broadcast over one of the local stations.

The Potomac River Line had the minor repairs fixed in a few hours.

The Swing Band of Washington—namely Bernie Jarboe and his "NightHawks"—have been causing much comment on the Potomac this year.

Postmen Serving Hollywood Really Take a Beating; Fan Letters Pour in to the Tune of 125,000 a Week

OLIVIA DE HAVILAND, above, out-distances her fellow actors at her studio in the amount of fan mail she receives. Her nearest equal in popularity as far as the writers are concerned, is Anita Louise. Shirley Temple, center, receives a weekly mailbag not quite as large as those of C. B. DeMille and Bing Crosby. Janet Gaynor, upper right, is an independent star whose mail is almost beyond counting.

Greatest Total at Warner Goes to Olivia de Haviland

Shirley Temple Ranks Third Among Those Receiving the Most Mail; Before Her Are Cecil B. DeMille and Bing Crosby.

By Jeannette Meehan.

Hollywood.

Here, at least, is one phase of the movie industry that's really colossal.

Hollywood's morning mail!

Let's see, now. The number of fan letters received in Hollywood averages 125,000 a week; times four for the number of weeks in the month is—4 times 5 is 20, hmmm—that's it; times 12 for the number of months in the year is—oh—why not multiply by 52 in the first place? Well, add it up and what have you got? Ah, there—did you know that the thousands of picture fans all over the world write nearly 6,500,000 letters a year to the 445 actors under contract to the major studios?

And that doesn't include the fan mail received by a couple of hundred free-lance players, including a few big names like Fredric March, Leslie Howard and Janet Gaynor. Nor does it include the hundred-odd players under contract to the independent companies.

And, heavens! that estimate (based on facts) doesn't include the packages addressed to Hollywood stars—gifts from fans—which average about 200 a week.

Pity the Hollywood postman!

Take Mail Seriously.

The vital statistics and miscellaneous items concerning Hollywood's morning mail supply one with such a wealth of material that, s'help you, you scarcely know where to begin.

Hollywood takes its fan mail seriously, both star and studio. These letters are written by theater-goers, and anyone who goes to the ticket window is a friend of the studio. Besides that, these human documents are an unfailing barometer on a player's popularity.

M.-G.-M. takes it so seriously that it has just installed a new fan-mail department. There are 12 permanent employes.

But that isn't enough. Every now and then they have to call in two or three girls from the script department who aren't busy.

Having more stars than any other studio, 22 of them, and 70 featured players to boot, M.-G.-M. holds the record—its department handling 35,000 fan letters a week.

This department functions much the same as similar departments at all other studios. The letters are carefully sorted as to the recipient, counted and a detailed report goes to the front office at frequent intervals. Letters requesting pictures and general information are answered by the studio. Letters that are intelligently written and contain constructive suggestions or criticism are delivered to the stars' homes where they are answered personally or by a private secretary.

Eighty Per Cent Ask Photos.

Again, as in the case of other studios, M.-G.-M. finds that 80 per cent of its stars' fan letters are requests for pictures. Ten per cent criticize or praise some particular favorite, and 10 per cent come under the heading of the "touch system," including pests and cranks.

A survey of all the studios reveals the fact that most of the foreign fan mail comes from South America, where there are more fan magazines dealing with Hollywood than on any other continent except Holllywood's own.

Let's take a few general questions. Who, for instance, receives the most fan mail of anybody in Hollywood? Nope. You'll never guess. Cecil B. DeMille is first, Bing Crosby is second and Shirley Temple is third!

But you've got to be fair to Shirley. Besides being celebrated picture personalities, Mr. DeMille and Mr. Crosby have large radio followings which account for a certain percentage of their tremendous morning mail. Therefore, as a straight star, Shirley leads the field, receiving from 6,000 to 7,000 letters a week.

DeMille receives about 35,000 fan letters a month. The director's unit at Paramount handles his mail, and not a single missive of it ever goes unanswered! Sixty per cent of it is from young people who want to know how to get into pictures. Twenty per cent is from people who suggest pictures for him to make, and 20 per cent is from people who tell him how to make pictures.

175,000 Photos Sent.

Bing Crosby's fan mail averages about 25,000 letters a month and it is handled by the Crosby Corporation, not by the studio. According to information from that office, last year they sent out 175,000 autographed pictures of Bing, which, as far as can be ascertained, is tops.

Strangely enough, a good third of Bing's fan mail is from girls who, disregarding the fact that the crooning star has a wife and three husky sons, offer him proposals of marriage.

Incidentally, Paramount, where De Mille and Crosby are under contract, receives an average of 25,000 fan letters a week. Warner Brothers receive about 60,000 a month.

At Warners, where such girls as Kay Francis, Bette Davis and Joan Blondell are under contract, you'd expect one of them to receive the most fan mail of any woman on the lot. But, no sir! In the number of letters she receives, little Olivia de Havilland is far away and above any other feminine star at that studio.

Anita Louise ranks next to Olivia. Then, in their proper order, come Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler and Kay Francis. Marie Wilson and Bette Davis tie for sixth place. Dick Powell, Errol Flynn and Mervyn LeRoy's discovery, Fernand Gravet, are tops among the men on this lot.

Perhaps it's only natural that the fan mail received by certain stars is written in the same vein by the same type of people. Olivia de Havilland's fans beg her to "stay as sweet as you are." Errol Flynn's fans don't like his mustache. They'd also like him to stay home and make pictures instead of sailing across the seas and getting mixed up in a revolution.

Kay's Gowns Sought.

"Please send me that gold lame gown you wore in your last picture" is the gist of Kay Francis' fan mail.

Out at Twentieth Century-Fox they handle about 15,000 letters a week. Of this huge number Shirley Temple receives the most, with Loretta Young and Jane Withers running a close second. Don Ameche receives the most of any man.

On this lot we find that same "sameness" in fan letters. In the last six months more than a thousand people have asked for the laces from Sonja Henie's skating shoes. If little Miss Temple complied with all the requests for one of her curls, she would be permanently bewigged. The fans write to Rochelle Hudson about the care of the figure, and to Loretta Young about the care of the teeth and eyes.

Over at Radio they handle about 35,000 letters a month, most of which are addressed to Ginger Rogers—proposals from college boys and letters from girls who want advice to the lovelorn.

Although Katharine Hepburn is considered Radio's most distinguished star, Barbara Stanwyck, Fred Astaire and Ann Sothern all receive more fan mail than she does. Katie's mail is mostly from professors, school teachers and professional people.

And of all the players on the Radio lot, who do you think gets the most fan mail from abroad?—Wheeler and Woolsey!

Up the street from Radio is Columbia, where two young men named Don Smith and Jake Angel handle 15,000 fan letters a month, a right smart number for a smaller studio which has few big names under contract. Jean Arthur receives the most mail of anyone on this lot.

Out at Universal, John Boles, Doris Nolan, Tala Birell and Kent Taylor get a lot of fan mail. But the girl who gets more than anyone else is Deanna Durbin, who has only appeared in one picture. Of the men at Universal—surprise, surprise—Buck Jones gets the most mail.

Most Writers Honest.

Not only does he receive as many letters as most of the great lovers, he's one of the highest paid actors in the business. Although his high shootin', ripsnortin' horse operas don't get world premieres in the Hollywood orchid-and-ermine fashion, they play in the smaller towns all over the world and, believe his bosses, they make money.

Indeed, fan mail is rather an expansive subject. We haven't yet touched the gifts sent to stars from their adoring fans.

One thing is very definite. Any expensive pesents are immediately returned to the donor, unless the gift comes from someone who has written the star over a long period of time and who is known to the studio authorities.

Studios and stars became cautious back in the year 1930 when Richard Arlen accepted a beautiful collie puppy from a fan. Ten days later he received a bill for $500. He returned the bill—along with the dog.

That a large portion of fan mail is written by people with honest and sincere motives is appreciated by star and studio, but there is a small percentage written by people who pass the bounds of propriety.

A young man recently wrote to Ginger Rogers asking for $100 to buy a cow. If she sent the money, he promised her the questionable reward of naming the animal after her.

THE stars get some odd requests from their fans. Rochelle Hudson gets many letters asking for advice about the care of the figure.

Extras Chief Sufferers in Coast Labor Battle.

By Hubbard Keavy.

Hollywood.—I wanted to see Joan Crawford in a picket line. Accompanied by Mr. Tone.

That would have been a picture, Joan and Franchot, arm in arm, parading up and down in front of Louie B. Mayer's office. Demanding better working conditions.

I'm not going to witness such a spectacle because the producers decided that it is better to humor actors than to fight them. Seriously, I didn't expect to see stars doing strike duty. Imagine a corporation—which is just what an actor getting a half million a year amounts to—in a picket line. It doesn't make sense.

Never Expected To.

The actors never expected to strike. They knew that if they did, public sympathy would be so against them that the movies would have to hire a new set of puppets. Some of the ringleaders—Montgomery, Karloff, Lionel Stander, Cagney and Frank Morgan—were out on a limb and they'd have been forced to make the grand gesture.

This is why 98 per cent of the actors would have ignored the strike call: If an "artist" under contract refuses to work, for any reason, he voids his agreement and immediately becomes liable for damages for denying to his employer anticipated profits. And, for the period of that contract he would not be allowed to work for anyone else at the only calling he knows.

A longshoreman can strike and if he doesn't get his job back, he can drive a truck. But an actor. . . . Well, who ever heard of supporting a swimming pool and a former wife or two on a truck driver's salary?

An actors' strike would have been the world's outstanding fizzle.

Sorrow for Extras.

One can feel a touch of sorrow for some extras.

A small group—the 100 or so who have an "in"—make a respectable living. A few thousand struggle, year after year, on an average income of $100 a month. Many more thousands exist on their pitiful average of $7.50 a week.

An ambitious person never becomes an extra. As a class, extras are notably lazy. Any of them could make a better living at ordinary jobs—but they'd have to work and keep regular hours.

Blind Pianist To Play Sunday Over Network

Alec Templeton to Appear in Universal Rhythm Program.

Alec Templeton, the blind English pianist, who will be heard next Sunday on the "Universal Rhythm" program, can single out no particular audience as giving him his greatest thrill. Every concert in which he has participated has thrilled him just as much as his first. He has never known nervousness and has never been self-conscious.

Templeton made his debut five years ago with Jack Hylton's Continental Revue in London. At that time he was 22. Thereafter he toured England, France, Holland and Germany with Hylton's troupe and came to America with him in 1935.

Standing only five feet, four inches, Alec Templeton presents an extremely youthful appearance that belies his 27 years. He's a very cheery individual, has a keen sense of humor and thoroughly enjoys meeting people. When he plays the piano, it's a moot question just who has the best time, the audience or Templeton. He's that kind of an artist.

Special Program Aimed for Autoists

Here's a special radio program for Sunday drivers. It is directed primarily to the motorists who choose the open road. Headlining Fields and Hall, veteran singing comedians; Frances Adair, novelty singer, and the Mountain Orchestra, the show had its inception last spring. Since the "Sunday Drivers" are trying to help the traffic situation, they want to do it in a "sugar-coated" method. For example, when Fields introduces a song, he says, "it's an old mountain ditty that ain't got no sense to it at all. It ain't got no more sense to it than the feller who drives with bad brakes.—And there ain't no chance in the world of getting a 'good break,' with bad brakes, is there?"

Fan mail they receive by the bushels, and they are usually postcards, written from roadside inns, barbecue and hot-dog stands, stop-off places along the roads from Maine to California. They are heard each Sunday over the NBC red network at 1 p. m.

Owned First Uke in U.S., Al Pearce Confesses

Al Pearce, star of the "Watch the Fun Go By" program, owned the first ukulele in the United States. Or so he claims, but if he wants to take the blame for it, let him. A boyhood friend of Pearce, Charlie Lewis, returned from a vacation trip to Honolulu in 1913 and brought with him a ukulele made of sugar pine.

He presented it to Al. It had no strings, but this did not daunt the spirit of our young hero. He obtained some strings and soon made the instrument which was the first of its kind in this country.

Temptations

spondent's movie column of the personal life of a Hollywood celebrity, that he envies that correspondent his position and working station in life. From reading the correspondent's literary efforts it is plain to see that the existence of the movie-town cinema writer-correspondent is quite Utopian in many respects.

In fact, if the truth be known, it's the Hollywood correspondents—not the film stars, the movie scenarists, the directors, the ace cameramen, the major-domos of the studios—who really have the fun in filmland. Always the welcome invited guest wherever he goes, the film correspondent is definitely a wearer of the purple toga in the royal ranks of cinema society.

If Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are entertaining at a swank party, the Hollywood correspondent is there; if Twentieth Century-Fox is holding a premiere, say, of "Captains Courageous," you'll find the correspondent parked in third-row center with the sincere compliments of the studio; if Gene Raymond gives a cocktail party, if Ginger Rogers gives a skating party, if Jack Oakie entertains with a novel party at his Beverly Hills home, there you'll find the correspondent, togged out in his or her best, mingling with the stars and getting all the news that's fit to print.

It's a long cry and a far cry from the life of the average newspaperman in other cities in America, where there are city desks, and city editors, regular beats and working hours which no 40-hour week will ever manage to include completely. "It's nice work if you can get it," say the Hollywood correspondents.

Perhaps a brief observation of the modus operandi of the Hollywood correspondent would kleiglight the Utopian life lived by this regal branch of the newspaper guild. Since he gathers his news through social contacts, his existence to a great extent is social. He has an office, but it's only the place, for the most part, where he files his copy for the wire services—for the Associated Press, the United Press, International News Service—and the special one-paper exclusives.

For breakfast at 7 in the morning you might find your correspondent dining with Spencer Tracy (because when a star has an early-morning call that's the only time you can talk to him), luncheon might find him with Preston Foster, tea time will find him on the set with Katharine Hepburn, dinner might pair him with Ann Southern and husband Roger Pryor. Since there's a preview of a film almost every night in Hollywood, he'll certainly attend the performance and afterward he'll go to the Brown Derby, the Vendome, the Victor Hugo, Levy's Tavern, Sardi's or any of a number of the film town's better eating establishments for a snack and to talk to the leading players in the film he just witnessed.

Naturally, your correspondent does not have to pay for this "work." An expense account, or the thespian, takes care of the situation. However, it must be noted that "work" of this type tends to produce a portly group of men and women slightly afflicted with small but effective stomach ulcers.

When midnight slips swiftly past and the hour hand approaches 2, your correspondent is tired of the giddy pace, and so he goes to what Hollywood calls a border cafe—a small restaurant where perhaps a Mexican orchestra of three pieces strums languid melodies. And there with his brethren and sistern he talks of movies, while maybe a senorita dances gaily.

Service of "Huge Proportions" Seen for Television by Hanson

An American television service of "stupendous proportions," built with the help of dozens of sciences, is foreseen by O. B. Hanson, chief engineer of the National Broadcasting Company, in an article published in the RCA Review. Hanson describes the solution of some of the problems encountered in NBC's television studios by borrowing from all fields of science.

"To mention but a few," he writes, "it would be necessary to include optics, electronics, lighting, motion pictures, radio engineering, acoustics, air conditioning, photography, etc. The coordination of these sciences and the development of techniques which are applicable to television is a continuing process. The television field can only be briefly surveyed at this time, but from present knowledge there is ample reason to anticipate a public service of stupendous proportions, a medium with new engineering techniques, new program ideas, ned talent and new commercial application."

Television studio design, says Hanson, is influenced by each unit of equipment entering into a broadcast. The structural strength of the iconoscope, an electron tube, and the lens system of the camera are two determinants of the studio length. Studios must be high enough to raise the lighting equipment clear of the iconoscope's range and yet permit clear view of the entire set by engineers and production men in the elevated control booth.

Studio 50 Feet Long.

The direct pickup studio maintained by the National Broadcasting Company at Radio City is 50 feet long, 30 feet wide and 18 feet high.

It accomodates one large scene and at least one additional smaller one, permitting the shift from one to another at the will of production men. The studio's side walls are equipped with sliding panels, arranged in pairs, to control the absorption of sound. Spaces between panels are V'd to avoid the sound "flutter" caused by reverberation of sound in rooms with parallel walls.

"The microphone technique employed in television," says Hanson, "differs from that in radio mainly with regard to the respective locations of the microphone and the performers. In radio, the performers may change their location to suit the one chosen for the microphone, while in television the microphone must be moved to the location of the performer. It is further desirable to correlate the acoustical 'pick-up' with the video—that is, a 'close-up' should sound like a 'close-up' and a distant 'shot' should sound distant. It is the change in ratio of reflected to direct sound that creates this impression of promimity or distance.

Mikes Dropped From Boom.

"A majority of the 'pick-ups' have been made with the velocity microphone, equipped with wind shield, and suspended from a boom which traverses the scene of action. Provision has been made for the use of parabolic reflector microphones which will be suitable for many types of pick-up and will not require the careful manipulation necessary with the 'boom microphone.'"

The lighting system, with a total power consumption of more than 50 kilowatts, has created a serious problem in air conditioning. Lighting units, some suspended from the ceiling and others operated on the studio floor, generate so much heat that means have been sought to diffuse heat radiation for the comfort of performers and technicians.

Heat filters, placed in front of the various units, have partially alleviated the problem. These are of special glass, cut in strips to relieve internal stresses in the glass caused by the high temperature. They absorb a large part of the heat without causing undue reduction in the amount of incident light.

Miss Cravens Renewed.

Kathryn Cravens' "News Through a Woman's Eyes" will be heard throughout the summer, under terms of a contract renewal effective July 12. Miss Cravens came to New York from St. Louis last fall to become radio's first sponsored woman commentator on a Nation-wide network (C. B. S.)

Lily Pons Will Broadcast For Film Stars' Wedding

When Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond join hands in matrimony this Wednesday, they will be serenaded by Lily Pons. The marriage will take place in Hollywood, but Miss Pons, unable to attend the wedding of her dearest friend Miss MacDonald, will sing from New York, where she has engagements which, because of contracts, can't be broken.

The specially arranged program will be broadcast at 11:50 p. m., and will be heard here in Washington over WJSV.

Miss Swarthout Explains Plan For Student Art Colony Abroad

A plan for a colony in Italy for the use of worthy art students has been outlined by Gladys Swarthout, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Described as "just an idea at the present, but one that we're sure we'll be able to turn into reality soon," the plan envisions a center where young Americans can get a start in their chosen art.

The actual spot Miss Swarthout has in mind is a villa in Florence, Italy, boasting several wings of 20 rooms each. One wing, she says, will be set aside for the accommodation of seven or eight young Americans who can live there for two years under no restrictions whatsoever.

"Those we'd sponsor wouldn't necessarily have to be musicians," Miss Swarthout explains. "They could be painters, sculptors, writers or historians. We would supply them with a home and they could do whatever they wanted to do. They'd be under no obligation to us.

"I know how hard it is for a person with artistic ambition to get started these days. I was fairly fortunate. But, by and large, unless a person comes from a family of means, the going is pretty heavy. If we can help seven or eight young people over the rough spots every two years, we'll feel well satisfied."

These sentiments are especially convincing in view of the fact that Miss Swarthout, herself, has been spared from traveling a long hard road to success. Her ability, charm and willingness to apply herself have speeded her along with short cuts at every point. Still young, she has behind her a career which includes the Chicago Civic Opera, the Metropolitan Opera, several coast-to-coast concert tours, and several feature motion pictures.

From the start, fate took a hand in making things easy for her. When she was engaged by the Chicago Civic Opera Company some few years ago, she didn't know a single complete operatic role. She had sung in concert and had listened to her friends urge her to make an attempt at opera. Finally, the friends took matters in their own hands and arranged an audition for her in Chicago. She sang a few of the arias that she had learned for her concert repertoire and was signed to a contract.

New Singers Are Signed For Show Boat Program

Thomas L. Thomas, baritone, and Nadine Conner, soprano, have been signed as feature singers for a two-year period on the Show Boat program, starting July 8, when the cast moves West to broadcast from Hollywood. Both singers will share the radio spotlight with Charles Winninger, who is starred as Captain Henry.

Noted Diva To Be Guest Star Soloist

Made Debut With First Operatic Program Over Radio.

New Summer Series With Bonelli to Start June 20.

Lovely Josephine Antoine, young coloratura soprano, will be guest soloist on tonight's Ford Sunday Evening Hour. Tonight's broadcast will be this season's final performance. Since the time Miss Antoine made her debut in grand opera she has sung to an aural as well as visual audience. She holds the distinction of being the first prima dona ever to make her operatic debut simultaneously with a broadcast of an opera.

It was early in 1936 when Miss Antoine stood before the large audience of the Metropolitan Opera House and made her debut in the role of Philine in the opera "Mignon." Then it was, too, that the few thousand in the audience and the large radio audience knew that the world had a new operatic star.

On her graduation in 1929 from the Colorado University College of Music, Miss Antoine entered a competition and received a prize of a year's study at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. By 1932 she was singing in such consequential events as "The Messiah" in Carnegie Hall. A year later she was soloist at the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Festival here.

Tonight, in the Detroit Masonic Auditorium, where the program originates, Miss Antoine will sing many favorites which are listed in program form elsewhere on this page.

Beginning June 20, at this time, a new summer series of the "Universal Rhythm" program will be inaugurated. These broadcasts will present Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan Opera baritone; Alec Templeton, blind English piano virtuoso; Carolyn Urbanek, soprano, and Rex Chandler's Orchestra.

The Sunday Evening Hour, which was voted the "best musical program on the air" by the Women's National Radio Committee for the past season, has employed a galaxy of guest conductors, including Alexander Smallens, Fritz Reiner, Jose Iturbi, Victor Kolar and Eugene Normandy.

Instrumental and vocal artists heard on the program included Kirsten Flagstad, Gladys Swarthout, Lucresia Bori, Jascha Heifetz, Lily Pons, Richard Crooks, Josef Hofmann, Nelson Eddy, John Charles Thomas and many others.

"Hymn to the Sun," from Rimsky-Korsakow's fantastic opera "Le Coq d'Or" and the lullaby from Godard's "Jocelyn" are among the selections to be sung by Josephine Antoine, youthful Metropolitan coloratura, on the concluding broadcast of the current Ford Sunday Evening Hour series tonight.

Under the direction of Eugene Ormandy, the program will be heard over WJSV from 8 to 9 p. m. Opening the broadcast the Ford Symphony Orchestra will present Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance." Other orchestral selections will include the "Dream Pantomime," from "Hansel and Gretel," by Humperdinck, and the stirring "Rakoczy March," by Hector Berlioz.

American Scientists Nearing Discovery of Birth Control Hormones To Free the Human Race From Its Many Physical Ills

Practical Use Matter of Time, Experiments on Animals Show.

Gland Secretions Retard or Alter Sex Functions, Studies Indicate.

Science teeters on the brink of its greatest advance in years—the discovery of birth control hormones. From a dozen high experimental sources comes word of progress, more sensational in its implications than any adduced since the great objective—the regeneration and the refinement of physical man—has become the subject of lifelong intensive research and experimentation among leading physicists, biochemists and representatives of all the related branches of medical science.

These scientists are carrying their beneficent fight right to the cradle of the infant; they have found that, except for microbes, the sentient being is the worst enemy of the human race, for he improves everything about him but insists on accepting his own person as either perfect or inevitable. Realizing that nature alone can perform the functions of breeding but can exert no intelligent control of that breeding, he has joined hands with nature in the production of superior fruit and flowers and vegetables and domesticated animals—but himself has been as haphazard in the control of his own destiny as any wild creature. Even more so, for, in the words of Prof. Ernest A. Hooton, Harvard anthropologist, "the biological status of man seems to decline as his culture accelerates."

So, aside of such heroic measure as compulsory sterilization to prevent the spread of the biologically unfit—a program difficult to reconcile with the principles of a democracy—the breeding of better babies through birth control and the eventual promulgation of a code of biological ethics for the rising generations seems the immediately indicated course for science to pursue in order eventually to achieve a "biological purge." And the hormone is a heaven-sent agency of enormous possibilities in that endeavor.

Hormones are powerful substances produced in various parts of the body which establish a chemical balance and account for sex. Experiments with the hormone among animals have yielded such convincing results that their application to humans is conceded to be only a matter of time. But investigation and classification of various types of hormones and their functions first must be completed.

Dr. Raphael Kurzrok, of Presbyterain Hospital-Columbia Medical Center, experimenting with rabbits and other animals, already has investigated four types of hormones and established their functions—and has made the discovery that repeated injections of certain types either delayed or hastened pregnancy. Moreover, he has observed a state of temporary "hormonal sterility" in women who took doses of certain hormones as treatment for ailments. He summed up his conclusions after these experiments as follows:

"The potentialities of hormonal sterilization are tremendous; the problem is important enough to warrant extensive work on the human."

Quite as enthusiastic was Dr. Werner Heilbrun, Vienna disciple of Dr. Steinach, who gave the world "monkey glands" to halt the inroads of old age. On a visit to New York recently he revealed that an atom or two of hydrogen added to the female sex hormone will change that substance so that it will assume the properties of the male hormone.

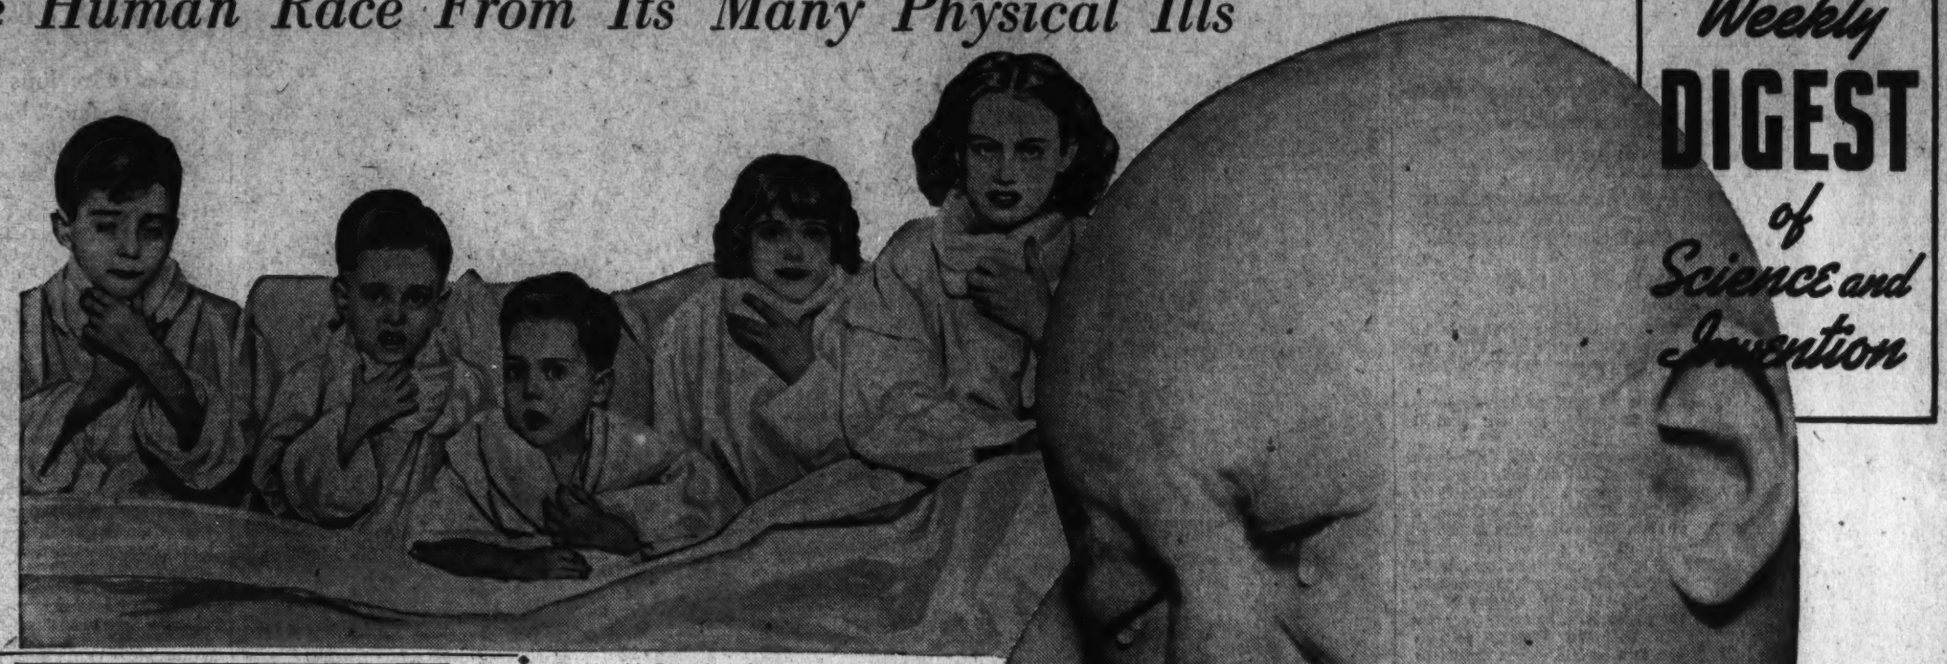
"Inasmuch as it is well known that neither man nor woman are sexually 100 per cent whole, due to infinitesimal differences in hormones, or gland functions, it is patent that when chemists are able to manufacture artificial doses of this substance, those people who are on the fence, so to speak, will be able to increase or decrease their physical characteristics," Dr. Heilbrun said. "This will make for better breeding, health, longer life."

Startling confirmation of sex inter-changeability is contained in the experiments of Dr. Robert K. Burns, jr., and Thomas R. Forbes, of the medical school of the University of Rochester. They treated baby male alligators with hypodermic injections of oestrone, a hormone normally produced in the female sex organs of all animals, with the result that the rudimentary egg-laying organs, present in all immature specimens, began to grow instead of disappearing—and a gradual change in sex took place as the saurian grew.

Surgery, regeneration of tissue and vitamins, too, are continuing to play a prominent part in the campaign to produce superior physical human beings. Dr. Tracy J. Putnam, of Boston Children's Hospital and Harvard Medical School, using for the first time an instrument which he developed, saved a child from idiocy and eventual death. He bored through the brain to the skull pan and burned away a thin glandular tissue which produced a spinal fluid that, through improper drainage, was absorbed by the blood. Dr. Oscar E. Schotte, Amherst professor, demonstrated for the first time that through regenerative tissue human beings might grow new organs in place of old ones in the course of time. He grafted a small eye-cup of an embryonic animal into the healing part of amputated tails of newts, salamanders and frogs—and shortly there began the growth of numerous eye-lenses. From the outer borders of these lens cells there developed eyes, ears, mouths and even brain tissue. Thus, in the case of humans, admitted Dr. Schotte, it is within the bounds of reason that surgeons could so manipulate amputated bodies as to allow these, under their own organizing material, to recreate the missing member.

Reports of further progress in the discovery and classification of vitamins, to cover an increased scope of human ills, come from several sources. They hit scurvy often accompanied by bleeding gums and skin; beri-beri, a Far Eastern disease and rickets.

From vitamins to hormones—to genes! When science puts its exacting finger on the latter, surely then man at last will begin to know himself. Even then, the key to the riddle of Life may lie beyond the physical or even the meta-physical—in some new vale of electro-psychic science.



NEW discoveries of vitamins and the promise of birth control through Hormones are likely to make the above scene of suffering impossible. These kiddies had their tonsils yanked. Less fortunate than the baby at right is the infant below, circle; he is being saved from blindness by use of silver nitrate solution.

Milestones of Science

A new method of making concrete is considered the most recent development in the entire active building construction field. It has been demonstrated that by covering poured concrete with a mat and sucking out the air and excess water, atmospheric pressure compacts the slab. In this way a quicker setting, stronger, denser and more uniform structure is made. It is possible to walk on such concrete 20 minutes after pouring, without leaving footmarks.

Fruits and vegetables are now being dipped in paraffin before shipment to distant markets. This treatment, it has been found, preserves their moisture content and natural freshness and thereby places garden-fresh products in the hands of consumers days and even weeks after picking. Canadian growers are adopting this method for preserving turnips and rutabagas for shipment thousands of miles to United States markets. Paraffin-sealed turnips showed no evidence of shriveling after weeks in transit and storage.

Fairfield, Iowa, has an 8-year-old inventor. His name is David Suddeth. Two of his inventions—a device for removing peelings from boiled potatoes and mashing the potatoes, all in one operation; and a window washer that cleans two panes at the same time—were exhibited at the National Inventors Congress in Chicago in March. David gave a violin recital at the age of 4.

A new corporation, capitalized at $6,000,000, has been organized in Japan to convert soy bean stems into rayon yarn. The bean is reserved for use as a forage crop and for food. In Manchukuo it is the staff of life.

A London physician has devised an unusual emergency treatment for certain pulmonary and heart diseases. He blows up the patient's lungs with a reversed vacuum cleaner. The dust bag of the cleaner is taken off and replaced by a small spring valve that regulates the pressure of air blown out by the machine. The air is blown into the patient's mouth or nose by means of any convenient tube or mask. The automatic muscular action of breathing permits the air to pass on to the lungs where its pressure forces a complete expansion of parts of the lung that tend to collapse.

STEEL HOMES Are Complete

Within the walls of a factory in Peoria, Ill., five-room houses, complete in all details, are being built for transportation to home-sites chosen by buyers. With the exception of insulation and plumbing fixtures all parts of the houses are made of steel. According to the manufacturer, the homes are dust-proof, fire-proof, insect-proof and even earthquake-proof. In the latter respect they are immune to damage by the shifting or settling of the ground. A tractor crane recently hauled one to its site with interior decorations complete and a fire burning in its furnace so it would be warm and ready for occupancy immediately upon delivery. Portability of the product raises the interesting conjectural picture of future migratory towns.

Original Names.

Visitors to Havana may be interested to know that the city was originally called "San Cristobal de la Habana" when founded by Velasquez in 1515, and the island of Cuba was called "Cubanacan" when Columbus first landed there in 1492.

Health, happiness—and hormones! These are age-defying, and the last of the trinity makes the others possible. Dorothy Mae Barnhart Houghton, married at 13 and shown, left, with her bouncing boy of 7 months, illustrates this truism.

Flies Aid Healing of Wounds

During the World War, Dr. George W. Crile, famous Cleveland surgeon, noted that when wounded soldiers had lain helpless in the field for days and had become infested with blow-fly maggots they healed with greater rapidity than other wounded men in hospitals. After the war, Dr. W. S. Baer, of the Johns Hopkins University, tried this method on two patients whose injuries would not heal and it worked like magic. Then two years ago, Dr. William Robinson, a Government scientist, determined to find out why the maggots caused the wound to heal so magically and discovered that they secrete a chemical called allantoin. And now the chemists have discovered that allantoin is a derivative of urea, which is an entirely inoffensive chemical made commercially by the ton simply by combining nitrogen, hydrogen and carbon dioxide in crystal form.

New glass has been developed by the United States Navy's safety experts which removes 100 per cent of the ultraviolet rays and from 78 to 98 per cent of the infra-red rays, which are injurious to the eyes. It is used in goggles by men engaged in welding and similar work involving the use of brilliant lights.

Sound Waves Able To Kill Frogs, Fish Exhibition Shows

"Ultra-sound waves is the name given to sound waves not perceptible tothe human ear. It has been known for years that these ultra-sound waves can kill frogs and fish. It has now been ascertained that the cause of their death is a regular kind of poisoning by chemical combinations existing either in the organism itself or in the water which is required to transmit the sound wave. This puzzling phenomenon has just been explained at the Chemical Institute of the Clinic of Medicine, University of Cologne, where it was demonstrated that in air-saturated water, a protracted action of ultra-sound waves of 540,000 Hertzian frequency produces hydrogen superoxide and nitrous acid in quantities of from one to two milligrams per 100 cubic centimeters of water. The hydrogen superoxide is harmless in such a weak solution, but the nitrous acid, even in such small quantities, is sufficient to kill certain kinds of fish and amphibia.

Last Dirigible Of U. S. to Be Junked in Tests

Machines Will Break Up Skeleton of Old Los Angeles.

By the Associated Press.

Washington.—That lone dowager queen of the air—the Los Angeles—will perform one more important service for man before she ends her long and useful career.

She will submit her aluminum alloy skeleton to the testing machines of science, much as a human genius might will his brain to surgeons looking for the secret of mental power.

By that last act, the Angeles may demonstrate whether lighter-than-air ships should be developed aggressively or should lapse into oblivion in favor of huge flying boats.

An Honorable Old Age.

It will be a fitting end to a pioneer already past her twelfth birthday, an extremely long life for an airship.

In 1932, the Los Angeles was laid up in Lakehurst, N. J., and although she was returned to flying status in 1934 for experiments, she never took to the air again.

Nothing ever detracted from the majesty of this old queen, not even the government's decision to use her as a rum spy during prohibition. That was in April, 1925. She didn't like the idea. Pictures taken from her cabin turned out badly, and she kicked up her heels on landing in a storm.

Now she waits the mauling machines of science. The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics is designing those machines that will rip the old dowager limb from limb, and measure the points at which her proud frame bends and buckles.

Officials want to know what she might have stood from the weather. The formula they evolve may decide whether she is worthy of a long line of descendants.

TALLEST STREAM

Through the simple process of reducing the spiral course which water under pressure usually assumes, the reach and effectiveness of a stream of water thrown by a fire hose has been increased 25 per cent. This added effectiveness is due to a nozzle invented by Horace Barker, of Springfield, Mass., and has been tested with signal success by the fire department of that city.

Water poured from an ordinary hose has a tendency to break into spray after a certain distance, when the pressure decreases, scattering its force and nullifying its effectiveness.

The new nozzle is featured by two sets of "feathers," or "fins," one at the mouth and one at the base, which effect a non-swirling stream, thus projecting the water with greater solidity, to hit the fire with more force. It can be used with ordinary fire-fighting equipment.

To gain an idea of the tremendous added force derived from average water pressure through the introduction of this simple principle in the nozzle, note the stream of water thrown by the new type in the adjoining photograph and compare it with the three-story building in the background.

Real DISCOVERY

At last, after 60,000,000 years of biological progress, man is beginning to turn his attention from interests around him to study the most wonderful mechanism of all—the human body. Slowly, as he is learning its secrets, he is making amazing discoveries of regenerative and refining processes which promise, in time, to insure a life without physical and mental handicaps.

Science Plays Role of Rescuer For Orchestra at Swarthmore

Invention Is Used to Double for a Bass Clarinet; It Has a Range of Five Octaves.

By the Associated Press.

Swarthmore, Pa.—They were short of musicians in the Swarthmore Symphony Orchestra, so science came to the rescue.

Dr. W. F. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Research Foundation of the Franklin Institute, is also conductor of the orchestra, and when it played its first concert recently he figuratively brought part of his laboratory to the podium with him.

The program was featured by the playing of Cesar Franck's D Minor Symphony which calls for a bass clarinet; and the orchestra had no bass clarinet. That was where science came in. It provided the "oscillion," which imitates the clarinet.

Works by Gas.

The oscillion was developed by one of Dr. Swann's associates at the Bartol Research Foundation, Dr. W. E. Danforth, who is also a member of the Swarthmore orchestra. The device, small enough to hold in the lap, depends fundamentally upon a gas-discharge oscillator, from which it takes its name.

The oscillion consists of a small box with an electrical circuit inside, with metal strips on top of the box serving as controls.

"When a finger is placed on a strip," Dr. Danforth explained, "an electrical condenser starts charging up with electricity like a water tank being filled through a pipe. After a certain amount of electricity has been stored, the condenser discharges through a gas-discharge tube, a small bulb containing a rare gas.

"This is as if the bottom of the water tank had been opened, allowing all the water to escape suddenly.

Condenser Recharges.

"Then the condenser begins charging up again, and the process repeats itself at regular intervals, producing a rapid succession of electrical pulses which are sent through a radio tube amplifier to a loud speaker.

"The rapidity of the pulses, and therefore the pitch of the note, depends on the value of the electrical resistance through which the condenser charges, just as the speed with which the tank could be filled and emptied would depend upon the size of the water pipe."

This resistance is changed by the position of which the player fingers the strips on top of the box. The pitch of an entire strip can be raised or lowered an octave by pressure on the proper button at the end of the box, and volume is controlled by a lever under the player's thumb.

Range of 5 Octaves.

The oscillion has a range of five octaves, which may be increased.

Its quality of tone indicated it was capable of imitating best the wood winds, some strings and some brasses. Dr. Danforth demonstrated tones that could easily have been produced on the bassoon, the French horn, string bass, cello, tuba and bass clarinet.

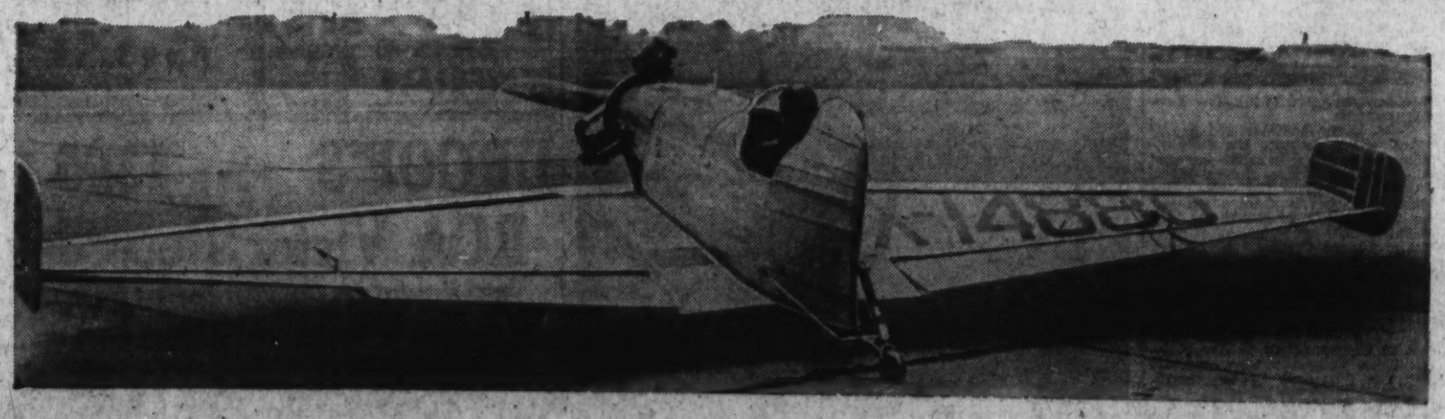
The instrument is inexpensive to build, Dr. Danforth said, and may be attached to any radio amplifier and loud speaker. If several are used at once, all may be attached to the same loud speaker.

Although the technique of manipulating an oscillion and its controls can be easily mastered, musicians who examined it and heard its first performance agreed that considerable practice and skill were required to produce its best effects.

Cost of TELEVISION

The lowest estimate for the probable price of television receivers—receivers that will receive both sound and vision—is about $300. From this the estimate goes up to $500. Recently prices in England, where regular programs are sent from London by the British Broadcasting Co., have been reduced.

TAILLESS PLANE HAS RUDDERS ON WING TIPS



PROF. JOHN D. AKERMAN, of the University of Minnesota, evidently believes there is a parallel between the Darwinian theory of man's evolution and that of the airplane. At least, here is a plane that has no tail, but it does have a rudder; in fact, two of them—the designer has placed them at the tip of the wings. The novel craft, unique in the airplane industry, is shown in the above photograph as it was about to be tested at a Minneapolis air field.

Zoltan Sepeshy Stresses Intellectuality in Works

Director of Cranbrook Academy Experienced Privation After Arrival in America; Among Exhibitors at Water Color Show.

This is the second in a series of articles on the Cranbrook Academy, a unique institution in the teaching of art. In this article, Miss Skidelsky tells of the head of the department of painting, Zoltan Sepeshy.

By Sibilla Skidelsky.
Art Editor.

The department of painting at Cranbrook Academy is directed by Zoltan Sepeshy. Sepeshy exhibited at the Chicago national show this spring, and is among the exhibitors at the International Water-Color Show and at the Toledo national show.

Sibilla Skidelsky.

His work is the most exclusively intellectual contemporary painting that I know

Always throughout history there have been intellectual artists and emotional artists. The supreme ones, the milestones in the history of art, are a merging, a union of both. But this occurs rarely.

The area of the purely intellectual painter is by no means so narrow as people are at first likely to conclude. After all, if we take the trouble of remembering, Florentine painting from the origins to Leonardo (except perhaps Giotto and to a certain extent Botticelli) was purely intellectual. Its spirit was in a way abstract.

"The interplay of concrete and abstract," as Sepeshy likes to call it, offers great possibilities when it is rightly handled. The power of suggestion emanating from a work of art conceived with this idea can become boundless.

Intellectual artists (the greatest Florentines make no exception) never can be colorists. They bring color back to its very principle, its very essence. They have no living color passages from one form to another through which light is conveyed.

Because of this, composition logically plays for them a tremendous role.

The intellectual, emotionally repressed quality of Zoltan Sepeshy's work must be linked with countless personal experiences, with a whole lifetime. Born in a part of Hungary which, after the World War, became Czechoslovakia, his private history is anything but drab. Inside wars and several revolutions took place just after he had finished studies at the Royal Academy at Budapest, and terminated a long European trip of travel studies.

Desire to express in painting the utmost of possibilities and their realization has made Sepeshy adopt a dual form of composition in his canvases: Concrete depiction of objects, and abstract geometricized suggestion in the surrounding. What he seeks is the interrelation between the two, between the concrete world and the abstract space. What he attempts to realize, what he wants to give to the spectator is the highest possible suggestive potentiality.

Stimulates Mind.

That potentiality is rarely emotional. A Sepeshy painting stimulates the mind and always brings forth interesting reactions.

The medium used is almost always tempera, a revival of old techniques.

Sepeshy is at present working on sketches for a mural in fresco for the dining room of the Cranbrook School for Boys.

Among the paintings now in his studio at the Cranbrook Academy is a portrait of his scholarship pupil, David Fredenthal, recently a one-man exhibitor at the Downtown Gallery, New York.

This portrait was painted from the model, contrary to Sepeshy's usual method of work—a reconstruction of impressions. A good portrait can be one of two things: Either the subtle analysis of the person portrayed, the psychological rendering of his soul through lineaments, or the projection of the artist himself through the outward medium of that person whom he represents. But sometimes the living model possesses a strange affinity with some creature of the artist's thought. Perhaps it is then that he does his best work.

When Sepeshy breaks up form and distorts it to achieve a certain wanted expression, he breaks it up intelligently. And if, for my part, I would sometimes wish he achieved a more sculptural, more third-dimensional compactness in certain figures, I have never seen him exaggerate his geometricized abstractionistic backgrounds into incomprehensible formlessness. Always the passages between the concrete part of his paintings, the objects on the first plane, and the abstract part, the geometricized background is subtly and intelligently treated. And it is that very interrelation between the two, when successfully achieved, that is the interesting part of each canvas.

His treatment of tempera is very broad and sure. The use of tempera is a sign of the research for different mediums with which our epoch is preoccupied. Raphael's Loggias in the Vatican, and, further back still, some of the painting at Pompei, Egyptian Mastabas, the Cnossos Palaces were painted in a variation of tempera. The surfaces of that medium is not shiny when the work is finished, yet has in its opacity a slight luster. It cannot be varnished.

Each epoch has had, pictorially, a technical medium, which served best the expression of that time, yet was enduring enough to last beyond it.

Modern Interpretative Art Displayed by Milford Zornes

Modern examples of interpretative art are in evidence in the exhibition of water colors by Milford Zornes, California artist, on view until July 18 at the Gallery of Modern Masters, 1367 Connecticut avenue.

These water colors are of added interest because they are the work of an artist who was not very well known outside of his native California before he began work under the Federal art project. He has gained recognition throughout the art world of the Nation and has a reputation for hard work and a careful adherence to the high standards of art.

There is nothing stereotype about the work of this artist, often a fault of one who paints in a modern manner but who consciously or unconsciously follows too closely one modern style. He has originality without eccentricity, a sure boldness combined with a possibility of injecting delicate touches in his work.

Extreme Contortion Absent.

It is also a relief to find a modern artist who does not go in for extreme contortion. When Mr. Zornes paints a tree bending under the wind, a theme he has chosen for one of the best of the paintings exhibited, he gets all the effect of motion but does not contort his drawing to an eccentric degree.

Most of the water colors are landscapes or seascapes without figures of any kind. But a mastery of figure composition is seen in the clear cut silhouetted figures of two men in the foreground of "The Coal Jetty, Plymouth Harbor, England."

In only a few of the paintings has Mr. Zornes gone in for brilliant color effects but has an ability of giving glowing quality to his work with a more restrained color pallette. This is particularly true of "Winter Day" which has all the elements of clear cold frost on hills and trees and yet has that "sparkle" we associate with extreme cold.

Native Westerns Exhibited.

Scenes of his native West, Mexico, England, the Hudson River and other sections of the world, are included in the exhibition.

Mr. Zornes was born in Oklahoma and began to draw at a very early age. He studied under Millard Sheets in California. Mr. Sheets was only one year older than his pupil. Soon young Zornes became a member of the California Water Color Club, Fine Arts Society of San Diego, the Laguna Beach Art Association and won honorable mention in an exhibition held in San Diego.

He illustrated a botanical manual of plants of southern California by Dr. Munz. Ninety of his water colors painted under the Federal art project have been placed in Los Angeles county public schools, libraries and colleges and other public institutions.

The exhibition of Mr. Zornes has been arranged under the direction of Auriel Bessmer, director of the Gallery of Modern Masters.

Work of Director of Painting at Cranbrook Academy

"Negro Meeting," above, painted in 1935 by Zoltan Sepeshy has been exhibited in the International Water Color Show. "Study of David Fredenthal," left, is a portrait of a scholarship pupil of the artist and now hangs in his studio at Cranbook Academy.

Soloist to Be Senorita Sarria

Lucrezia Sarria, Peruvian soprano, will be soloist with the United States Army Band under the direction of Capt. Thomas F. Darcy at the first summer concert of Latin-American music in the Aztec Garden of the Pan American Union on Thursday night. Her selections will include the aria, "Gentile de cuore," fromе "Il Guarani," by Carlos Gomes, of Brazil; two Merican songs, "Adios mi chaparrita," by Fernandez Esperon, and "Lamento Gitano," by Maria Grever; "Suray Surita," by Valcarcel, of Peru, and "Canto Hatuey," by Valdespi, of Cuba.

Senorita Sarria was sent by the Peruvian government to study abroad, and made her operatic debut in Italy, singing in Milan, Turin, Rome and Genoa. She has also filled engagements in Switzerland, Peru and Chile, and last season she was heard in the New York Hippodrome.

Capt. Darcy has arranged a program which includes six compositions to be heard here for the first time: Selections from Gomes' opera, "Condor;" Ernesto Lecuona's "Mosaico Cubano," "Presenten Armas," by Diaz Zelaya, of Honduras; "Los Mentirosos," by Prem, of Guatemala; "Auras Criellas," by Grasso, of Uruguay, and a new march by Brandt, of Venezuela.

Best Flagstad Recording Yet In New Album of Ten Songs

Five Are by Grieg, Fellow-Countryman of Singer and Among Her Favorite Composers; Two Bach Numbers.

By Jay Walz.

In a new album of Victor's, M-342, Kirsten Flagstad's superb voice gets the best recording that's been given it. In the ten songs presented in "Flagstad in Song" we hear her very much as we did in about three groups of selections in her concert program here last winter.

That means there is little vocalizing, little but a simple blending of lyrics and golden melody which is Flagstad in song. Such a voice would seem to be more easily reproduced on disks than it has been, up to the present volume. Earlier singles failed, through varying degrees of flatness, to be quite Flagstad. But throughout the new volume the rounded quality of her voice comes across much better, and the characteristic Flagstad touches are agreeably noticeable.

I was not quite satisfied with the songs selected for the volume. Five of the ten songs are by Grieg. There is one Norwegian song sung in that language (that's a good enough choice.) There are two not-at-all representative English songs, and two Beethovens.

Too Much Grieg?

Giving Grieg the lion's share of the space is all well and good if you look at it from the standpoint of Mme. Flagstad, who is devoted to his works, who likes to sing his songs, and who probably feels she understands her fellow-countryman's music better than she does anything else. And so she offers Grieg fans a windfall. And it is fine that she does so—only if I were listing 10 songs I wanted her to sing for me, not once, but over and over, assuredly less than half would be by Grieg.

These Grieg numbers are: "Im Kahne," "Ein Schwan," (sung in German,) and "Der Ginger en Bat Pa Bolge," "Lys Nat, and "Et Hab" (sung in Norwegian.) All of them will sound familiar to those who have followed the soprano's concerts.

Two of Beethoven.

The two Beethoven songs, which undoubtedly constitute the climax to this little Flagstad recital, are the Creation Hymn, "Doe Ehre Gottes aus der Natur" and "Ich Liebe Dich." Wonderful Flagstad material these. The one demands just such strength and straightforwardness as she has, the other such simplicity.

There is a Norwegian song, credited to Alnaes, called "Lykken Mellem to Mennesker." The songs in English include Cyril Scott's "Lullaby" and "When I Have Sung My Songs" by Charles.

It is necessary only to mention that Mr. Edwin McArthur, Mme. Flagstad's regular accompanist, is at the keyboard throughout this album to make clear that the soloist's support is adequate and sympathetic.

Tuesday Club Plans Operatic Evening

Florence Howard to Direct Program of Selections.

Under the direction of Florence Howard, the Tuesday Evening Music Club will present a program of operatic selections on Tuesday evening at 8:15 in the garden of the Arts Club. Title of 'Papa' Haydn Honored His Authority

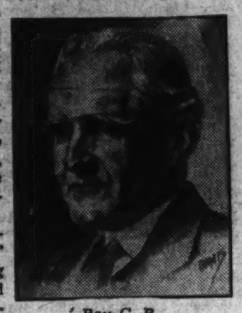
Later Usage Puts Trace of Condescension Into a Nickname Which Expressed the Affectionate Homage of His Contemporaries.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

James Russell Lowell once wrote an essay "On A Certain Condescension in Foreigners" in which he reprimanded the attitude of Europeans toward the citizens of the United States. Condescension, however, is not limited to any time or place, but is an ordinary human failing to which we are all liable. In music, one commonly finds it these days directed toward some of the old composers who did the best that they could but were handicapped, of course, by their incomplete knowledge of the technique that was to be developed by their successors. Poor fellows, they knew no better than to write simple, sincere music, unaware that while so doing they were perfecting the forms which were to become the classical standards.



Ray C. B. Brown.

More often than not one hears the accent of kindly pity in reference to "Papa" Haydn, who must be credited with having given the sonata, the string quartet and the symphony their fundamental structures. The meanings of nicknames change with the passage of time. Haydn was first called "Papa" by his contemporary composers in affectionate acknowledgement of his authority; in our day the epithet suggests that we regard him as somewhat old fashioned and courteously formal, whereas in truth it is a literal statement of the fact that he is the father of modern music.

Haydn himself, and Mozart also, looked upon Philip Emmanuel Bach as guide and mentor; it is recorded that Haydn said of him: "He is the father, and we are the children." Historically, P. E. Bach is one of the principal links in the chain of transition from the polyphonic style to the homophonic style (roughly speaking, from the fugue to the sonata), nevertheless it is Haydn who stands as the first great master of the new style in which P. E. Bach pioneered. Both Mozart and Beethoven recognized this mastery in him.

Young radical composers of today, whether they are disciples of Stravinski or Schoenberg, would do well to emulate Haydn in at least one respect—his self discipline. Haydn was a radical too, and a critic of the pedantic theorists. "What is the good of such rules?" he asked. "Art is free and should be fettered by no such mechanical regulations." His radicalism found expression in bold harmonic innovations, some of which anticipated Beethoven's originalities. Yet his music is ordered and clear, and it is symptomatic of his profound respect for orderliness that he was in his later life accustomed to dress himself with scrupulous neatness before sitting at his desk to compose.

The salient characteristics of Haydn's music are virility and geniality. The writing is always energetic and direct, emotionally forcible with scarcely a trace of sentimentality, and free from the vague cloudiness which we call atmosphere. The music mirrors the physical robustness of the man, who in Dance's portrait shows a jutting aquiline nose and a heavy, protruding underlip. It reflects also the personality of Haydn, who once said: "Anyone can see by the look of me that I am a good-natured sort of fellow."

Haydn's vitality is manifest in his remarkable fertility in composition: 104 symphonies, 83 string quartets, 68 trios, 54 sonatas, 31 concerti, 24 operas and dramatic pieces, 16 Masses, three oratorios, a Stabat Mater, and a large number of miscellaneous works. Since some of Haydn's compositions appear frequently on our concert programs, it may seem illogical to say that his music is neglected, yet that is the case How many concert-goers can say that they have heard more than 20 of his symphonies or more than a third of his string quartets?

Few indeed have had the opportunity to hear even all the 12 "London" symphonies and the six "Paris" symphonies. The neglect of the symphonies dates from the latter part of the nineteenth century when the musical fashion swung over to the sonorities and complexities of Wagner and the post-Wagnerians, and the neglect continues because of the comparative difficulty of performing Haydn's music as it should be performed. Surprising as it may seem, a modern orchestra finds it harder to play a Haydn symphony than a symphony by Chaikovski.

Despite the popular impression that Haydn was merely an experimental forerunner of Mozart and Beethoven, he was as masterly a musician as ever lived, and few composers have equalled him in richness of invention. The proper performance of his music demands a fine sense of rhythm and balance, a sense which is easily blunted by familiarity with the noise, the thick instrumentation, and the lush emotionalism of the last generation.

Lusciousness of tone, such as one finds in the symphonies of Brahms, is only one of the multiple vestures of music, and the present taste for it will not endure forever. The pendulum will swing back to appreciation of structure and rhythm. It is noteworthy that in recent visits to London of two of the world's best orchestras—the New York Philharmonic and the Berlin Philharmonic—both Toscanini and Furtwaengler conducted symphonies by Haydn.

• • • •

In his humility toward his artistic accomplishments, Haydn exhibited the simplicity of true genius. "I know that God has bestowed a talent upon me," he said, "and I thank Him for it; I think that I have done my duty and been of use to my generation in my work; let others do the same." He remarked once to Kalkbrenner: "I have only just learned in my old age how to use the wind instruments, and now that I do understand them, I must leave the world." Toward his fellow composers he was without envy.

When Roth asked him in 1787 to compose an opera for the Prag Theater where Mozart's "Don Giovanni" had just been produced, he replied: "You wish from me a comic opera, but, as for performing it at the Prag Theater, I cannot meet your desire because all my operas are written for our Esterhazy company and would never produce their calculated effect elsewhere. It would be different if I had the good luck to find an entirely new libretto, but even then I should run too great a risk because it would be difficult for anyone to put himself by the side of the great Mozart.

"I wish I could implant in amateurs of music, and in the great above all, full music knowledge of, and as lively and profound a feeling as I myself feel for, the inimitable works of Mozart, for then all nations would dispute for the possession of such a treasure. Prag must retain so precious a man—and let it recompence him. Without this, the history of a great genius is a sad one and gives posterity little encouragement to pursue its work. I am really angry that this unique Mozart is not attached to any imperial or royal court. Forgive me if I get excited on this subject, but I love the man so greatly."

Orpheus Quartet.

The Orpheus Quartet (Hazel Gem Hughes, Elaine Sebring Ford, Jesse Nussear and Richard Fairman) sang two settings of Shakespearean lyrics as a prelude to the performance of "Love's Labor Lost" last Tuesday evening in the garden of the colonial home of the Women's National Party. Otto T. Simon is the director of the group.

Camera Angles

By Arthur Ellis.

Continuing his advance to the front rank of the District's amateur cameramen, Clifton H. Severance was awarded the Severance cash award and the blue ribbon for the best portrait in the Washington Leica Club semi-final June competition — to the embarrassment of the winner and the congratulations of the club. Severance, because of his interest in the advancement of miniature portraiture, had offered a $25 cash award for the best portrait.

ARTHUR ELLIS

Nearly 150 enlargements were entered in the competition which marked the closing of the meetings for the summer months.

David B. Edmonston, who judged the portrait class, expressed his amazement at the progress shown by the members.

Edward E. Adams, well-known color artist and photographer, judged the pictorial and the technical-general class.

Severance also took second prize in the portrait class with his picture of a colored woman. His prize winning portrait was an 11x14 enlargement of a study of a boy. Dr. S. S. Jaffee took third prize in this class.

In the pictorial class George W. Riley took first and third prizes. His prize winner was a study of massive columns in light and shadows. Second prize in this class was given to W. F. Burgiss for his study of dogwood blossoms.

In the combined technical and general classification William Blair was awarded the blue ribbon for his study of porcelain insulators; Lloyd C. Mathis, a red ribbon for his bartender picture and Carl Lewis third prize for his shot of ducks in Rock Creek Park.

We've seen so many stained developing trays and most amateurs have such a terrible time trying to clean them with ordinary soaps and powders that we're taking the liberty of lifting a formula from the Photographic Digest and passing it along: Water, 32 ounces; potassium bichromate, 3 ounces; sulphuric acid, pure concentrated, 3 ounces.

Add the sulphuric acid slowly with stirring when mixing formula. Pour a small quantity in trays and rinse it around so the solution will have access to all parts of the tray. Most important of all, wash your tray thoroughly until all traces of the cleaning solution disappear.

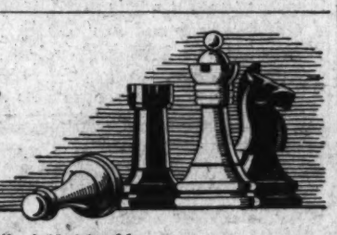
One of our leading photographic magazines notes a growing interest in Synchro-Sunlight technique. That is using a flash-bulb synchronized with the shutter in working outdoors in bright sunlight. Preserving full detail in foreground and getting back and top light. News photographers, too lazy to unhook their speed-gun attachments before making a shot outdoors, were the developers of this technique.

Titled "Biff" this portrait by C. H. Severance was awarded first prize in the Washington Leica Club's semiannual June competition. Severance used a Leica with a Hecktor 73-mm. lens. The exposure was one-twentieth of a second at f 1.9. The enlargement was 11x14.

Chess



By Willard H. Mutchler.

Silas Howland, chairman of the National Chess Federation committee entrusted with the selection of the United States team, announces that the group traveling to Stockholm, Sweden, will include team Captain Frank Marshall, Sammy Reshevsky, Reuben Fine, Isaac Kashdan, and Israel Horowitz. More pertinent personally to local fandom is the news that Kashdan, who played first board on the American team at Prague in 1931 and at Folkstone in 1933, will appear at the Capital City Chess Club on Saturday.

It is needless to sing the praises of one who established his place in the front ranks of the national and international chess arenas. Kashdan's numerous tournament successes are sufficient testimonies of his outstanding skill. Washington fans will welcome the pleasant young master with open arms. In his last two appearances here he made an enviable score at simultaneous play. Four years ago he disported at the Jewish Community Center and emerged with a score of 20 wins and three draws. Later, at the now defunct Federal Chess Club, 15 wins, a draw and a loss represented his total. J. D. Matheson is the lone victor over Kashdan on local soil, which W. K. Wimsatt, sr., M. C. Stark, W. M. P. Mitchell and Guy Clinton can alone boast draws.

Kashdan will, of course, meet all comers once again in simultaneous play on June 19 at the Capital City Club, Hotel Gordon. The visit forms part of a tour on the part of the master, made for the purpose of raising expense funds for use at Stockholm. Hence personal enjoyment can go hand in hand with financial assistance to the American team. The price for play has been set at the usual $1 for non-club members, and 75 cents for members. Ergo, be on hand at 8 o'clock for the evening's entertainment and, to be fully prepared, tote, if possible, your own board and chessmen.

Should Kashdan dispose of local opponents after the manner in which he treated Goray in the recent Puerto Rican tourney, where he captured premier honors, everyone will be satisfied.

En Passant.

The J. W. Byler Prize Morphy Centennial tournament will be staged at the Capital City club on June 28. Present plans call for a rapid-transit round robin series with the entrants placed on a handicap basis. The handicap feature is singularly appropriate, since Morphy probably engaged in more games at odds than any other chess player who ever lived.

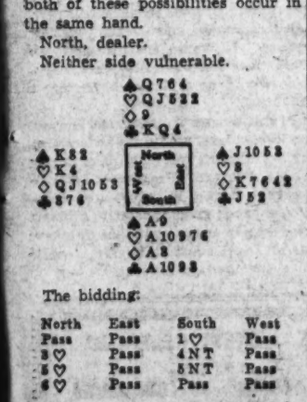
MRS. CULBERTSON ON Bridge

Sometimes the success of a hand depends on the position of one card, and then it devolves upon the declarer to lay the best plan for the snaring of that card. At other times there exists what may be termed a "combination play." As usual, I fall back on an actual example to illustrate the correct choice when both of these possibilities occur in the same hand.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♡	Pass
3♡	Pass	4NT	Pass
5♡	Pass	5NT	Pass
6♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Since North had passed originally, he felt that a double raise could not be dangerous despite the fact that his hand was not strong in honor-tricks. South, following North's string bid, showed his four Aces by bidding first, four notrump and then, five notrump. He correctly figured that if North had a hand which was practically an opening bid he would jump to seven. But North, having given slightly more than his all on his first raise, could take nothing but negative action.

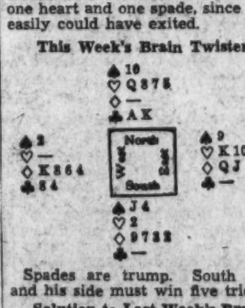
Declarer won the opening diamond lead, and saw that success apparently rested on losing no heart trick. The spade loser in his own hand seemed inevitable and, therefore, at first glance a heart finesse looked like the best chance.

But on reconsideration South saw that the ten trumps in the combined hands made the possibility of a singleton King far from remote. Had there been no consideration except that of losing no trump trick South, of course, would have finessed as the correct percentage play. But the winning or losing of a heart trick could be considered on this hand in close connection with the problem of South's losing spade. South saw that if he were to lose to the heart King he still would make the contract if the spade King were in the same hand with the vital trump honor. Therefore, he decided that this combination play gave him a better chance than the finesse in trump.

He laid down the Ace of hearts and, when the King did not fall, promptly ruffed out his losing diamond and stripped clubs from both hands. Then he led a trump. West won and had to return a spade, to avoid giving declarer a ruff and a discard, Dummy's spade Queen was put up and, when it held, declarer's troubles were over.

Obviously, a finesse in hearts would have resulted in the loss of one heart and one spade, since West easily could have exited.

This Week's Brain Twister.



Spades are trump. South leads and his side must win five tricks.

Solution to Last Week's Brain Twister.

North.
No spades.
Hearts, 7 4 3.
Diamonds, 10 8
Clubs, Ace.

West.
Spades, 10.
Hearts, 9 6.
No diamonds.
Clubs, 8 7 6.

East.
Spades, 9 8.
No hearts.
Diamonds, 5 4 3.
Clubs, 5.

South.
Spades, 7 5 4 3.
No herats.
Diamonds, 7.
Clubs, 9.

There is no trump. South leads and his side must take four tricks.

South leads a low spade, North discarding the Ace of Clubs. West must win and if West attacks hearts North will take two heart tricks and two diamonds. If West leads a club, a diamond is discarded from the North hand. South winning with the nine of clubs. A low spade is next led, dummy discarding another diamond. The South hand is then good.

Among all the flood of reports that rain daily into Government offices here is one dealing with the unheard-of behavior of a wild turkey down thar in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, on the North Carolina-Tennessee frontier.

The report comes on the solemn word of Wesley Ogle, a warden, and William Ramsey, a caretaker. First, a little background: In the wilderness of this parkland, wild turkeys have survived in great number. But there is nothing in the report to indicate that wild turkeys aren't wild down there. When it comes to wildness, or rather to shyness, the wild turkey is the most difficult thing in all life to become companionable with. The very thought of any social intercourse with a wild turkey is as far fetched as would be the contemplation of living in close communion with a spotted leopard. Men have almost frozen to death in turkey blinds—and have consumed quarts, gallons, oceans of booze through the American hunting tradition—just to get a bead's squint on a wild turkey many yards away.

Now, for the report: It seems that Wesley Ogle and William Ramsey were driving a truck down a road. The truck was making 15 miles an hour. Turning, they saw the wild turkey following the truck, and easily keeping the pace. The truck stopped. The turkey came alongside, and stood 3 feet away, according to Wesley Ogle and William Ramsey we emphasize.

"We spoke to the bird for several moments," reads the report. "And it stood there listening attentively. It even accepted a few pieces of bread. Then we must have said something the turkey didn't like, for he shook himself and started off at a brisk clip down the road.

"In 25 years of roaming in the Great Smoky Mountains," declared the warden, "I've never witnessed such amazing behavior on the part of a wild turkey." We hope the Department of the Interior press section will send us a copy of the Department's reply to this amazing report from the warden and the caretaker.

All hawks are not bad ones, even if the word hawk is in bad repute, Arthur Cleveland Bent points this out in a monograph on North American birds of prey, just issued by the Smithsonian Institution.

First off, he explains that the evil reputation of these hunters is due largely "to the cruelty and rapacity of a few species." All hawks, he reminds, are killers, but some seem to kill wantonly as if for sport while others are moderate in their appetites, and even are helpful to the farmer. And "in their other activities are models of upright behavior," Bent says.

For nearly half a century, Bent has studied the behavior and habits of these birds, has followed them in their courtships, nest building, parental characteristics, and says that he has developed "a sincere admiration for some of them."

He points to the marsh hawk and says that this species seems to delight in cruelty. It will play with a victim much as a cat plays with a mouse. He cited one case in which a marsh hawk was observed to drop a horned lark, which it had captured, seven or eight times. Each time the hawk would pounce again upon its victim.

Bent thinks that the birds delight in building. Often, he says, they will build new nests spring after spring and sometimes two in a season. And they are likely to return to an old nest at any time, sometimes after a period of ten years.

Bridge

By Marian H. Barre.

A close game is the special prerogative of the honor section in the Washington Bridge League's annual contests but section 2 usurped this privilege in the initial session of the pair classic played at the Shoreham on Wednesday, June 2. The "second-flighters" held their leaders to a 59 per cent game and a one-point margin while the stars of section 1 let J. A. Dawkins and Lester D. Johnson pile up a 63 per cent game, and defeat Mrs. V. A. Clarke and Roy Thurtell by 4½ match points.

M. H. BARRE

Out of a possible 147 points, Dawkins and Johnson scored 153, Clarke and Thurtell 148½. The champions of '36, Mrs. M. R. West and Mrs. Eugene Nolan, were five points below and tied with E. B. Conally and W. M. McIntyre. Fifth place went to Lloyd and Lewis Tubbs whose tally showed 139½ points; thus, there was a spread of 13½ points from first to fifth.

The difference was only 7½ points in section 2. Mrs. A. R. Hodgkins and Dr. C. C. McDonnell, the leaders, won 87 out of a possible 147 points, with Mrs. Dora Schwartz and J. D. Granger only one point off top. The "show" pair, E. W. Rounds and W. G. Brombacher, dropped to 83; Mrs. R. Robbins and Mrs. F. Samuels scored 80½, and Mrs. T. M. Boyle and Mrs. M. R. Reddy, 79½. In both sections most of the leading players were repeating their success in the team games.

Section 3 was led by Mrs. Eva Milligan and H. S. Klein with 106½ match points; this was a 60 per cent game. Miss Edith Cooper and E. A. Perkins came second scoring 104; Mrs. C. M. Shafer and Mrs. John Evans tied Mrs. Roy Hackett and H. G. Torbert with 98½ points; Mrs. T. E. Sheldon and Mrs. R. S. Du Bois made 95; a spread of 11½ between first and fifth.

The special section provided for unqualified players and guests of the league was run as a team match, the team of Mrs. D. H. Mott, George Kennedy, A. Acker and Wesley Gardner won this section.

There were 28 tables divided into four sections; 110 players who forgot the soaring thermometer on a typical Washington June evening. The game was late in getting under way owing to the difficulty of arranging sections. The final session is to be played on Wednesday of this week and will start promptly at 8:30 p. m. Tardy players will be penalized.

Season prizes were awarded at the Fairfax to winners in three weekly games over a period of four months. Top score for the Friday evening games was won by Halpern P. Brown. Mrs. T. D. Sheldon was awarded the prize for the games held on Tuesday afternoons, and Mrs. Linn Lambert, for the popular Wednesday morning games.

A new season was started the week of June 1 and will run until the end of September. The winners will have their choice between trophies or national tournament entrance, in accordance with the plan sponsored by the Washington Bridge League.

Those tournament experts, W. M. McIntyre and E. B. Conally, report that the Northeastern Pennsylvania championships, held in Scranton last week-end, gets the blue ribbon for management and hospitality. It was an American Bridge League master point event. "Mac" and "Doc" speak with authority. They have played in plenty of tournaments—and won plenty, but Scranton was not on that list. So it must have been a good tournament; they are harder to like when you lose.

The record for endurance play was broken at the Vanderbilt Club last week. A foursome sat down for a rubber bridge game on Saturday afternoon. They counted the score before dinner Monday evening. Total playing hours—52. And the same number of hours "stretched end to end" once took Manager William Cheeks 1,380 miles from Washington to Hastings, Nebr.

Stamp Collectors Prepare for Series Of National Conventions This Summer

First-day cover showing the World Jamboree stamps issued by the Dutch Indies May 1, 1937, and canceled on that date at Padangs. The cover was received by S. Reichgut, a Washington collector on June 1. The stamps are 7 cents, plus 2½ cents, olive brown, and 12½ cents plus 2½ cents, rose. Designs of both stamps are the same showing two Boy Scouts in uniform with words "Wereld Jamboree" above and "Nederl-Indie" below the design.

S. P. A. to Open Meeting at Asheville, N. C., August 26.

Many national organizations will hold annual conventions in the next few months, the first being that of the Society of Philatelic Americans, at Ashville, N. C., August 26-28. This is the forty-third gathering of the society. In honor of the event the Postoffice Department will issue a souvenir sheet. Details as to this sheet will be made public later.

This will be the first convention held in the South since the society became the S. P. A. The Asheville Stamp Club, under the leadership of Ruffner Campbell, chairman of the general committee, is especially desirous of having a large attendance and from all accounts it will be a record gathering. The Collectors Club, Branch 5, of this city, expects to have a large representation at the convention, more than 50 members of the club being members of the national organization.

There will be an exhibition, a bourse, and a program of entertainment. Asheville is a famous resort and nearby is the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Mount Mitchell, the highest peak east of the Rockies, is one of the attractions.

Washington Philatelic Society.

Ladies' night was observed by the Washington Philatelic Society at the Carlton Hotel Wednesday evening. A program was provided by Miss Irene M. Pistorio. Remarks were made by Mrs. Ethel Taylor, Mrs. Henry Hendrickson, Mrs. Elizabeth Barnes, of the D. A. A., and Miss Johnson, the sculptor who made the bust of Susan B. Anthony that is portrayed on the 3-cent Anthony stamp.

The exhibition was provided from the collections of Mrs. Henry C. Workman, Miss Pistorio, Mrs. C. L. Manning and Miss Viola Wildermuth.

An auction will be held Wednesday evening.

The Washington Philatelist

By William M. Stuart.

Liberalization of laws pertaining to illustrations of United States and foreign postage stamps will be approved by the present Congress. After many years of debate the present administration has approved a measure most welcome to every stamp collector.

W. M. STUART

The bill now before Congress has the approval of both the Treasury and Postoffice Department. It may be stated that while Postoffice officials desired other changes the proposed measure is acceptable.

The proposed new law amends the present law to read as follows:

"(a) Nothing in sections 161, 172 and 220 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, sections 275, 286 and 340), as amended, or in any other provision of law, shall be construed to forbid or prevent the printing, publishing, or importation of illustrations in black and white only, or the making or importation of necessary plates therefor, solely for use in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals, or albums, or the circulars of legitimate publishers or dealers in stamps, or such books, journals, or albums, of—

"(1) foreign revenue stamps if from plates so defaced as to indicate that the illustrations are not adapted or intended for use as stamps;

"(2) foreign postage stamps; or

"(3) such portion of the border of a stamp of the United States as may be necessary to show minor differences in the stamp so illustrated, but all such illustrations shall be at least four times as large as the portion of the original United States stamp so illustrated.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any one or more of the following acts are hereby authorized upon, and to the extent of, and under the circumstances specified in, a finding or findings by the Secretary of the Treasury, approved by the President, that such act or acts to that extent and under such circumstances will involve no hindrance to the suppression of counterfeiting and will not tend to bring into disrepute any obligation or other security of the United States:

"The printing, publishing, or importation of illustrations of canceled or uncanceled United States postage stamps in black and white only or the making or importation of necessary plates therefor, solely for use in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals or albums or the circulars of legitimate publishers or dealers in stamps, or such books, journals, or albums, if such illustrations are of such size, less than three-quarters or more than one and one-half times, in linear dimension of each part of the stamp illustrated, as shall be specified in such finding; Provided, That each such finding shall become effective upon publication of notice thereof in the Federal Register: And provided further, That upon a finding or findings made by the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President and publication of notice thereof in the Federal Register that the authorization of any one or more of such acts has resulted, or may result, in a hindrance to the suppression of counterfeiting, or has tended, or may tend, to bring into disrepute any obligation or other security of the United States, the authorization as to the act or acts specified in such finding shall be terminated. Except as herein provided all findings of fact made hereunder shall be final and conclusive and shall not be subject to review." Several other sections follow.

With regard to illustrations they may be shown in two sizes—less than three-quarters or more than one and one-half times the size of the stamp.

Although the law has not yet been passed the publication, "A Description of United States Postage Stamps" has been issued. Provision also is made for registrations, counterfeiting and plates.

Officials of the Treasury and Postoffice Department are to be congratulated on the successful outcome of a long campaign. The interest of President Roosevelt, who also is a stamp collector, has had great weight in bringing about a successful climax.

Collectors Club

At the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening at the Thomson Community Center, President F. A. Bickert gave an account of some of the activities of the past year and made suggestions for the general welfare and extension of club activities. He will bring to a close his two-year term of office. Nominations for the coming year will be made at the meeting on Tuesday.

Svend Yort gave a talk on "The Counterfeit Stamps of Bosnia" and illustrated by drawings the bogus and the genuine varieties. This was another in the series of talks on how to guard against counterfeit stamps.

The exhibition consisted of several frames of stamps of Bosnia from R. E. Smith's collection, and a frame of counterfeits from the club's book of bogus stamps prepared by Yort. A frame of first-day covers of the King George stamps was displayed by Fred J. Roy.

Thrills and Chills in This Week's Chapter of Hammett's Latest Murder Mystery

The FAREWELL Murder

By DASHIELL HAMMETT
AUTHOR OF "THE THIN MAN"

What Has Happened Thus Far

KAVALOV, in deadly fear of assassination by a man he had ruined in a war-time business deal, had sent for me, Continental Operative No. 7, to protect him. Speeding through a storm to his massive house in the wilderness, I passed the body of a black man lying in the road, a knife in his chest. I dashed back to the spot . . . but the body was gone! Proceeding to the house, I found Kavalov, his daughter, Miriam, and his son-in-law, Ringgo . . . all terrified. Ringgo's arm was in a sling, injured in a recent fight with Capt. Sherry, the man Kavalov had ruined, years before. At the end of dinner, that first night with Kavalov and his family, a servant broke in upon us with the news that a mysterious fire was burning in a field near the house. Accompanied by Ringgo, I ran to the fire to find the carcass of Ringgo's pet dog, Mickey, spitted over the dying embers of the blaze. As we view the scene, a cackling, insane laugh comes to us through the black of the night. Drawn on a stone apparently thrown at us by the owner of the laugh, in red crayon, is a crude skull. Ringgo infers that it is all the work of Capt. Sherry and as Chapter Two opens, I set out to visit the vengeful captain, who is threatening Kavalov's life.

Chapter Two.

AT 10 O'CLOCK NEXT MORNING I set out afoot for Captain Sherry's. I didn't have any trouble finding his house, a pinkish stuccoed bungalow with a terra cotta roof, reached from the road by a cobbled walk.

A white-clothed table with two places set stood on the tiled veranda that stretched across the front of the bungalow.

Before I could knock, the door was opened by a slim black man, not much more than a boy, in a white jacket. His features were thinner than most American Negroes', aquiline, intelligent.

"You're going to catch colds lying around in wet roads," I said.

His month-ends ran toward his ears in a grin.

"Yes, sir," he said, buzzing his z's, rolling the r, bowing. "The capitaine have waited breakfast that you be with him. You do sit down sir. I will call him?"

"Not dog meat?"

His mouth-ends ran back and up again and he shook his head.

"No sir."

"Fine," I said, and sat down in one of the wicker armchairs on the veranda.

I had time to light a cigarette before Capt. Sherry came out.

He was a gaunt, tall man in his forties, sandy hair, parted in the middle, was brushed flat to his small head, above a sunburned face. His eyes were gray, with lower lids as straight as ruler edges. His mouth was another hard, straight line under a close-clipped sandy mustache. Grooves like gashes ran from his nostrils past his mouth corners. Other grooves, just as deep, ran down his cheeks to the sharp ridge of his jaw. He wore a gaily striped flannel bathrobe over pajamas.

"Good morning," he said, pleasantly, and gave me a semisalute. He didn't offer to shake hands. "Don't get up. It will be some minutes before Marcus has breaklast ready. I slept late. I had a most abominable dream." His voice was a deliberately languid drawl. "I dreamed that Theodore Kavalov's throat had been cut from here to here." Ht put bony fingers under his ears. "It was an atrociously gory business. He bled and screamed horribly, the swine."

I grinned up at him, asking:

"And you didn't like that?"

"Oh, getting his throat cut was all to the good, but he bled and screamed so filthily." He raised his nose and sniffed. "That's honeysuckle somewhere, isn't it?"

"Smells like it. Was it throat-cutting that you had in mind when you threatened him?"

Captain Sherry's Story.

"When I threatened him?" he drawled. "My dear fellow, I did nothing of the sort. I was in Udja, a stinking Moroccan town close to the Algerian frontier, and one morning a voice spoke to me from an orange tree. It said: 'Go to Farewell, in California, in the States, and there you will see Theodore Kavalov die.' I thought that a capital idea. I thanked the voice, told Marcus to pack, and came here. As soon as I arrived I told Kavalov about it, thinking perhaps he would die then and I wouldn't be hung up here waiting. He didn't though, and too late I regretted not having asked the voice for a definite date. I should hate having to waste months here."

"That's why you've been trying to hurry it up?" I asked.

"I beg your pardon."

"Schrecklichkeit," I said, "rocky skulls, dog barbecues, vanishing corpses."

"I've been fifteen years in Africa," he said. "I've too much faith in voices that come from orange trees where no one is to try to give them a hand. You needn't fancy I've had anything to do with whatever has happened."

"Marcus?"

Sherry hesitated.

"That's possible. He has an incorrigible bent for the ruder sort of African horseplay. I'll gladly cane him for any misbehavior of which you've definite proof."

"Let me catch him at it," I said, "and I'll do my own caning."

Sherry leaned forward.

"Be sure he suspects nothing till you've a firm grip on him. He's remarkably effective with knives."

"I'll try to remember that. The voice didn't say anything about Ringgo?"

"There was no need. When the body dies, the hand is dead."

Black Marcus came out carrying food. We moved to the table and I started on my second breakfast.

Sherry wondered whether the voice that had spoken to him from the orange tree had also spoken to Kavalov. He had asked Kavalov, he said, but hadn't received a very satisfactory answer. He believed that voices which announced deaths to people's enemies usually also warned the one who was to die. "That is," he said, "the conventional way of doing it, I believe."

"I don't know," I said. "I'll try to find out for you. Maybe I ought to ask him what he dreamed last night, too."

"Did he look nightmarish this morning?"

"I don't know. I left early."

Sherry's eyes squinted.

"Do you mean," he asked, "that you've no idea what shape he's in this morning, whether he's alive or not, whether my dream was a true one or not?"

"Yeah."

The hard line of his mouth loosened into a slow, delighted smile.

"By Jove," he said, "that's capital!"

"Was It a Dream."

He clapped his hands sharply.

Black Marcus popped out of the door.

"Pack," Sherry ordered. "The bald one is finished. We're off."

Marcus bowed and backed grinning into the house.

"Hadn't you better wait to make sure?" I asked.

"But I am sure," he drawled, "as sure as when the voice spoke from the orange tree. There is nothing to wait for now; I have seen him die."

"In a dream."

"Was it a dream?" he asked carelessly.

When I left, 10 or 15 minutes later, Marcus was making noises indoors that sounded as if he actually was packing.

Sherry shook hands with me:

"Awfully glad to have had you for breakfast. Perhaps we'll meet again if your work ever brings you to northern Africa. Remember me to Miriam and Dolph. I can't sincerely send condolences."

When I got back to the Kavalov house Ringgo was propped up on gay cushions in a reed chair under a tree, with a book in his hand.

"What do you think of him?" he asked. "Is he cracked?"

"Not very. He wanted to be remembered to you and Mrs. Ringgo. How's the arm this morning?"

"Rotten. I must have let it get too damp last night. It gave me hell all night."

"Did you see Captain Cat-and-mouse?" Kavalov's whining voice came from behind me. "And did you find any satisfaction in that?"

I turned around. He was coming down the walk from the house. His face was more gray than brown this morning, but what I could see of his throat, above the V of a wing collar, was uncut enough.

His thin face was livid.

"It happened," he babbled. "Oh, my God, it's happened"

"What's happened?"

"It's happened. It's happened."

I pushed him aside and got out of bed. He turned suddenly and ran into my bathroom. I could hear him vomiting as I pushed my feet into slippers.

Kavalov's bedroom was full of noises, excited voices, doors opening and shutting, though I couldn't see anybody.

I ran down to Kavalov's door. It was open.

Kavalov was in there, lying on a low Spanish bed. The bedclothes were thrown across the foot.

Kavalov was lying on his back. His throat had been cut, a curving cut that paralleled the line of his jaw between points an inch under his ear lobes.

Where his blood had soaked into the blue pillow case and the blue sheet it was purple. It was already clotting.

Ringgo came in wearing a bathrobe like a cape.

"It's happened," I growled, using the valet's words.

Ringgo looked dully, miserably, at the bed and began cursing in a choken, muffled voice.

The red-faced blonde woman—Louella Qually, the housekeeper—came in, screamed, pushed past us, and ran to the bed, still screaming. I caught her arm when she reached for the covers.

"Let things alone," I said.

"Cover him up. Cover him up, the poor man!" she cried.

I took her away from the bed. Four or five servants were in the room by now. I gave the housekeeper to a couple of them, telling them to take her out and quiet her down. She went away laughing and crying.

Ringgo was still staring at the bed.

"Where's Mrs. Ringgo?" I asked.

He didn't hear me. I tapped his good arm and repeated the question.

RINGGO stood by the bed, his eyes riveted on the figure of Kavalov. I tapped his arm again and repeated the question: "Where is Mrs. Ringgo?"

He turned slowly.

"She's in her room. She—she didn't have to see it to know what had happened."

"Hadn't you better look after her?"

He nodded, turned slowly, and went out.

I Call in the Sheriff.

The valet, still lemon-yellow, came in.

"I want everybody on the place, servants, farm hands, everybody downstairs in the front room," I told him. "Get them all there right away ,and they're to stay there till the sheriff comes."

"Yes, sir," he said and went downstairs, the others following them.

I closed Kavalov's door and went across to the library, where I phoned the sheriff's office in the county seat. I talked to a deputy named Hilden. When I had told him my story he said the sheriff would be at the house within half an hour.

I went to my room and dressed. By the time I had finished, the valet came up to tell me that everybody was assembled in the front room—everybody except the Ringgos and Mrs. Ringgo's maid.

I was examining Kavalov's bedroom when the sheriff arrived. He was a white-haired man with mild blue eyes and a mild voice that came out indistinctly under a white mustache. He had brought three deputies, a doctor and a coroner with him.

"Ringgo and the valet can tell you more than I can," I said when we had shaken hands all around. "I'll be back as soon as I can make it. I'm going to Sherry's. Ringgo will tell you where he fits in."

In the garage I selected a muddy little car and drove to the bungalow. Its doors and windows were tight, and my knocking brought no answer.

I went back along the cobbled walk to the car, and rode down into Farewell. There I had no trouble learning that Sherry and Marcus had taken the two-ten train for Los Angeles the afternoon before, with three trunks and half a dozen bags that the village expressman had checked for them.

After sending a telegram to the Agency's Los Angeles branch, I hunted up the man from whom Sherry had rented the bungalow. He could tell me nothing at all about his tenants except that he was disappointed in their not staying even a full two weeks. Sherry had returned the keys with a brief note saying he had been called away unexpectedly.

"Nobody Heard Any Thing."

I pocketed the note. Handwriting specimens are always convenient to have. Then I borrowed the keys to the bungalow and went back to it.

I didn't find anything of value there, except a lot of fingerprints that might possibly come in handy later. There was nothing there to tell me where my men had gone.

I returned to Kavalov's.

The sheriff had finished running the staff through the mill.

"Can't get a thing out of them," he said. "Nobody heard anything and nobody saw anything, from bedtime last night, till the valet opened the door to call him at 8 o'clock this morning and saw him dead—like that. You know any more than that?"

"No. They tell you about Sherry?"

"Oh, yes. That's our meat, I guess, huh?"

"Yeah. He's supposed to have cleared out yesterday afternoon, with his black man, for Los Angeles. We ought to be able to find the work in that. What does the doctor say?"

"Says he was killed between three and four this morning, with a heavyish knife—one clean slash from left to right, like a left-handed man would do it."

"Maybe one clean cut," I agreed, "but not exactly a slash. Slower than that. A slash, if it curved, ought to curve up, away from the slasher, in the middle, and down toward him at the ends—just the opposite of what this does."

"Oh, all right. Is this Sherry a southpaw?"

"I don't know." I wondered if Marcus was. "Find the knife?"

"Nary hide nor hair of it. And what's more, we didn't find anything else inside or out Funny a fellow as scared as Kavalov was, from all accounts, didn't keep himself locked up tighter. His windows were open. Anybody could have got in them with a ladder. His door wasn't locked."

"There could be half a dozen reasons for that. He——"

One of his deputies, a bib-shouldered blond man, came in:

"We found the knife."

The sheriff and I followed the deputy out of the house, around to the side on which Kavalov's room was situated. The knife's blade was buried in the ground among some shrubs that bordered a path leading down to the farm hands' quarters.

The knife's wooden handle—painted red—slanted a little toward the house A little blood was smeared on the blade, but the soft earth had cleaned off most. There was no blood on the painted handle, and nothing like a fingerprint.

There were no footprints in the soft ground near the knife. Apparently it had been tossed into the shrubbery.

"I guess that's all there is here for us," the sheriff said. "There's nothing much to show that anybody had anything to do with it, or didn't. Now we'll look after this here Capt. Sherry."

I went down to the village with him. At the postoffice we learned that Sherry had left a forwarding address: General Delivery, St. Louis, Mo. The postmaster said Sherry had received no mail during his stay in Farewell.

We went to the telegraph office, and were told that Sherry had neither received nor sent any telegrams. I sent one to the agency's St. Louis branch.

The rest of our poking in the village brought us nothing—except we learned that most of the idlers in Farewell had seen Sherry and Marcus board the southbound two-ten train.

Before we returned to the Kavalov house a telegram came from the Los Angeles branch for me:

"Sherry's trunks and bags in baggage room here not yet called for are keeping them under surveillance."

When we got back to the house grilled, Sherry admitted his identity but denied the murder.

Two of the sheriff's men went North and brought the prisoners down to the county seat.

Sherry had shaved off his mustache. There was nothing in his face or voice to show that he was the least bit worried.

"I knew there was nothing more to wait for after my dream," he drawled, "so I went away. Then, when I heard the dream had come true, I knew you johnnies would be hot after me—as if one can help his dreams—and I-ah-sought seclusion."

He solemnly repeated his orange-tree-voice story to the sheriff and district attorney. The newspapers liked it.

He refused to map his route for us, to tell us how he had spent his time.

"No, no," he said, "Sorry, but I shouldn't-do it. It may be I shall have to do it again some time, and it wouldn't do to reveal my methods."

He wouldn't tell us where he had spent the night of the murder. We were fairly certain that he had left the train before it reached Los Angeles, though the train crew had been able to tell us nothing.

"Sorry," he drawled, "But if you chaps don't know where I was, how do you know that I was where the murder was?"

We had even less luck with Marcus. His formula was: "Not understand the English very good. Ask the capitaine. I don't know."

The district attorney spent a lot of time walking his office floor, biting his fingernails and telling us fiercely that the case was going to fall apart if we couldn't prove that either Sherry or Marus was within reach of the Kavalov house at, or shortly before or after, the time of the murder.

The sheriff was the only one of us who handn't a sneaky feeling that Sherry's sleeves were loaded with assorted aces. The sheriff saw him already hanged.

Sherry got a lawyer, a slick looking pale man with horn-rim glasses and a thin twitching mouth. His name was Schaeffer. He went around smiling shyly to himself and at us.

When the district attorney had only thumb nails left and was starting to work on them, I borrowed a car from Ringgo and started following the railroad south, trying to learn where Sherry had left the train. We had mugged the pair of course, so I carried their photographs with me.

I displayed those damned photographs at every railroad stop between Farewell and Los Angeles, at every village within 20 miles of the tracks on either side, and at most of the houses in between. And it got me nothing.

There was no evidence that Sherry and Marcus hadn't gone through to Los Angeles.

Their train would have put them there at 10:30 that night. There was no train out of Los Angeles that would have carried them back to Farewell in time to kill Kavalov.

There were two possibilities: an airplane could have carried them back in plenty of time, and an automobile might have been able to do it, though that didn't look reasonable.

I tried the airplane angle first, and couldn't find a flyer who had had a passenger that night. With the help of the Los Angeles police and some operatives from the Continental's Los Angeles branch, I had everybody who owned a plane—public or private—interviewed. All the answers were no.

We tried the less promising automobile angle. The larger taxicab and hire-car companies said, "No." Four privately owned cars had been reported stolen between 10 and 12 o'clock that night. Two of them had been found in the city the next morning. They couldn't have made the trip to Farewell and back. One of the others had been picked up in San Diego the next day. That let that one out. The other was still loose, a Packard sedan. We got a printer working on postcard descriptions of it.

A Clue in San Pedro.

To reach all the small-fry taxi and hire-car owners was quite a job, and then there were the private car owners who might have hired out for one night. We went into the newspapers to cover these fields.

We didn't get any automobile information, but this new line of inquiry—trying to find traces of our men here a few hours before the murder—brought results of another kind.

At San Pedro (Los Angeles' seaport, 25 miles away) a Negro had been arrested at 1 o'clock on the morning of the murder. The Negro spoke English poorly, but had papers to prove that he was Pierre Tisano, a French sailor. He had been arrested on a drunk and disorderly charge.

The San Pedro police said that the photograph and description of the man we knew as Marcus fit the drunken sailor exactly.

That wasn't all the San Pedro police said.

Tisano had been arrested at 1 o'clock. At a little after 2 o'clock a white man, who gave his name as Henry Somerton, had appeared and had tried to bail the Negro out. The desk sergeant had told Somerton that nothing could be done till morning, and that, anyway, it would be better to let Tisano sleep off his jag before removing him. Somerton had readily agreed to that, had remained talking to the desk sergeant for more than half an hour, and had left at about 3. At 10 o'clock that morning he had reappeared to pay the black man's fine. They had gone away together.

The San Pedro police said that Sherry's photograph—without the mustache—and description were Henry Somerton's.

Henry Somerton's signature on the register of the hotel to which he had gone between his two visits to the police matched the handwriting in Sherry's note to the bungalow's owner.

It was pretty clear that Sherry and Marcus had been in San Pedro—a nine-hour train ride from Farewell—at the time that Kavalov was murdered.

Pretty clear isn't quite clear enough in a murder job: I carried the San Pedro desk sergeant north with me for a personal look at the two men.

"Them's them, all righty," he said.

The district attorney ate up the rest of his thumb nails.

The sheriff had the bewildered look of a child who had held a balloon in his hand, had heard a pop, and couldn't understand where the balloon had gone.

I pretended I was perfectly satisfied.

"Now we're back where we started," the district attorney wailed disagreeably, as if it was everybody's fault but his, "and with all those weeks wasted."

The sheriff didn't look at the district attorney, and didn't say anything.

I said:

"Oh, I wouldn't say that. We've made some progress."

"What?"

They All Have Alibis.

"We know that Sherry and the other man have alibis."

The district attorney seemed to think I was trying to kid him. I didn't pay any attention to the faces he made at me, and asked:

"What are you going to do with them?"

"What can I do with them but turn them loose? This shoots the case to hell."

"It doesn't cost the county much to feed them," I suggested. "Why not hang on to them as long as you can while we think it over? Something new may turn up, and you can always drop the case if nothing does. You don't think they're innocent, do you?"

He gave me a look that was heavy and sour with pity for my stupidity.

"They're guilty as hell, but what good's that to me if I can't get a conviction? And what's the good of saying I'll hold them? Damn it, man, you know as well as I do that all they've got to do now is ask for their release and any judge will hand it to them."

"Yeah," I agreed. "I'll bet you the best hat in San Francisco that they don't ask for it."

"What do you mean?"

"They want to stand trial," I said, "or they'd have sprung that alibi before we dug it up. I've an idea that they tipped off the Spokane police themselves. And I'll bet you that hat that you get no habeas corpus motions out of Schaeffer."

The district attorney peered suspiciously into my eyes.

"Do you know something that you're holding back?" he demanded.

"No, but you'll see I'm right."

I was right. Schaeffer went around smiling to himself and making no attempt to get his clients out of the county prison.

Three days later something new turned up.

A man named Archibald Weeks, who had a small chicken farm some place, came to see the district attorney. Weeks said he had seen Sherry on his—Week's place—early on the morning of the murder.

Slant-eyed Miriam, Kavalov's daughter.

"He was packing when I left," I said. "Going back to Africa."

That day was Thursday. Nothing else happened that day.

Friday morning I was awakened by the noise of my bedroom door being opened violently.

Martin, the thin-faced valet, came dashing into my room and began shaking me by the shoulder, though I was sitting up by the time he reached my bedside.

I met Ringgo in the hall and asked him:

"Is Sherry left-handed?"

He thought and then shook his head.

"I can't remember," he said. "He might be. I'll ask Miriam. Perhaps she'll know—women remember things like that."

When he came downstairs again he was nodding:

"He's very nearly ambidextrous but uses his left hand more than his right. Why?"

"The doctor thinks it was done with a left hand. How is Mrs. Ringgo now?"

"I think the worst of the shock is over, thanks."

* * * *

Sherry's baggage remained uncalled for in the Los Angeles passenger station all day Saturday. Late that afternoon the sheriff made public the news that Sherry and the black were wanted for murder, and that night the sheriff and I took a train South.

Sunday morning, with a couple of men from the Los Angeles department, we opened the baggage. We didn't find anything except legitimate clothing and personal belongings that told us nothing.

That trip paid no dividends.

I returned to San Francisco and had bales of circulars printed and distributed.

Two weeks went by, two weeks in which the circulars brought us nothing but the usual lot of false alarms.

Then the Spokane police picked up Sherry and Marcus in a Stevens Street rooming house.

Some unknown person had phoned the police that one Fred Williams living there had a mysterious black visitor nearly every day, and that their actions were very suspicious. The Spokane police had copies of our circular. They hardly needed the H. S. monograms on Fred Williams' cuff links and handkerchiefs to assure them that he was our man.

After a couple of hours of being

Kavalov, the victim.

Umps Mobbed, Fans Howl, Baseball's Fun Again

No More of This Sissy Stuff—and Rooters Flock to Parks.

Riot in St. Louis Was Just a Starter for Old-Time Mahem.

By H. I. Phillips.

"It looks," said Senator O. Howe Dumm, "as if baseball was going to become good fun again."

"How so?" inquired Representative A. Lott Dummer.

"The players have taken to disputing the umpires, taking socks at one another and showing up with black eyes for the first time in years. The game begins to appeal to me once more."

"Baseball has been so polite and refined for the last ten or 15 years that a fan could go to a crucial series just to catch up on his lost sleep," muttered Dummer.

"The national game was highly recommended for insomnia during late years," said the Senator. "When you couldn't get any sleep anywhere else you could almost always get it at a baseball park. It was nothing unusual to see scores of loyal rooters sound asleep during ninth-inning rallies."

"It is good to see the boys reverting to type again and swinging with both fists in moments of extreme excitement," declared Dummer. "I remember away back when baseball was generally conceded to be the closest rival pugilism had."

"So do I," said the Senator. "Baseball was built up over the prostrate forms of battered umpires and bruised and torn baseball players. For years I used to demand my money back if no pitched fight took place during the game."

"Do you remember when the managers used to come storming from the dugouts yelling for blood at least once in every inning?"

"I do indeed. John McGraw was perhaps the most colorful and successful manager in the history of the game and it was a dull afternoon that Jawn didn't take a punch at an umpire before the last half of the third inning. Belligerency was the very soul of the game."

"Those were the days," sighed Dummer. "Half the fun of a ball game was waiting for the fisticuffs to begin. Escorting the umpire out of the park and seeing him safely to the depot used to be a daily routine for the police department."

"Baseball began to go sissy some years ago," continued Senator Dumm, "and it finally got so that a baseball player went a whole season without even throwing anybody a mean look. It was disgusting. It became bad manners for a player to forget that he was a gentleman first and a baseball player second. The managers turned ladylike, too, about ten years ago and you seldom saw one on the field unless one of his players had been killed or wounded. Even then he seemed a little reluctant to show any undue excitement."

"The boys are all nice little playmates together, even during the closest pennant races," admitted Dummer. "A few years ago it reached a stage where the rival teams fraternized as if they were at college reunions. Time and again you would see a player get spiked without showing any resentment whatever and the arguments with the umpire got so tame they could have used women umps."

"But this season started out with a return to normal and I was delighted to hear that the athletets were again behaving like spirited he-men, jealous of their rights and able to lose their heads over a close decision as in the old days," declared Senator Dumm. "That riot in St. Louis a few weeks ago, when both teams squared off and staged a Donnybrook, was one of the best things that ever happened to the game from the standpoint of box-office appeal. Hundreds of fans who hadn't been to a ball game in years grabbed their hats and started for the ball parks with their old-time enthusiasm."

"From the small fines the bosses are imposing I guess it is generally realized that the game needs hardening up," mused Dummer.

"It looks to me as if even Judge Landis had at last tumbled to the fact that baseball is a game of emotions, and that no player whose heart is in the game can go day after day without losing his noodle and behaving like a man who is justly indignant in the pinches," continued the Senator. "There is no use kidding yourself into thinking that a baseball player who has the proper yen for victory can be at his best when he has his emotions under a strong pull. The boys have got to be kept in a fighting mood if baseball is to be a stirring sport and up to the standards to which we old-timers had become accustomed If I ran a ball team I wouldn't give a dime for a player who didn't go off his nut and want to clean up every time he thought he got a raw deal."

"When they named a high commissioner of baseball there seemed to be a sudden feeling that decorum was what the game needed more than anything else," observed Dummer. "The emphasis was put on polite manners and complete control. It went from bad to worse, and for the last few years nobody showed any surprise when he was safe by five yards, merely smiled at the umpire and when a ball player, called out walked back to the dugout without the slightest indication of mental agitation. Even batters got beaned by pitchers without making a complaint."

"I can remember," said the Senator, "when the rivalries were so keen when series time rolled around that one team had to be housed in a hotel at the other end of the city to avoid pre-game hostilities. The fans used to get hysterical days before the games began. It was always an open question whether the best fights were being held on the diamond or in the grandstand and bleachers."

"Every series I have seen for the last few years was so quiet, orderly and peaceful that many a fan took along a cross-word puzzle for excitement," said Dummer.

"I don't know when I've seen a bloody nose in the bleachers during a world series," sighed the Senator. "And it is years since they had to keep extra ambulances at all exits as well as an oversized one just back of the clubhouse."

"Do you think the belligerency being shown this season is a flash in the pan?" asked Dummer.

"I don't know," concluded the Senator. "But I sincerely hope not. A home run with the bases full is a great thrill, and so is a duel between two great pitchers, and all that sort of stuff, but the making of a cauliflower ear or a shiner still has its old-fashioned box-office appeal."

Scientist Builds Solar Heating Plant

Tap Artist, 12, Conducts Own Dancing School

Charges 17 Youngsters 3 Cents Per Half Hour

Two ambitions are coming true because Esther Eagan, 12, likes tap dancing.

Esther wants to be a nurse so she can help crippled people walk again. And she wants to give younger boys and girls a chance to learn to dance. With both ideas in mind, she has opened her own dancing school and is giving tap lessons at 3 cents a half hour.

Esther Eagan.

"Most of all I want the kids to have a chance," Esther writes from 19 Apple street, Lackawanna, N. Y. "If you teach only for money you'll be disappointed. What I do earn, however, I'm saving to help me when I enter my training course to become a nurse.

"Three years ago I worked out the elementary dance steps for myself. Then I began taking lessons from teachers. My present teacher gave me the idea for this dancing school.

"I have 17 pupils and hold classes three days a week. The pupils range from 5 to 12 years old. We do fast tapping and a little waltzing.

"To teach, you do not have to be an expert. You must be able to show your pupils the right steps and not mix them up."

Newsfacts—Though schools and teachers of dancing are numerous, more and more people are seeking instruction in the newest dance steps. * * Like other professions, dance teaching pays well at the top. The "top" means ownership of a dancing school. * * Teachers-to-be usually start with a training course at an established school, get part-time instruction jobs, full-time jobs, a reputation and, finally, a school of their own.

Paying Hobby

Grant Huey—This Array of Antique Mechanical Banks Coins Money From Visitors.

Self-supporting is the hobby of Grant Huey, 12. He collects mechanical banks and, to see them work, the visitor has to insert a coin. Just try and get the coin back!

"My favorite is a William Tell bank," Grant writes from 2829 Brookwood Terrace, Minneapolis, Minn. "You put the coin in his gun, press his foot, and he shoots the apple off his son's head with the coin. Apple and coin drop into the bank as a bell rings. The apple returns; the coin doesn't.

"I now have ten mechanical banks and several 'dumb,' or non-mechanical, ones.

"My grandfather had a Tammany bank when he was a boy. That one really started me collecting about a year ago.

"The Tammany bank is the figure of a politician. When you drop a coin in his hand he promptly pockets it.

"But don't think because I collect mechanical banks I spend all my time in antique shops.

"I love sports."

Newsfacts—Mechanical banks were a fad in the 1890s. * * A few years later they enjoyed a comeback when Theodore Roosevelt went to Africa to hunt. The most popular model showed Teddy shooting a bear from a tree at drop of a coin into the mechanism.

Mirrors and Lens Used To Capture Sun's Beams

Sunshine ought to do more than just blister our backs in summer, argues Thomas Westmacott.

So the 18-year-old scientist has built a small solar heating plant which captures the sun's rays and turns them into usable heat. With his outfit he has raised the temperature of water to 150 degrees.

"These experiments are only preliminary to more effective ones which I hope to conduct in the near future," Thomas writes from Chase, Kans. "My model consists of a small bank of mirrors, a focusing lens, a flat jar of carbon tetrachloride, saturated with iodine and a retort to hold the water."

Heat From Infra-Red Rays.

It is the infra-red rays in sunshine that produce the heat. These rays are separated by passing the sun's rays through a prism of glass, thus producing a spectrum.

"The principle of my plant," Thomas continues, "is that only the infra-red rays will be able to pass through the solution, and reach the water. By concentrating enough sunshine (with the mirrors) and focusing it on the water, a high temperature can be obtained.

Thomas Westmacott—Less Than $5 Spent on Model.

"I hope to apply these principles to a plant large enough to produce practical results. I spent less than $5 on the model."

Reports of similar experiments by Dr. Charles B. Abbott started Thomas on this undertaking. Incidentally, Thomas has just been elected to honorary membership in the International Science Foundation.

Bike Trailers.

It had to come. What with so many auto trailers, bike trailers couldn't be far behind.

Two Tampa, Fla., boys, William Edward Roach and Buck Blount, are pioneers of what may soon be another craze. They built the trailers themselves.

William, who lives at 816 South Edison, tells how:

"My trailer is 8 feet long, 33 inches high, 32 inches wide. I made it of wall board on a wooden frame. I used tricycle wheels, but Buck put wagon wheels on his.

"They cost us between $6 and $8 each. We have been on one long hunting trip, staying four nights."

Fencer Wins All School Bouts

Defeats Older Foilsmen; Third in State Tourney.

Choose your weapons, but don't choose foils if Byron Krieger is your opponent!

Why? Because Byron, 16, fencing for Northwestern High of Detroit, won all his 21 school bouts and a flock of others against older fencers.

"My buddy, John Dreher, had a friend who owned some fencing equipment," Byron writes from 2494 Gladstone avenue, Detroit. "Three years ago he decided to buy two masks and two foils for himself.

"Then we joined the school fencing club. Our instructor was one of the best women fencers in the State, and we really began to learn.

Takes Up Saber.

"On her advice John and I started taking lessons from a master. He taught us many movements and the psychology of combat. This season we took up saber, but foil is my strongest weapon. I placed third in the State championships.

"Fencing is now the chief thing I do and I am more interested than ever. It develops co-ordination, as your feet have to do one thing while your hands do another. Footwork, as in boxing, is important.

"It's really thrilling to try to outwit an opponent. But it isn't simple. You have to practice and train constantly."

Newsfacts—The United States has produced surprisingly few top-notch male fencers. * * But the sport is the country's fastest growing indoor athletics. Equipment sales leaped 50 per cent in the last year. * * The world's best fencer is Aldo Nadi, an Italian, who started training at 9 and spent 25 years reaching the peak.

Cat Has Job

On Garage Pay Roll Just Like Other Employes.

Unemployed cats take notice! Have you put in applications at garages?

Take a tip from Big Tom, feline employe of a Newark, N. J., garage, they're swell places to work. Big Tom is drawing 12 cents a day and his duties are a cinch.

"During the day he follows me around and at night follows the night man," writes W. Fred Fletcher, attendant of the Junction Garage & Welding Co., Chapel and Fleming avenue.

"He's on the pay roll with the rest of us. He draws his salary in food—two kinds of cat foods, liver, raw meat and salmon."

Newsfacts—Mice chewed up police records in Ambridge, Pa., until feline matron Mary was added to the force. Cattily taking all the mice into custody, she won a bonus of a pint of milk a day. * * An entire staff of cats is on the French pay roll for the National Printing Office. Want a Job?

Oh, to be in England now that jobs are there!

Believe it or not, there are 12,000 vacancies available in London alone for boys and girls under the age of 18. Growing prosperity, coupled with the fact fewer boys and girls are leaving school, is the reason.

Rescues Drowning Dog From Lake Waters

Pooch Swims Hour Before Help Arrives

Allan McCuish, 18, couldn't go to the movies. He was broke. So he took a short walk down to Lake Ontario and ran into more excitement than he'd ever have found in a movie.

"I heard a low cry out by the sea wall, 100 feet from shore, and saw something white in the water," Allan writes from 3A Thorburn avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

"Throwing off my overcoat, I dove in. The object was a dog, a Dalmatian puppy, which had been in the frigid water for an hour and was exhausted

Beat Others to It.

"I caught him under one arm and stopped to get my bearings. The weight of my clothes pulled me under once. I also bruised my leg on a piece of floating ice.

"At last I made the shore and climbed the retaining wall with the aid of a hanging chain. A soldier took us to the Royal Canadian Dragoon barracks where we were dried out and revived."

The puppy had fallen into the lake. His owner, who couldn't swim, appealed to the yacht club, humane society and livesavers to rescue his pet, but Allan beat them to it.

Newsfacts—Another thrilling dog rescue of recent months was that of Snarky, cocker spaniel, by his master, Ross Newfarmer, of California. On a Sunday fishing trip to Santa Cruz, Snarky got tangled up in the tackle, plunged 30 feet from a perpendicular cliff into the Pacific. The tide swiftly swept him around the point of the rock. * * Mr. Newfarmer rushed to his car, procured a tow rope, had passers-by lower him over the edge. He grabbed Snarky by the scruff from the churning water and both were pulled to safety.

"It teaches us," said James brightly, "how easy it is to get stung!"

Love Bird Has Ear for Music

Especially Likes Waltz Written in His Honor.

Cookie is a good judge of music—as much of a judge as a love bird can be—and so he cocked his head appreciatively when he heard a waltz named in his honor played over a national radio hook-up recently.

The waltz was written by his mistress, Molly Milan, 9-year-old piano prodigy of Oakland, Calif., who is a radio and concert artist and the author of 123 original compositions.

"My best audience is Cookie," Molly writes Parade from 1464 Ninth street. "When I begin to practice, he pecks open the door of his cage, flies down to my chair and perches on my lap or shoulder.

"Gay music makes him sing. But when the music is sad, he ruffles his feathers, closes his little black eyes and just listens. He likes all the old classics except Bach. Bach he despises.

"Kissing, shaking hands and singing 'The Indian Love Call' without missing a note are some of his tricks. Curiosity is one of his worst faults. He thinks he must know about everything."

Molly Milan and Cookie (on Shoulder)—Bach He Despises.

Molly began writing songs when she was 5. Cookie is her hobby, she says, so she wrote "Cookie Waltz" in his honor.

Town Dog Pays No License Fee

"Dog tax'" is a word unknown to Old Sport, town pet of Parma, Idaho. He's done so many good deeds since he was abandoned in Parma by his owner, a passing motorist, that the town officials give him a hearty welcome and to heck with the dog tax!

"Half spaniel and half setter, he weighs about 125 pounds," writes Beth Peterson, one of his friends.

"He rescued a young girl by going for help when he saw her fall in a barrel. He guards an old man who is subject to epileptic fits, and lets the school pupils ride on his back.

"Boys and girls can't fight when he's around because he gets between them. At noon he visits the school and the pupils give him lunch. Once a day he goes to the meat market and receives some meat. He also gets scraps from the hospital."

War Aviation Relics Saved By Collector

World War aviators would grow sentimental if they stepped into the workshop of Burt McNall, jr. Burt, 15, began building model airplanes eight years ago and then:

"Interest in wartime models led me to collect relics of the days when airplanes ran on castor oil," Burt writes from 173 South Main street, Albion, N. Y.

"My war relics now include a propeller from a French two-seater Salmson; a strut, piston rings and ignition switch from a Nieuport 25; an insignia (one of the few used on American planes before the Armistice); two wartime aircraft bombs; a reproduction of a German cross insignia on original fabric and one Vickers aircraft machine gun.

From South Pole.

"I also have a picture of and fabric from the plane Commander Richard E. Byrd used on his South Pole flights. Both are autographed by officers who made the trip over the Pole."

Surrounded by his relics, Burt builds flying models of wartime and modern airships. His latest project is a Spad XIII, similar to the plane flown by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

"I am working on endurance models of my own design and hope to become an aeronautical engineer," Burt concludes.

Newsfacts—What becomes of historic planes? Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" rests in Smithsonian Institution (which once refused the Wright Brothers' plane), but other famous airships are soon forgotten. * * "The Bird of Paradise," first to fly the Pacific between California and Hawaii, lay unnoticed in an abandoned building in Honolulu for years. Rescued, it was claimed for a military museum. * * "Columbia" flew the Atlantic three times, once with Clarence Chamberlain, but was finally sold and lost in a hangar fire. * * The plane Byrd flew to the South Pole and from which Burt's relics came was broken up so pieces could be sold to souvenir collectors.

Drum Major-ess

High in the air twirls the baton. The drum major swaggers, side-steps beneath the falling baton, and neatly catches it with a flourish.

The drum major of this high school band in Lytle, Tex., is a 16-year-old girl!

"I got the place because I'm 5 feet, 7 inches tall; I've had experience with a drill team and I know something about music," Helen Meyer, the drum major, writes.

"More than a fourth of our students play in the band. It had 57 members this year and we won several prizes in band meets and concerts."

Don't Say We Failed to Warn You About Doris

Well, we warned you feminine swimmers to watch out for 15-year-old Doris Brennan. Doris splashed her way to the national 500-yard free-style title in Chicago recently.

She beat the famed Kitty Rawls to do it! Her time was 6 minutes 24 and a fraction seconds. So Doris, who lives at 889 Atwell avenue, Providence, R. I., adds another to her collection of 76 medals, trophies and placques.

She's Traveled Her Geography

Student Has Attended Schools in All 48 States.

Travel has made geography the favorite subject of June Handke. Only 13, she has attended a total of 57 schools in all 48 States, the District of Columbia, Canada and Mexico!

"If I finish the term in this school," June writes from the Daytona Beach (Fla.) Junior High School, "it will be the longest period I have ever stayed in one school in my life. I've been here about nine weeks. I'm working hard to get a promotion to the ninth grade.

"My travels are due to the fact that my father used to be with a carnival and is now a traveling salesman. I was born in Detroit, Mich., and was first taken on the 'road' when I was but 6 months old."

Of course, says June, her favorite subject is geography. She hopes to teach it when she finishes school—if she ever stays long enough in one school to finish!

Doings in Dooville.

Old Hi Haystack's boy came back from college, all full o' talk about his chemical research.

"We're looking for a universal solvent, Pop," he says. "A liquid that'll dissolve anything!"

SEVERAL messenger boys in Washington, D. C., use roller skates to help speed up deliveries.

'I Aim to Be—' By Ralph Williams

A chemical engineer.

Why? Because it is an interesting field that offers both action and research. I want something more than sitting at a desk and giving orders and writing letters. That's why I chose a career with variety and action.

Ralph Williams.

Also, chemistry goes into the field of the unknown, something else that interests me. Because it exercises both mental and physical faculties, it is not apt to become as tiresome as other careers. Of course, it has possibilities for good pay.

Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles by individual Paraders on future careers. Succeeding ones on different careers will follow weekly. These are written not by oldsters who have already "arrived," but by boys and girls who are now in the process of hewing out careers.

I chose my career just two years ago. Having been graduated from high school here in Granite Falls, N. C., at 16, I was faced with the problem of choosing a college. Like all other graduates, I received college bulletins from all over. I finally decided on Lenoir Rhyne, in nearby Hickory. I still hadn't chosen a course.

Forgets It's Difficult.

Then I began to think of chemistry. Thinking it was hard, I failed to study that subject in high school. But I found out that chemical engineers were well paid, in an uncrowded field and had a good chance for advancement and work. I decided to try it for a while.

I found chemistry so interesting that I soon forgot all thoughts of its being hard. Now in my sophomore year, I like it better than any subject I am taking. I work in the laboratory all my spare time.

I expect to study at Lenoir Rhyne another year, then finish the last two years of my course at a larger college. Perhaps some day I may discover some new compound of great importance to the world, some medical preparation for example. At any rate, I shall certainly have the opportunity to experiment in that way.

Injured Scout Saves Himself

Uses Tourniquet to Keep From Bleeding to Death.

Blood spurted from the cut artery. Joe Woodin, 14, would have died from loss of blood—if he had not rescued himself!

"I stumbled while hiking alone through a cornfield," Joe writes from 1335 Nazareth place, Kalamazoo, Mich. "My knife fell out of the case and ran into my thigh about 4½ inches.

"Pulling out the knife, I cut a strip of canvas from my pack sack and made a tourniquet. Then I dragged myself half a mile to the main road, where a motorist picked me up.

"A few months ago I wouldn't have known how to make that tourniquet. I have only recently passed the Boy Scout tenderfoot tests, and I owe my life to what I learned there."

Newsfacts—A tourniquet improperly applied may cause amputation, even death. * * It should be used only when an artery has been cut. Locate the artery between the heart and the wound with the fingers and press until bleeding stops. Apply the tourniquet about a hand's width below armpit or groin, knot ends, put stick between knots and turn carefully. Unwind stick every 20 minutes to restore circulation in smaller veins. * * Tourniquets are for arms or legs only. There's a joke about the boy who put one around a friend's neck to stop a nose bleed. The friend almost choked to death!

Future Aviatrix Is Studying Mechanics

Irma Bentz—Plenty of Social Life and Some Study.

If you think you have earned your vacation, listen to the story of Irma Bentz.

A student at Ohio State University, Columbus, Irma carried enough extra work to be graduated within 2½ years. But the 19-year-old didn't miss any campus activity, being a member of six clubs and taking part in several plays. She studied 3½ hours daily. And then, she did secretarial work for a professor all last year!

Neglects Stamps, However.

"I found plenty of time for tennis, swimming, dancing and social life," she writes from 745 Bedford place, Columbus. "But I did neglect my stamp collection.

"I majored in languages. I have always been more interested in them than in any other subject. I hope to enter the United States Foreign Service, so I am taking graduate courses in contemporary history and diplomacy."

'Coon on Car

Pet Perches on Hood as Family Goes Riding.

Midvale, N. J., gasps at the latest in automobile decorations—a live raccoon that rides the hood of the Jordan's car.

Buck, the raccoon, just has to go riding with 5-year-old John Jordan, his master, and the rest of the family. And no seat will do except the precarious perch on the hood.

"But he never falls off," writes John's father from Grove street, Midvale. "He does miss his twin, Jack, though. And so do John and his nine setter dogs. They were inseparable pals."

You see, Jack is A. W. O. L. again. He frequently goes off for weeks at a time, only this time he has been gone longer than usual. "He's always come home and I'm sure he will this time, too," adds Mr. Jordan.

Stuck Up.

Somebody around here has a mustache. He recently went to the barber because the mustache was in a deplorable condition. "How'd you get it in such a mess?" asked the barber.

Dramatist, 12, To Try Books, Short Stories

Successful playwright at 12!

That's Ann Ridgeway, a British girl, who, having conquered the stage, is now branching out into short story and book writing.

Her play, "Laura, the Do-As-You-Like-Girl," has been presented in London and will be published soon. She has offers for the Dutch, British and radio rights to the play.

Half-Hour Job.

"I wrote it when I was 11, doing the whole play in about half an hour," Ann writes Parade from 3 Great Ormond street, W. C. 1, London, England. "It takes about 20 minutes to act.

"First it was produced by the little studio where I live and then by my father's little theater at Covent Garden."

Ann was an actress before she tried writing drama. She took the part of Pease Blossom in a presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream" at Wordsworth's old home.

Heavy Reader.

"My other plays include 'The Ghost of Lady Stephanie,' which was presented twice at my school, and a fairy play, and many others which were not so good."

Ann reads an average of one and a half books a day, speaks French and collects stamps. "I mean to continue writing," she says. "I am, at the moment, writing a book and some short stories."

Owls—for Pets That Are Different

Looking for a pet that is different? Carl and Kirby Jackson recommend great horned owls.

Carl, 20, and Kirby, 16, found their pair—just eggs then—in a wood near their Arkansas City, Kans., home. Now Winx and Jinx, as they named the owls, are prized pets.

"We discovered them when a very large bird flew from a nearby tree," write the brothers from 1101 South First street. "On close examination we found a nest containing two large, white eggs which were being hatched by the owls.

"For three weeks after they hatched we watched them. Then we took them home. They became surprisingly tame and accepted food the first day in captivity.

"They require little attention and eat meat scraps, worms, mice and cabbage. They are now more than 10 months old. They have a wingspread of 36 inches and stand over a foot high. We have had every kind of pet from skunk to gold fish, but the owls have proved to be the most interesting."

Newsfacts—The Jacksons' pets are not yet near grown. They will stand 24 inches tall, have wingspreads of 60 inches. Their ear tips will be 2 inches long—that's where the "horned" comes in. * * Fierce, courageous, powerful, the great horned owl is called the "tiger of the air." He wreaks destruction among other birds, continually raids poultry runs after his first taste of chicken. One owl slaughtered 50 Guinea hens in a single autumn. They even tackle skunks, not noticing the odor. * * But they aid man, too, by eating destructive rodents and insects.

Well Grounded.

Now the office boy knows why we sometimes look at his feet with awe. Wearing a brand new pair of "yaller kicks," he climbed into an inter-city bus the other day.

The driver, a bit short-sighted, looked at him and shook his head. "Sorry, fella," he said. "You'll have to stow those two suitcases on top with the others."

FIFTY YEARS have made a lot of difference in 13-year-old boys. Those today are 10 pounds heavier and 2 inches taller than the 13-year-olds back in the eighties.

"If at first you don't succeed——" Clara L. Smith remembered that axiom, tried again and again, then won a trip, a medal and a cup.

For three years the 15-year-old won her way to the finals of the Boston (Mass.) Herald spelling bee, entered by students from all Boston high schools. This year she finally won out—over 40,000 others. "I shall never forget the trip to New York and Washington," she writes from 755 East Seventh street, South Boston.

Newsfacts—The spelling bee had its big inning about 60 years ago when matches were held between towns, cities and even States. * * Now it's making a comeback with the help of radio. Latest such stunt was a bee between Chicago and New York firemen, each side remaining in its respective city.

Girl Models And Designs Planes, Autos

Airplane speed records, long distance air trips, an around-the-world flight along the Equator—these are the things Helen Brown, a 16-year-old Michigan girl, dreams of accomplishing.

Two years ago she began taking piloting lessons. At present she is one of two girls studying auto mechanics in Michigan schools. In 1938 she wants to attend the Lincoln, Nebr., flying school. After graduation she'll tour the United States, first by automobile and then by air.

"I may be too tall and heavy to be an airplane hostess, but I'm not barred from flying my own plane," Helen writes from 1322 East Ganson street, Jackson, Mich.

Learning About Engines.

"I'm taking auto mechanics to learn about engines," she explains. "That's why I model and design automobiles and airplanes.

"I designed an automobile chassis and made it by hand, except for the wheels. It has a six-cylinder engine, a fan-belt of wrapping string, fine copper wires for spark plug wires and gas line, and an exhaust of a small copper tube. The shifting lever is the size of a pencil lead and is tipped with a hatpin."

Helen's other unusual models include an airplane made of bullets, a model of the "China Clipper," and a model airport, complete with six electric landing lights, beacon, administration building, grass and cement runways, model planes and cars.

Makes It Himself

That's How Student Gets Things for Hobbies.

When Perry Stupy wants something he has to make it. But that doesn't cramp his style.

Already the Allegheny High School pupil, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has built a skiff, a circular saw, work bench, telescope, camera, tripod, fencing foils and just about everything he needs for his many hobbies. Now he and a chum are working on another boat, a 22-foot canoe.

"I couldn't get plans for such a large canoe so I made them myself," the 18-year-old tells Parade. "A building was being torn down nearby and we were given the wood in exchange for cleaning up the yard. We used my homemade saw to cut it up.

"Our skiff is built of steel. We put an outboard motor and a 77-foot sail on it last summer. I have always loved the sea and hope to save enough to build a cruiser and travel someday."

Acts of God Preferred.

The approach of the hurricane season moved a father living in an exposed spot in the hurricane belt to send his mischievous young son, for safety, to an uncle up North. He explained all this in a note that went with the lad.

Three days later came an urgent telegram from the uncle. "Am returning boy," it read. "Send hurricane instead!"

Deer Delivers Family's Mail

It's a deer mail carrier the Oscar Kohleffes' have in Weimer, Tex. Their letters and newspapers come home tied to the collar of Billy, a year-old pet deer.

"I found Billy in the woods almost dead from hunger," Mr. Kohleffes writes.

"Taking him home, I fed him warm milk from a bottle. He followed me around like a dog and trotted the half-mile to the mail box with me. Now he goes alone and the mail carrier rewards him with a piece of cake or candy.

"Billy stays in the pasture, but never fails to come home at feeding time.

"At present, he is just growing his second set of horns."

Big Turnout to Acclaim Hero

Harold Jones' city waited several months to give him the hero's acclaim he was due. But when it did, the whole town turned out.

The occasion was the presentation of the bronze medal, highest Boy Scout bravery award, to the 17-year-old South African. The throng cheered Harold, then not fully recovered from burns sustained while saving the lives of four people.

Those burns grimly recalled an auto collision near Harold's home on Main road, Wynberg, Cape Town. A car overturned, burst into flames. "My only thought was to save the four persons trapped in it," says Harold.

Around the World in News, Sci

Spooks!

1 Ever seen a ghost? A guest of a hotel in Bombay, India, may not have seen one, but he certainly knew something was there. He claims the specter threw him out the window!

The mean-tempered apparition must have been kin to one of the many haunts allegedly roaming 300-year-old Raynham Hall, in Norfolk, England. Trying to get a picture of the interior of the hall, a photographer had his camera smashed by a "ghost."

He got even, though. When another shade wasn't looking, the cameraman snapped it coming down the stairs. The picture was published and photographer and developers swear it's not faked.

Incidentally, in England, an old manor house doesn't amount to shucks if it hasn't at least one chain-rattler on the premises. In fact, a hundred years or so ago, pride in ghosts was so great that anyone claiming there weren't such things had a duel on his hands.

Wanted: Muskrats.

2 Canada wants more muskrats in the marshy sections of northern Manitoba. Reason: Lack of muskrat fur is impoverishing many Indians.

The fur is more widely used than that of any other animal on the American continent, is responsible for numerous muskrat "farms." One of these in Louisiana comprises a million acres. Yet, not so many years ago, the fur was unpopular, as the muskrat was despised because of the scent which gives it its name.

The "rat" part of its "monicker" long kept the little animal off the dinner table, too. Now, however, its meat is relished, although few who eat it know what it is!

Looking like a pocket-size edition of a beaver, a muskrat is about one foot long; is probably the only animal capable of really eating itself "out of house and home." In winter it builds a domed hut of edible grass which serves as both food and shelter.

Ray for the Army.

3 Enemy air raiders, stay 'way from our door! The U. S. Army's "black ray" will get you. It can't miss. That's an apt warning if reports from Fort Monmouth, N. J., are true.

There the new "ray" has never failed to locate instantly planes flying at night without lights. More than that, it automatically aimed a beam of light, instead of an anti-aircraft gun. The device is not really a ray; it's a machine that detects the heat of a plane's engine, even 20 miles away.

So the scramble for protection from aircraft goes grimly on, even though Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, ridiculed stories he developed a ray to stop airplane engines.

Word of the "black ray" tests got out despite Army precautions. Yet the United States has one anti-aircraft measure not generally known. It's a giant "audiophone" which picks up, better than any other instrument in the world, the sound of aircraft engines far off. It also aims an antiaircraft gun.

Speedy Animals.

4 Russia has been "clocking" reindeer. In a speed test, 35 of them covered 1,700 miles in 43 days. Not so fast? Here's the catch: It was also an endurance test and each deer lugged a sledge weighted with anywhere from 265 to 331 pounds.

Take off those loads and reindeer really are quite speedy. They can't match their cousins, antelopes, however. These lithe, long-limbed creatures can approach 50 miles per hour.

They can outrace any animal over a distance, yet can't get away from a cheetah, an Indian hunting leopard, without considerable start. For the cheetah is generally acknowledged the fastest thing on four legs for short distances.

Coming after the cheetah is the Saluki, a dog somewhat like the greyhound. The horse would probably be a close third in a race with those two, the best equine speed being around 40 miles per hour.

In the two-legged class, the ostrich takes the prize with the almost incredible speed of 60 miles per hour. But it's easy to catch because it runs in a circle.

Seeing and Hearing.

5 Television flashes ahead—but not in the United States. The world's largest commercial television transmitter soon will open in Paris' Eiffel Tower. Germany has television. England—well, in England television isn't a thing of the future; it's definitely a thing of the present.

Portable television equipment made the recent coronation procession a real sight to some 50,000 Britons clustered about receivers over an area of 7,500 square miles.

What about the United States? Well, what about it? Our television "experts" say the science isn't far enough advanced to be made public. Also, we'll have to wait, they claim, until sets can be made cheaply. Perhaps so, but in England, television receivers cost $400 and there are plenty of them sold.

Salt Sources.

6 A new method of making salt from sea water is reported from Japan. The Japanese need more salt to furnish soda ash from which many chemicals are derived.

Getting salt from sea water is the oldest way of obtaining the substance. Long before the dawn of history, man scooped up sea water in earthen vessels. These were placed in the sun, which evaporated the water and left the salt.

Modern variations of that ancient operation still are used to get most of the world's salt. It also is found in water in some inland springs and lakes. In Australia there are quite a few of the latter, which partially dry up in summer, allowing people to scrape salt from the lake shore.

But not all salt comes from water. There are salt mines. The most famous of these is probably the one near Cracow, Poland. It goes more than a quarter of a mile down, has 500 miles of streets carved through rock salt.

'Zebra Tires.'

7 We've heard of motorists having flat tires and patching them on the road, but the resourcefulness of M. P. van Staden, of South Africa, beats that. He shot a zebra to make his own patches!

It happened near Slangfontein in the Transvaal, 120 miles from the nearest garage. Mr. van Staden was driving his car across the ford of a stream when sharp stones ripped the two rear tires.

He was stuck until another motorist came along and loaned him two tubes. After that, Mr. van Staden knew what to do. He brought down a zebra, then skinned it. He put the borrowed tubes in the torn tires, cut the zebra's skin in strips.

After wetting the strips, he bound them around the tires. In a few hours they were dry and had contracted so tightly they made perfect patches. Then the handy autoist pumped up the tires, rolled on.

Red Hot Aden.

8 Aden has a new claim to fame. Long known as one of the hottest places on earth, the Arabian city near the mouth of the Red Sea can now be called "home of the seashell golf course."

It is so hot grass will not grow, so when a golf course was laid out the "greens" were made of crushed sea shells. As a matter of fact, hardly a thing grows in Aden. Visitors are always warned that it's against the law to lean against a tree. They needn't fear arrest. There are no trees. The law is a little joke of the authorities.

Patience . . . Kindness.

9 Ten years ago, a man in faraway Australia tossed restlessly in bed. It was a strange idea that came to him as he lay awake, an idea which must be tried. A lover of animals since boyhood, he wondered if, by gentleness and kindness, the dumb creatures could be made to speak—in their own way, of course, through their actions.

Hubert Lee has since found out. For ten years his every free moment has been spent at the Taronga Park Zoo in Sydney, where he lives at 343 Pacific highway, Crows Nest. It has been ten years of revelation for the zoo's keepers. For now the animals obey the slightest wish of their 66-year-old, self-appointed trainer.

How? Well, it's best to let Mr. Lee himself tell that. "I have trained a hyena which I call Bim or Bimbo," he writes. "When I call and tell him I want his neck, he comes up and gives it to me.

"I stroke it, and he goes off into sort of a sleep. I tell him, 'Now go for a walk and come back here,' and he does it.

"I also have a wonderful ostrich which, at a signal, sits down and sweeps his head across his wings and when finished walks up and down the enclosure. If he sees me first, he comes running and awaits the signal to perform."

Then, there's the big black bear Mr. Lee taught to waltz. Now the man doesn't have to tell him what to do. When he calls, bruin goes right into his dance.

There are others, such as the giraffe which wraps his long tongue around his friend's finger. The trainer's favorite is the first animal he "educated"—a spider monkey named Cokie.

Mr. Lee remembers particularly one time when Cokie was supposed to screech for the radio and 10,000 gathered to watch. All during the half-hour broadcast Cokie ignored the "mike" and cooed to Mr. Lee!

How does Mr. Lee do it? Infinite patience is about the best answer. He isn't employed at the zoo, is just an animal fan and lover. Despite his age, he's stalwart, vigorous, goes to the zoo every day, speaks to the animals and with unflagging zeal teaches them not to fear him.

Why he does it was explained in the beginning. He just wanted to see if animals would respond to patient, kindly coaxing.

He's been at it long enough for any veil of mystery surrounding the feat to be lifted. Yet the zoo attendants still can't understand it.

'Sail

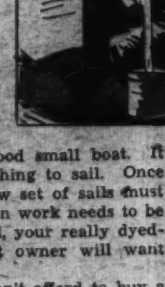
10 Boom! Before the echo of the gun has died, sails come about smartly and tiny boats dance across an invisible line in the water and speed toward a distant buoy. You've guessed it, it's one of the many small boat races which have ushered in a new era in U. S. water sports.

It's a fascinating game, this racing of craft varying in length from about 10 to 30 feet. It's not limited to any sex, any age, any locality. It's a fever in Maine, a disease in Kansas City, a rash in California. Almost any trickling of water dignified by the title "river" is enough for the small boat enthusiast.

This summer a new high in small boat contests will be reached. A builder at Cape Cod, Mass., expects to sell 600 tiny craft. Another in Pennsylvania keeps 680 of them in production all the time. Some department stores sell them by mail. There are more than 5,000 small boat clubs.

How did it all start? Because the air is free. That may sound a little silly, but here's the answer in detail: Yachting and motor boat racing were sweeping the country back in 1929. Then along came the business depression, and thousands of formerly well-to-do amateur skippers found themselves unable to support a small motor boat, for even it needed gas and expensive engine work, both of which ran into money.

But once a man had owned a boat, the "lure of sea" was in his blood. He had to take the water in something. So he turned to the small sailboat.



It's cheap. You have to pay more for some good radios than you do for a good small boat. It costs almost nothing to sail. Once in a while a new set of sails must be bought. When work needs to be done on the hull, your really dyed-in-the-wool boat owner will want to do it himself.

Even if one can't afford to buy a boat, he can probably scrape together the needed cash to buy the material and build it himself. Then, he need only buy the sails ready made. Few amateur craftsmen can turn out first-class "white wings."

When the sailor of pre-depression days gave up his yacht or motor boat and turned to a little sailing craft, he didn't have in mind racing. But soon others followed his example and the water was dotted with sleek hulls rearing canvas toward the sky.

Naturally, rivalry sprung up. The first thing America knew, small boat racing had become a major summer sport. At that, though, it isn't limited to warm weather.

There's a class of tiny craft known as "frostbite." All winter, come ice, come snow, you can see their squat hulls zipping through the water. They are more sturdily built than ones intended just for summer use. They have to be for, as one young sailor explains naively, "sometimes you smash into a small iceberg."

The enthusiasm of a "frostbiter" is greater, if possible, than that of the summer "tar." One has been observed so wrapped up in the race he didn't notice he was sitting in 2 inches of icy water!

Don't get the idea, though, that the typical small boat owner is a seasoned veteran of boating. On the contrary, he probably bought his first craft in the last few years. And some of the best skippers in the land still are in grade or high school.

The vest-pocket ships are comparatively easy to handle, once you get the knack, and young America takes to them as readily as his craft takes the breeze. Dad and mother don't usually object, for bad spills are uncommon and fatalities extremely rare.

The old saying, "there are tricks in every trade," applies to boat racing, too. Most of the undersized yachts are exactly alike, so have the same speed. Thus the winning pilot is generally the shrewdest.

He maneuvers his boat cleverly near the starting point so its bow breaks across the line the exact instant the gun is fired. He watches small details like cleaning the hull just before the contest.

Boat racing has its humor, too. Once a whole fleet was going aweil, then the wind died. The skippers just had to sit that one out!

Writer, Beauty, Star.

11 Fame, as has so often been remarked, is a fleeting thing. And there are few places where it is more fleeting than in the theater. As a rule, a stage star can look forward to five or six years of adulation, then obscurity, as the public finds a new darling.

There are exceptions to all rules, however, and here's one: For 25 years Jane Cowl has been getting major roles and increasing bravos from audiences.

It was as Jane Cowles that the future actress grew up in Boston. Ambition was to be a writer, so schooling was undertaken in New York at Columbia University. She started her writing career on a newspaper, but that's as far as she got, for the time being, because she had another idea.

This time it was to be an actress. As it turned out, it was a better idea, anyhow. She went to the grand old man of the theater, the late David Belasco. He was struck with her beauty more than with any embryonic talent she might have.

That beauty carried her through several bit parts and her first big role in "Is Matrimony a Failure?" in 1909. While in the latter, thoughtful Actress Cowl realized that unless she did something about it she was doomed to be eternally cast not for acting ability, but for beauty—that is, as long as her beauty lasted.

What she did was obviously simple, yet courageous. She left a smash hit just as it was catapulting her to fame and relegated herself to small stock companies to learn the finer points of acting.

In a year or two she was back on Broadway as a dramatic actress with the lead in "Within the Law." Then she stepped into one starring role after another.

While playing for David Belasco, she had met another Jane, just the reverse of herself—an actress who wished to be a writer. So in the years following "Within the Law," Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin put their heads together to turn out three successful plays.

She's done just about everything in an acting way, this dark-haired, brown-eyed theatrical immortal—drama, musical comedy, straight farce, even Shakespeare. When she appeared in "Romeo and Juliet," it set a record for the longest consecutive run of any Shakespearean play.

She's 52 now and her career is just midstream. Last season it was "First Lady," a travesty on a President's wife so ably played it drew chuckles even from Mrs. Roosevelt.

Brave Bunny.

12 A five-foot blacksnake put a rabbit's little-regarded courage to a test not long ago in West Virginia and had few moments to regret its action. The enraged bunny treed the snake, which was killed by a bystander.

The incident seems to put a different face on the commonly painted picture of rabbits. It's true that when they meet an enemy they are generally guided by the old advice "he who runs away will live to fight another day," but a mother bunny, seeking to protect her young, has been known to make even a blood-thirsty ermine do the running.

Probably rabbits recognize that their hind feet, sharp-clawed though they be, are no match for the teeth of most of their enemies. That's why they run. So this apparent cowardice is really wisdom. Their shrewdness also is testified to by the way they flee—in a series of dodges along devious paths they have previously laid out for quick getaways.

Oboist Crazy?

13 There's a shortage of oboe players in Honolulu. A "musical census" taken there recently revealed one out of every ten residents played some instrument. But there was only one oboe tooter.

Maybe the scarcity is due to the legend that oboe players eventually go crazy. This fable started because oboists draw in considerable breath, which must be expelled slowly. Doctors say this might cause slight congestion in the head.

A year or so ago, a national magazine mentioned that fact and received many letters about it. A teacher of the oboe reported he had run across the "insanity" story when he had to assure a student's mother nothing would happen to her son's brain. Another correspondent cruelly commented, "The only crazy oboists I have discovered were crazy anyway."

The legend is best refuted by the fact that oboists have been invaluable members of the best orchestras ever since the reed instrument appeared in 1671.

Temper or Mental?

14 Hollywood boasts at least one director who doesn't mind "temperamental" actors or actresses. He's Mitchell Leisen, who says fits of temper are manifestations of the mental tension necessary for good performances.

Maybe so, but we wonder if that would cover the noted orchestra director who stalked off a Cleveland platform last year in a huff because hot dog vendors were peddling their wares?

Director Leisen didn't mention baseball players, but temperament (or is it just temper?) is present on the diamond, too. In Washington not long ago Boston Pitcher Wes Ferrell ripped his cap and stomped on his glove when a Senator batsman slammed one of his deliveries for a home run. The pitcher's favorite way of showing rage, however, is to pound his head against a wall!

A great many of the best stage and screen stars aren't temperamental at all.

New Wings for Birds.

15 Birds are being taught to fly in Switzerland. They have been in captivity so long they have practically lost the use of their wings. Owners, wishing to turn them loose, send them to "school," where they gradually recover their soaring abilities in huge cages.

All flightless birds didn't get that way from being caged, however. There are the ostriches, cassowaries, emus, kiwis, for example. How did they lose the power to fly? Here's one scientific version:

Such birds are found principally in Australia and New Zealand. Once those countries were part of Asia. They broke free before many large animals could enter.

But birds could and did cross the water. In their new homes, they found few enemies from which they had to flee in the air. So they settled down, lost the power to fly.

Inability to fly has proved disastrous to some birds. The famed dodo once inhabited Mauritius. Man came and brought his dogs and cats. Lacking a way to escape them, the dodoes soon perished.

Veils Lifted.

16 Veils, which have alluringly concealed the beauty of some Albanian women for centuries, have been lifted. Although a stronghold of Mohammedanism, Albania, is also "going modern," so veils have been banned.

They first appeared in the Adriatic country in the fifteenth century, when Islam's hordes conquered Albania. Even at that time, veils had been used for ages by Moslem women.

The flimsy face coverings are part of the Mohammedan religion, yet religion isn't always the reason veils are worn. In the Sahara desert live the Tuaregs, the "People of the Veil." Both men and women swathe their faces as protection from sand.

Today brides have veils as a matter of course, but they really aren't necessary. You see, the ancient Greeks and Romans started that custom to protect brides from evil spirits.

Tremendous Trees.

17 New Zealanders are pridefully telling about a tree with a 55-foot circumference. It was found in the Waipon state forest near Dargaville. Although 55 feet is quite some size for a tree trunk, New Zealanders shouldn't crow too much about it. For right at home they've got a bigger trunk. The greatest living tree on the island is a kauri measuring 75 feet around.

For the tree with the largest trunk, however, we jump to our side of the world, to an old, old cypress in Oaxaca, Mexico. Also hailed as the world's oldest tree, "El Tule," shown in the drawing, is 175 feet around. Then, there's Gen. Grant, a California sequoia, measuring 126 feet around.

Fight on Lights.

18 The streets of Ashington, England, are lighter, but not the hearts of its womenfolk. The ladies are mournful because Ashington's new street lights, sodium vapor lamps make them appear blue-lipped and pale.

So they have entered a strong protest against the lights. That's quite different from the reception given England's first street lights. These were lit in London about 1738 and the man responsible was hailed as the "inventor of inventors."

It may have been a great thing in those days, but all Edward Hemming agreed to do was to place an oil lamp in front of every tenth house, keep it lit from 6 p. m. to midnight. At that, he didn't have to bother if there were a moon or if it were summer. And, of course, he got paid for it.

Examining Kwangsi

19 Kwangsi Province of China is going under the microscope. An expedition sponsored by the National Geographic Society and a Canton University leaves soon for the sparsely inhabited southern state.

The scientists are to study principally the plant and animal life of the province, and hope to run across many interesting things.

For instance, there is the "Lo Ho Kwoh," a mysterious plant. It is widely used as medicine in China and, though doctors have puzzled over it, they still don't know exactly what it is.

The customs of Kwangsi's people also are strange. The natives trap birds with nets. They fish at night, attract their prey with lights. A fish swims over to see what it's all about, and slides up a sloping plank right into a boat!

WINGS OF THE WORLD

The U. S. will have no part in the proposed transatlantic Lindbergh memorial race. Suggested by France, the race was originally scheduled for the tenth anniversary of "Lindy's" famous New York-Paris flight of May 20, 1927. It would have come just about the time the French International Exposition opened in Paris. Prize money would total 3,000,000 francs (about $150,000).

TRAGEDY HAS always followed such air races. When a take-off date is set in advance, the weather may turn out unfavorable. Planes may need minor repairs, but the fliers don't wait. Big prizes tempt incompetent and successful fliers alike. For such reasons, 10 people died in the Dole race to Hawaii and only two of the 16 planes entered reached Honolulu.

So, even with good fliers, good planes and good weather, accidents can happen. Sponsors proposed to make the Lindbergh race "safe." They changed the date to August, because May is a bad time to fly the Atlantic.

SPECIAL WEATHER reports would make the race "safer." How about 10 ships, stationed out in the Atlantic, to gather weather data for the pilots? But this idea soon died. To carry it out would cost more than the total prize money, it was learned.

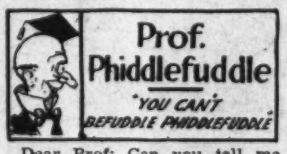
Lindbergh, the honoree, opposed the race. So did Dr. James H. Kimball, who has furnished weather data for all the important transatlantic flights.

Completing American opposition, the U. S. Department of Commerce recently announced the race cannot be started from this country. France can have it if she wishes, but we will have no part in what might result in tragedy.



Dear Prof: Can you tell me what electricity is?

KATHERINE JOHNSEN.

Richmond, Utah.

Knowing this is to be a subject of "current" interest, I became a "sidewalk reporter." I stopped passersby, asking them this question: "What is electricity and what is your reaction to it?" . . . Here are the answers—(1) A housewife: "Electricity is something which I couldn't go to the movies in the afternoon unless I had it in my stove and washing machine. I like electricity because I'm nerts about Robert Taylor." (2) A very tough character named Butch McGlutch: "Electricity is de stuff what makes de hot seat hot. I'm agin it! My reaction to it? Probably 'Ouch!'" (3) A society matron: "Electricity? Shocking!" (4) A politician: "They tell me electricity has a lot of volts. I'm gonna try to get 'em out for the right candidate!" (5) Our office boy: "Electricity has something to do with watts. Watts the difference, anyhow?" (6) A street car motorman: "I understand electricity has conductors. So what? I got one on my car and he ain't no bargain!"

Prof. Phiddlefuddle, Phoo. E.

P. S.—There's your cross-section, Katherine. I hope it doesn't make you cross . . . The rest of you get busy and try to electrify the prof. with your questions. Send 'em to Parade, care this newspaper.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

"The First Year," by Enid LaMonte Meadowcroft. $1.25. Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York City. Illustrated by Frank E. Phares.

What did the sons and daughters of the Pilgrims do after landing on Plymouth Rock in 1620? Plenty, "The First Year" says.

Arriving in Plymouth Harbor, they were welcomed by a volley of arrows from hostile Indians. On shore the boys cut logs and the girls sought out streams to wash the accumulation of soiled clothes from the voyage.

Then starvation beset the colony. The boys caught eels for supper by wading barefoot in the streams. When something squirmed under their feet, they fished it out.

After the first Thanksgiving dinner the boys and girls had stomach aches, just like boys and girls today.

They liked to have friendly Indians visit them, but not overnight. The Indians, it seems, always sang themselves to sleep!

"The First Year" is interesting reading, provided you like historical stories.

The Author—teaches in the Browning School in New York City, where she has lived most of her life. She is a direct descendant of Richard Warren, one of the Mayflower passengers, and author of another book, "Adventures of Peter Whiffen."

CALL of the WILD

One of the easiest birds to observe, and an interesting one, too, is the common barn owl. Look for him in hollow trees, holes in steep banks, church towers or even in ground burrows. On a farm, you may find him in a barn, his favorite home. Look at night, when he is active. Right now you can observe him feeding the young.

Feeding is the biggest event in a barn owl's life. If he can get it, he will eat more than his own weight in one night. As an experiment, an owl was given all the mice he could eat. He stopped after putting away nine, but three hours later ate four more.

About 18 inches long, the barn owl has a wing spread three times its length. Tawny white, his feathers are speckled with black. Notice his heart-shaped face. Most other owls have round faces. And those huge wings are a defense as well as a means of flight. When the owl spreads them angrily, he looks tough enough to scare away most enemies.

COMING SOON

"Think Fast, Mr. Moto."—This one, taken from the story by J. P. Marquand, is hailed as a new kind of detective mystery, introducing a brand-new super-super-sleuth to make the Chans, the Vances, the Bulldog Drummonds et al., look to their laurels . . . Peter Lorre, hitherto cast as a very sinister character indeed, creates the part of Mr. Moto . . . It's a Twentieth Century-Fox production.

What It's All About—What makes this a "new" sort of mystery is that you probably won't know exactly what it's all about until the smashing climax. (Why are climaxes always smashing?) . . . Up to then you know there's a guy aboard a Pacific liner with confidential papers which everyone, including Mr. Moto, is trying to get . . . You know there's a beautiful girl who boards the boat in Honolulu. You know the action shifts to Shanghai and gets more swift and mysterious . . . But to find out whether Mr. Moto is crook or detective, and just who kills who and why, you'll probably have to lay your dimes or quarters on the line.

Peter Lorre.

Star—Though just becoming well-known to American audiences, 33-year-old Peter Lorre has been a European favorite for years . . . Born in Rosenberg, Hungary, he was slated by his banker father for the more prosaic career of a banker . . . Instead he ran away from home at 17 to join a "little theater" . . . Later became character star on stage . . . His first movie, a German mystery called "M," made him a star almost over night . . . Made American debut in 1935, in "Mad Love."

PIGEONS

(Editor's Note: No, Parade hasn't given dogs the "go-by." The pups will be back in this column next week. But every other week they will give way to other popular pets. This week pigeons get the call. Watch for cats, tropical fish and rabbits—did we forget anyone's favorite? If there is sufficient demand, another pigeon column will appear within eight weeks. How about it, Paraders?)

Fluttering wings beat the air. A pigeon soars up, up, circles a few times, then starts a 600-mile flight. And he'll make it in one day, too! Yes, pigeons are flying that far these days, for it's mid-season for old-bird class racing.

RACES OF 600 MILES were impossible a few years ago. Rare was the pigeon that could fly 600 miles a day. Now a racing season seldom passes without a bird bettering such a performance. The American record is 9 hours 27 seconds for 600 miles. A distance mark was set when a homer flew more than 2,500 miles from Maine to Texas.

Of course, these marks were set in old-bird races, which cover anywhere from 400 to 1,000 miles as a rule. Young birds, those hatched the year of the racing, never race over 300 miles. But even that distance was unusual as recently as 40 years ago.

WHY THE PRESENT abundance of strong pigeons? Because pigeon breeding, long a popular hobby, is now a nation-wide craze. And breeders are raising racing birds for a new, fast growing sport. Two racing societies now have about 15,000 members and one sold a million leg rings last year alone.

Racing, inexpensive as well as fascinating, bids fair to "take hold" here as it did in Belgium. There it has been the national sport for 100 years.

STAMPS

WHAT'S THE most unusual bird you know? The booby bird, the kookaburra, or the quetzal? Yes, this is the Stamp Column and not Call of the Wild. You get the "bird" from the Stamp Column today because, to keep up with your collection, you should know something about birds, as well as emerald mining, coffee plantations, ships, hair dressing styles and other philatelic subjects.

"FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, what's that?" a curious friend may ask when looking through your Australian section. "That" looks like a kingfisher and is the kookaburra. It is protected by law in Australia, because it kills snakes and insects. So punctual is its dawn-and-dusk song (if you can call the utterances "song") that it has been nicknamed "the settlers' alarm clock." The song sounds like a giggle at times; at others it resembles a deep laugh.

Cayman Islands offers the booby bird on a George V stamp of 1935. The name was inspired by the bird's stupid habit of alighting on ships at sea and allowing itself to be caught. Sailors then had fresh meat for dinner. Illustrated with this column is a 1-penny carmine and ultramarine stamp showing the booby bird. The stamp sells for 4 cents, unused.

National emblem of Guatemala, the quetzal is supposed to represent freedom, because it will not live in captivity. The feathers on its throat and back are green; on its stomach, a brilliant red; and on its tail, black and white. Its tail feathers, incidentally, are three times as long as its body. The quetzal appears on many Guatemala stamps.

Buzzard's Roost

By Jack Lacey

Illustrated by Robert Pilgrim.

THIS IS a story of the shaggy Tennessee tobacco country; of law and lawlessness in the hills; of a 17-year country boy who braves hardship and battles clan feeling to save his family from death for a crime they have not committed.

GIRLS, as well as boys, will go for this five-part serial, we believe. We consider it too good to pass up, despite the recent howl of Readeresses for a story of their own. Read it, Readeresses, and let us have your verdict. And the next story will be yours. We promise.

THE AUTHOR, a newspaperman, has had other stories in Parade.

Installment I.

JED MARTIN plumped himself down on a log. He snapped open his jackknife, nervously whetting it on the sole of his muddy boot; scuffed one foot in the soft, red clay, tracing aimless designs; twiddled his glasses, catching the sun's rays with the thick lenses and focusing them on his arm until the spot glowed with warmth.

Anything to do. Anything to make him forget the sight of the body of the murdered Fenton Sykes.

It was not easy for a 17-year-old, seeing a murdered man for the first time. And it had been less than six hours before that he, his father and older brother, Abel, had stumbled upon the corpse of their neighbor.

The heat was oppressive. Buzzards floated and turned languidly in the copper-colored sky. Perhaps if he could talk to his father it would soothe his jangled nerves. He ventured a question.

"Pap, who'da you think kilt Fenton Sykes?"

Lem Martin received the question with no apparent change in his immobile, leathery features. He squatted on a split-bottom chair that had been strung with bailing wire to hold it together. Slowly he raised his head, casting his eyes about the small clearing. Boy and man sat in front of the mud-chinked log cabin which they referred to as "our shanty."

* * * *

"AIN'T got the slightest idea, son," Lem drawled in the peculiar, cracked twang of the Tennessee tobacco country. "Mighta been a spite killin', and then again, it mighta been for his money. Folks says Fenton Sykes had a sight o' money for these here parts."

Jed's eyes snapped. Lem Martin had spoken a whole sentence. And Lem was a man of less than few words. The murder of Fenton Sykes had unnerved him, too.

Jed pursued his question: "But it ain't money, paw. No one's goin' to kill a man in his field when the money's in the house or in the bank." Jed paused to let his point sink in. "Then," he concluded, "it musta been spite."

"I couldn't be a-sayin'." Lem replied noncommittally, gouging deeper the hole he had ripped in the earth with a sharpened switch.

"An' if hit's spite, paw," Jed persisted, "who could hit a-been? I couldn't think o' nobody with a spite for Fenton Sykes—unless—unless hit'd be us Martins."

The boy's words struck home. The father's mask-like features seemed to twitch. Finally, he lifted his faded blue eyes to the stringy-haired youth across from him.

"I can't think o' nobody else, neither, lad," he said—hesitantly, it seemed to Jed.

* * * *

THIS cryptic admission explained a multitude of points for Jed.

So that was why his father had insisted on getting away from the secluded spot where Fenton Sykes' body sprawled? So that was why he had refused to let him summon Sheriff Weaks? Yes. The finger of suspicion pointed toward the Martins—and the Martins only. There had long been "bad blood" between the neighbors.

Where the trouble arose, Jed did not know. It antedated his birth.

He remembered talk of "night riders" and "tobacco associations" and ill feeling between the clans. His father talked vaguely about it, or not at all.

Jed knew only that when Sam Sykes, Fenton's nephew, or Tal Sykes, a distant relative, were around, his father had even less than usual to say. And they never shook hands, talked about the weather, crops, or 'lections, as with others.

The trouble had flared up again last spring—right after the big, red floods had gouged out the river bottoms and swept away the rail fence down in the hollow, between the Martin and Sykes cornfields. Fenton Sykes had put up a new fence and taken in about a quarter of an acre of the Martin's land.

Jed Dropped to His Knees and Made His Way to the Summit on All Fours.

The water had washed away all boundary traces, and to take the case to court would have cost Lem Martin more than the land was worth. But the injustice rankled.

But what really bothered Jed was the trouble of the night before—again over the fences. This time Fenton had complained about the Martin hogs which, he said, had burrowed under the fence and uprooted his young corn.

Jed had listened breathlessly in the shadow of a grove of stripling oak after Fenton had hailed his father to the fence. He had heard Fenton's rasping voice, "An' mind you again, Lem Martin, if there's any more of them hogs o' yourn a-rootin' around my cornfields, I aim to have sausage for breakfast! D'ye git me?"

Jed's father had answered in a strained, angry voice: "Shoot one of my hogs, Fenton Sykes, an' ye'll have buckshot with your sausage. Mind you."

* * * *

IN the light of the day's tragedy, these threats of the night before assumed a new significance. Naturally the Sykes would suspect the Martins. By even so much as reporting "discovery" of the body, the Martins would be linked with the death. Justice was sometimes based upon circumstances and passion, rather than law in the hill country. The feeling of kin for kin ran strong. That was what Lem Martin feared, in his stoical, noncommittal manner.

Jed stood up, adjusted his spectacles and shambled off silently. His course lay down through the woods lot and along the field where new tobacco plants paraded in mathematical precision, row on row and hill on hill.

Surely, Matilda Sykes, Fenton's daughter-in-law, had missed Fenton at dinner time. Surely, she had spread the alarm by this hour. It was already past 3 o'clock. Jed would find out. Waiting was slow torture. He could view the scene from the ragged underbrush of the hilltop overlooking the death valley.

He passed alongside the fence. Soon he came upon the tracks left by his father, brother and himself that morning. He followed them for 100 feet and then swerved away to the right toward his lookout. As he walked his mind reviewed the events of the morning.

* * * *

IT had been one of those spacious spring mornings when time lags pleasantly and peace is too complete to last. Jed had been hitching Molly, the mule, to the plow, when a shot shattered the quiet. The report bounded along the hollows and re-echoed sharply from the limestone bluffs across the river. The shot was close, from over on the Sykes place.

Fenton Sykes had shot one of their hogs! That was Jed's first thought.

His father had come out of the stable, a file in one hand and a hoe in the other. Then he ran back and soon returned with a Winchester under his arm. Abel was with him.

Silently the three had crossed the field in the direction of the shot, climbed the fence and pushed on toward the river. Abel, the image of his father, had spoken the only words.

"If that was Fenton Sykes shootin' at our shoats, we needn't have no cause to worry. With them horn-rimmed spectacles o' his on, he can't hit the side of a barn 'less he's in it."

The three had followed the line of the fence between the farms, crossed over and proceeded to the top of a knoll.

There Lem Martin had stopped short. In the valley below lay the body of Fenton Sykes.

* * * *

THERE was his gun, an ancient fowling piece with murky brass mountings, pointing directly at the lifeless body. It had just been fired. There was a freshly exploded cap under the hammer.

It was Fenton Sykes' own gun. In other days, when the Martins had been at least on speaking terms with the Sykes, Fenton had laughed at suggestions that he buy a new gun. Shotguns were standard "furniture" out there in the hills.

"Why should I be a-gittin' a new-fangled rifle, I ask ye?" he would roar. "This here old relic was good 'nuff for my grandpappy to shoot Indians with, and good 'nuff for my pappy to shoot Yankees with—I guess it's good 'nuff for me to shoot skunks and crows." With that he would throw back his massive, shaggy head and laugh until his gold-capped, stained molars seemed to reach out to bite you.

* * * *

PERCHED on a log, and within arm's length of the lifeless figure were the dead man's spectacles. They were enormously strong, with convex lenses hollowed out like a mussel shell. They were another of Fenton Sykes' peculiar personal effects. They were grotesque in themselves; and even more grotesque on Fenton Sykes. From Jed's toddling days he had dreaded those glasses and the monstrous eyes that peered through them. They magnified Fenton's eyes to the size of a cow's.

The gun, the glasses—and the body with a jagged hole in the blue overall coat where the blood streamed out. It had been 10 till 9 by Jed's dollar Ingersoll. The sun, though long risen, was just peering over the steep knoll that arose to Fenton's back, drenching the scene with its rays. Fenton had been waiting for sight of a Martin hog—and, apparently in his sleep, he had been murdered. No footprints could be found except their own.

Jed was so absorbed in reconstructing the morning's happenings that he was surprised to find himself almost at the top of the hill. He was approaching the last rise which would give him a panoramic view of the death scene. He must be careful to conceal himself. He dropped to his knees in the sassafras scrub, made his way to the summit on all fours.

'How I Make Money'

By James Dannaher

Editor's Note: Every boy and girl wants to make money—for school, hobbies and many another need. Parade here presents another in a series of articles on "How I Make Money," in which Paraders themselves tell how they do it. Others will follow in this space every week. By reading this column you may get a profitable money-making idea. And remember: These articles are not based on theory and advice, but on the everyday experience of boys and girls who are actually earning their way.

I am earning money in spare time for two reasons. Of course, I can use the money. But, chiefly, I am gaining experience for my career.

James Dannaher.

You see, I want to be a newspaperman. When I finish high school, I cannot afford college. So I am working for a weekly newspaper here in East Hartford, Conn., where I live, at 35 Adams street.

Two years ago—I was 16 then—I went into the newspaper office and asked if I could contribute short items. The editor agreed and I began covering my high school sports. In my excitement I forgot to ask for a press pass and had to pay to see the first game.

Many Headaches.

For months I traveled around following the school teams. Then I thought of writing a sports column. My idea was to play up local names in sports. I believed it would help circulation because everybody likes to see his name in print. And it did!

With the fun of writing the column there were many headaches. I can recall sitting at a typewriter, the deadline drawing on and not a thought in my head. But I always made it.

Drama? I'll say! For example, during last year's flood here the power was cut off just as we were about to go to press. The paper hadn't missed an issue since 1850. My editor traveled 8 miles to Rockville, borrowed the use of a plant and the paper got out the next day.

Yes, I'm getting fun and experience as well as money out of my work.

LETTERS

Spies?

Parade: One thing I think should be discussed in Parade is the spy situation in America. When the country's best-fighting plane disappears it is time for the public to wake up and demand that the Government do something about it. The plane I am talking about cost about $100,000 to build. It started on its trial flight and neither pilot nor plane was ever seen again. The G-men, the Army and Navy intelligence service lay the blame on foreign spies. Parade could do the country a great service by getting the youth of the Nation aroused to the fact that these spies are a threat to America's freedom. It should be the duty of any boy or girl to report anyone acting suspiciously around a military or naval base.

BOB OWEN.
234 White street,
Hartford, Conn.

It was nearly two years ago that an Army super-pursuit plane and pilot disappeared, presumably in the Pacific Ocean. No official charge has ever been made that spies were the cause of its vanishing. Also, authorities on espionage say the first thing taught an honest-to-goodness spy is not to act suspiciously.—Ed.

The Fight Is On!

Parade: If Willy Burr doesn't like the Help! Help! column he knows what he can do about it, doesn't he? I notice he doesn't suggest anything better. Besides, he is not the only one who reads Parade. Other people like it. And another thing: it's not the girls' fault that the boys don't have enough "get up and go" to give the girls some competition in the Letters Column.

MARION LEE.
West Point, Va.
P. S.: I wish Reader Burr would stop contradicting himself.

Parade: As for what Readeress Bisbee says about the word Readeress not being in the dictionary, I bet she uses a lot of other words that aren't in the dictionary. I would rather be called a Readeress because I like to be set apart from the boy Readers. I agree with Reader Jarratt C. Neale that Readeress surely should be added to the dictionary.

REBECCA BECKHAM.
High Rock, N. C.

Parade: I must heartily disagree with Reader Jarratt C. Neale. Also, I feel Readeress (note the stress on Readeress) E. Miriam Bisbee was doing no one a great favor by stating the word Readeress is not in the dictionary. It was entirely unnecessary, as we have many words on which the "ess" is added. Another Parader asked why we should try to stop the incorrect use of words, anyway. This is wrong. If we are not corrected, what would our English be like today?

Getting back to Reader Neale (I seem to have left him out in the cold), I wish to state it was entirely uncalled for to insinuate the way he did about Readeress Bisbee. He disgusted me and he needn't think it was smart. Never mind, Reader Neale, don't take it too hard, but next time you and Readeress Bisbee might very graciously withdraw and wait until some bright thought comes along that might be used to help along Parade.

BARBARA CRUSBERG.
417 Ellis street,
New Britain, Conn.
Reader Neale had attacked Readeress Bisbee for criticism of Parade's use of the word Readeress.—Ed.

Sit-down or Knock-down?

Parade: I think Paraders should go on a sit-down strike before picking on one another in the Letters Column. I'm going on one after this letter is printed. Now I am going to pick on Reader Neale, of Lanesville, Va. I wonder if he wrote that letter by himself. He said he was no judge, and he isn't. Why didn't he give his address? I would enjoy sending him a personal letter. I'm not afraid of sending in my address. I feel much better now and I'm going on a sit-down strike before letting off more steam. There isn't much fun quarreling with one another. The one thing for everyone to do is to go on a sit-down strike like me. LORRAINE BAKER.
935 West Popular street.
Stockton, Calif.
Readeress Baker stands corrected on one point. Reader Neale did give his address. Lanesville, Va.—that's all there is to it. No longer are letters used where complete addresses and real names are omitted.—Ed.

Poll of Parade Opinion.

Parade: To settle the various arguments about Parade why not have a Parade voting poll? Any Parader or his friends could send in a vote by letter or postcard. The poll could also be used to find out what the youth of today thinks about all sorts of questions—political and otherwise. The Editor would select questions from those submitted by Paraders themselves.

KENNETH R. BURROUGHS.
Route 1, Hopewell, N. J.

Parade: I have the suggestion to end all suggestions about Parade features. Why not print a list of the features and let Paraders vote on continuing or omitting each one?

WILMA J. LAMBERT.
Leesburg, Va.

Dogs and Pets.

Parade: I have a puppy about four months old and am naturally interested in the Dog Column. Incidentally, he has "dew claws."

ELIZABETH A. WRIGHT.
31 Prescott street,
Nashua, N. H.
According to a recent Dog Column, many pups have extra or "dew" claws.—Ed.

Parade: What about a column in which Paraders may write about their pets?

MARY JANE CHASE.
4501 Walsh street,
Chevy Chase, Md.
The Dog Column is being expanded to cover the more common pets. See this week's article on pigeons, Page 6.—Ed.

"If I Were Ed."

Parade: If I were editing Parade here's what I would do: Leave Page 1 as is. Keep all Newsfacts. Keep on "I Aim to Be——," one of the best things in the paper. Leave 'Round the World alone. I'd wonder if many were interested in Stamps, Coming Soon, Book of the Week, on page 6.

ELAINE STREETER.
98 Stewart street, Bristol, Conn.

Respect for Age.

Parade: Paraders who write in should state their age. Others would like to correspond with them and know whether they are near their ages. I am 11. JACK AYER.
North Franklin, Conn.

No Nanny Goat.

Parade. Three cheers for Travis Jordan! The best sport I've ever heard of. I would give a plugged nickel to anyone who took what he did without going into a rage. I think the picture in the serial story could be omitted without any disturbances. Don't take me as a hard-boiled "ole nanny goat," which I'm not. I only told you what I thought.

JANE BOYTE.
445 Beaumont avenue,
Charlotte, N. C.

Question of Content.

Parade: My family and I read all of Parade. I save all back issues because there is much valuable material I may need. The 'Round the World pages are very interesting. Please don't take them out.

MARY EISEMAN.
4600 Stanford street,
Chevy Chase, Md.

Parade: I don't care for the Newsfacts. They are very dry and should be cut out. A. B. SPEARS.
1501 S. American street,
Stockton, Calif.

This Girls' Serial.

Parade: If Readeresses Margaret Carroll and Marie Luker want a Home Ec. corner cure them by telling them to turn tomboys. If anything has to be changed give us more letters, and, for gracious sakes, a girls' serial once, please.

MARTHA ANNE CARTER.
3200 Enslow avenue,
Richmond, Va.
A girl serial is definitely promised after "Buzzard's Roost," the new serial beginning this issue on Page 7.—Ed.

Famed English Jockey at 16

Bruce Hobbs, Jr.—American Born Prefers American Horses.

Bruce Hobbs From Family Of Horsemen

Family tradition—a tradition of fine horsemen—rides to fame with a 16-year-old English jockey.

Though he has been racing only since last December, Bruce Hobbs, jr., already has ridden in more than 100 races, including the famed Grand National. He has won 24 races and fame as a steeplechase rider.

Son of Man o' War.

"Bruce rode as soon as he walked," writes the boy's father from Ronehurst, Lambourn, Berkshire. "Good horsemanship has been bred in our family for generations. We have won a reputation both in the show ring and in fox hunting."

Bruce's father was no slouch as a horseman, either. He was known even in America, for he once lived in Long Island, N. Y. Incidentally, it was there Bruce was born. That may explain Bruce's liking for American-owned horses.

"One of his favorites is Battleship, American-bred son of the famed Man o' War," continues Mr. Hobbs. "He won four steeplechases on Battleship. On Cakewalker, another American-bred horse, he won four others.

Youngest to Win 10.

"He rode Flying Minutes, also American, in the Grand National. In that race he was running second when Flying Minutes fell, just four fences from the finish.

"Bruce is the youngest jockey ever to have won 10 races under national meet rules. Recently he became the youngest to win all three races in which he was entered in one day.

"He will ride professionally as long as his weight will permit. I regret to say that will be just a very few years unless he resorts to fasting. Already he is very tall for his age and wears size 10½ C shoes."

Newsfacts—Bruce need not feel badly about his spill at the Grand National. Countless horses have fallen in that classic of steeplechases since it was first run in 1839. * * Oddly, though hundreds of horses have been fatally hurt in spills, only one jockey has been killed. But others suffered everything from bruises to broken necks. * * So tough is the course—Aintree Course, Liverpool—that odds are five to one against any horse finishing. Only once in a period of 15 years did half the starters finish.

AT THE AGE of 9 Bob Feller, boy wonder pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, could hurl a ball 275 feet. Just try it, whether you're 9 or 90!

108 Strikeouts in 8 Games

Big league baseball scouts, take notice! You might have a look at 19-year-old Milton Mason, a pitcher.

Milton may, or may not be another Bob Feller. Anyhow, he piled up a swell record with the Clarksville (Va.) High School Nine. Behind his southpaw flinging, Clarksville breezed to the county championship. And in eight games, Milton struck out 108 men—an average of more than 13 per game!

He pitched all the school's games, winning six out of eight. And, unlike most pitchers, he batted a nifty .612. Before he was graduated this spring, he won eight athletic letters.

"My interest in baseball was inherited," he tells Parade. "My entire family loved the game."

Newsfacts—Milton's record looks even better when you consider major league pitchers seldom average more than two or three strikeouts per game. * * The single game strike-out record for modern times is 17, held jointly by Bob Feller and Dizzy Dean.

Fun Corner

Room and Bored.

The elderly colonel was entertaining (?) his fellow lodgers with tales of personal adventure. "And then," he said, "a huge lion crept up upon me. He was so close I could feel his hot breath on my neck! Then what do you suppose I did?"

The little man in the corner piped up in a bored tone, "Turned up your collar?" he asked.

Hee-Haw.

Mama loves Papa, and vice versa, but every once in a while they have words. This one Sunday they had a swell scrap while motoring. So Papa indicated a braying donkey in a field and asked pointedly, "Is that a relative of yours?"

Mama smiled sweetly. "Only by marriage, darling," she cooed.

Somewhere in the South?

The editor was interviewing a pretty young girl parachute jumper. "Where'd you land on your first jump?" he asked.

The young lady stiffened indignantly. "That," she said, "is none of your business!"

For Better or Verse.

"Let down the sable shade of night, And hide this sad world from my sight," quoted the teacher rapturously. Then she asked: "Can anyone express this poetical idea in prose?"

A bored voice piped up. "Pull down th' blind!" it said.

Or Butter-flies?

Ida Knowe, our bright (?) little file clerk, bobs up with a pertinent question. "Do farmers," she wonders, "feed their cows on milkweed?"

Weakly Geography Lesson.

*Now, boys and girls, you know the name of Egypt's greatest river is the Nile. * * But we shall have to take under advisement that question of Egbert's. * * Egbert wants to know if the Nile's tributaries are called "the Juveniles!"*

Tufftown Tales.

"By th' eternal, Sairy," says Tolliver, 'tother day as they sot in th' cabin, "Ah sho miss thet ol' cuspidor!"

"Yo allus did miss hit," says Sairy. "Thet's why hit's gone!"

With Running Gravy?

Dot Tomlinson, 221 Kelly street, Statesville, N. C., is responsible for the one about the newly-married gal who shyly approached the butcher counter.

"I'd like a pound of that track meat I heard so much about this spring," she said.

Sportsman!

Our dog editor, an animal lover as well as an adventurous guy, was in the station at Chicago not long ago buying a ticket to New York.

"Do you want to go by Buffalo?" asked the agent.

The dog editor hesitated. "Well," he said finally, "I'll try it. Put a saddle on the critter!"

Accident or Murder?

2 ". . . SO YOUR STORY is that your wife, a known sleep-walker, walked to the wall in her sleep last night and fell on that sharp rock," Fordney said. "Bert Marr, you murdered her!"

3 "No, I'll give you the picture of what happened," Fordney continued to Marr. "Your lovely little daughter, Cynthia, told me that at breakfast yesterday morning, you pleaded with your wealthy wife to assist you financially. You told her you were ruined unless she did. She refused because of your brazen philandering. You left the house in a rage.

4 (left) "I ALSO LEARNED that Berger, to whom you are heavily in debt, came to your office demanding payment of one of his overdue notes which you were unable to meet.

1 PROF. FORDNEY had "the picture." Ruth Marr, clad only in silk nightgown, negligee and sheer silk stockings, her head resting on a jagged rock, lay dead on a narrow walk beneath a high stone wall, which bordered a stream. Thoughtfully he climbed the steps leading from the ledge and walked up the path to the house.

5 AFTER YOU PHONED you wouldn't be home until late last night, Mrs. Marr prepared for bed, lay down on the sofa to wait for you and fell asleep, as you found her.

6 "CYNTHIA TOLD ME this morning that 'her mummie' frequently walked in her sleep. Also that she had decided to give you money—that's why she waited up. Ironic, isn't it?

7 "BUT YOU DIDN'T know that . . . When you returned alone she was asleep. You obtained a rock and struck your sleeping wife in the head—being careful about blood. Now all her money was yours. 'Fake a sleep-walking accident,' you decided. 'Toss her over the wall.'

8 "SO YOU CARRIED HER BODY 100 yards down the steep gravel path; a bit difficult, but the only way there was to the brook. The only marks on her clothing—the tears in her nightgown and negligee, and in her right stocking, just below the knee—you made.

9 "THIS MORNING you notified the police you found her; that she must have walked in her sleep. You explained you occupied separate rooms so you didn't hear her leave the house, but you overlooked the one, single clew that brands you, Marr, as your wife's murderer."

SUNSET FROM "ON TOP." This unusual photograph as taken by Capt. Richard Hanson, T. W. A. pilot, during a recent scheduled flight over the coast-to-coast route. Made while flying at a 6,000-foot altitude, this picture illustrates the meaning of the term "on top," because, stretching for miles in every direction, was the top of a solid cloud blanket which meant overcast conditions on the ground. White spot above setting sun is reflection from lens of camera used by Capt. Hanson.

Britain Makes Some Big Guns

MOLTEN STEEL
for the 14-inch naval and coastal defense guns that are made at Sheffield steel mills. Workers wearing colored glasses inspect the white hot metal used for the long rifles and armor plate. In photo below, a 10-ton ingot is being skillfully balanced on a lifting crane while being transferred from furnace to forge.

BORE.
Worker speaking to his mate seen at the other end of this 60-foot gun. The slightest whisper is distinctly audible. Huge forges are busy night and day at the Sheffield mills where the giant guns and armor plate are being rushed to complete Britain's newest navy and coastal defense program.

TEMPERING.
A 14-inch gun is being heated in the vertical gas-filled furnace at left. Next, the massive weapon will be cooled in an oil bath to temper the metal.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

An annual custom of sorority societies at the University of Arizona is the tossing of graduating seniors into the fish pond as commencement time approaches. FORAGING FOR FOOD.

Rocky Mountain grizzly bears at Yellowstone National Park. A nightly bear show is staged at the bear feeding grounds near Yellowstone Canyon where rangers have finally succeeded in enticing grizzlies to come for food left on a concrete platform.

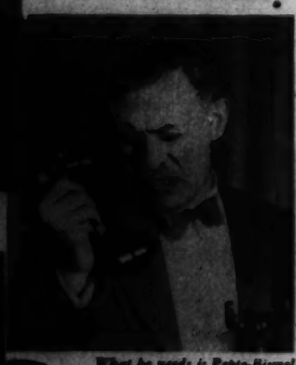
Accident or Murder?

Had Mrs. Marr walked the hundred yards down the steep, gravel path from the house to the spring where she was found (the only means of getting there) the soles of her sheer stockings would have shown evidence of that walk. Yet the only marks on her clothing were the tears in her nightgown and negligee and the tear below the knee in one stocking—which Marr was careful to make. But he completely forgot the soles of her stockings. Confronted with his stupid oversight, he confessed.

He's a Gulper

... no wonder his stomach is out of order!

He eats his paper, reads his meals, bolts his food and gulps his drink. No wonder his stomach often feels over-full, sickish, sour, and upset.



What he needs is Pepto-Bismal and an ABC lesson about his stomach. Here is it:

Note the picture of the stomach and intestine. When your stomach is out of order and you overdose with drastic, irritating physics and purges you add to the trouble ... and extend the raging battle through 28 feet of irritated intestines. Don't upset an upset stomach—calm it, soothe it, quiet it ... with Pepto-Bismol.

Pepto-Bismol has been tested by more than 35 years of medical, hospital and dispensary experience in the relief of indigestion due to overindulgence in food or drink, hasty eating, nervous excitement and improperly prepared or selected food.

It contains Pepsin—the well-known aid to protein digestion. It contains Bismuth, the great soother of irritated intestines.

Pepto-Bismol soothes, calms, quiets the stomach—does not agitate it. And its taste is as pleasant as its action is mild. 50¢ at all druggists. In the distinctive three-cornered Norwich bottle. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N. Y., makers of Unguentine.

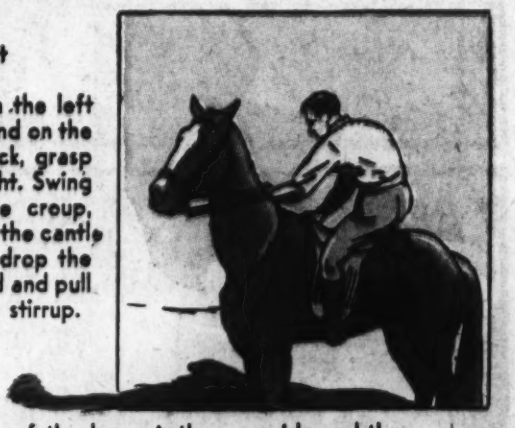
Mounting and Dismounting

The Mount

Reins in the left hand, steady the stirrup with the right hand and place the left foot part way in it. Grasp the cantle of the saddle with the right hand. Raise yourself to an erect position, swing the right leg over the croup, shift the right hand to the pommel and seat yourself easily.

The Dismount

Shorten the reins in the left hand. Place the left hand on the crest of the horse's neck, grasp the pommel with the right. Swing the right leg over the croup, move the right hand to the cantle to hold your balance, drop the right foot to the ground and pull the left foot from the stirrup.



The left side of the horse is the near side and the right side is the off side, always.
